These gentlemen will put on a demoustration next Saturday afternoon, January 5th. Everybody invited.

More than a half million pounds of Sodatol, war salvage explosive made available to American farmers for agrricultural blasting work last summer, has been placed in Michigan during the year, according to figures released by L. F. Livingston, land clearing specialist with the M. A. C. extension division who has been in charge of Sodatol distribution for the state. Ten Upper Peninsula counties took 201,000 pounds of Sodatol while 20 counties in the lower part of the state ordered 329,000 pounds, giving a total of 530,000.

Walter H. French formerly superintendent of the North Adams schools died at his home in Lansing Tuesday from the effects of a stroke of paralysis which occurred Monday eveniug just after an address before a gatherihg of Masons holding a banquet. Mr. French had just closed his address with these words "I wish I could fall asleep and wake up when this is completed." A few minutes afterward he lapsed into unconsciousness from which he never rallied. He was 62 years of age and had spent many years in educational work, having been assistant superintendent of public instruction under Hon Delos Fall, also commissioner of schools in Hillsdale county. He has been very prominent in Masonry all his life. Funeral services were conducted Thursday from the Central Methodist Temple under the auspices of the Knights Templar. He is survived by the wife, one son, Dr. French of Philadelphia and a sister, Mrs. Pullen of Mt. Pleasant.

Gifts received at the library last week were a number of books and magazines from Julia Barker Moore of Detroit, several books from the W. S. Sayles home and a book from Mrs. Edna Hewitt, all of which are very much appreciated. There are about 725 books in the library to date and some more late books will be ordered this week. With some money in the treasury, and no debts, and all work freely given, quite a bit of pride may be felt for what, with your help, may prove to be a valuable asset to our village.

Ku Klux Are in Need of Cleansing

The Hillsdale Daily, date of January 2, states in words to the affect that Imperial Giant E. Y. Clarke of the Klan is quite uneasy about the personnel of the Society and he has issued a national call to meet in Atlanta, Georgia to prayerfully consider ways and means of eliminating the existing eyils of the order which he claims have assumsd such proportions that the tail wags the dog. In other words Clarke wants to separate the plum-grabbing,wire pulling, lawless element from the main body; failing iu amputating the tail behind the ears he would kill the entire dog.

Poet From Somerset Pleases Rotarians

Rotarians were delighted Wednesday noon with poems read by the composing poet and lecturer, McClain Ossmar, of Somerset, Mich. Among those read were "The Road to Hell and Back," "The Hillsdale County Fair," "Life" and "The Man I Might Have Been." Mr. Ossmar gave a eulogy of James Whitcomb Riley and some of his poems.

Benjamin C. Brown of New Orleans, director of International Rotary, will be the speaker next Wednesday and many Rotarians from many of the nearby cities are expected to attend.—Jackson News.

Farmers Form Protection League

Farmers in Moscow Township realizing the need of an efficient means to combat fire hazards have installed Pioneer fire Extinguishers With our telephones, good roads and automobiles it will not take long for these men to get to the scene of a fire with their extinguishers. Chemicsls are ten times faster than water. This means does away with the old bucket brigade which at its best was very inefficient. Mr Watkins sec'y of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co of Hillsdale, highly approves of this protection as it solves an intelligent means to combat fires. Other townships in Hillsdale County are expected to follow the plans of Moscow township, thus automatically forming a Fire Protecting League. To these men we give our congratulations. NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

Of Interest to Road Men

From the fourteenth to the eighteenth of January there will be held in Chicago, the greatest exhibition of road machinery, materials, and methods ever staged in the history of road making.

It is difficult to estimate the importance of such a great exposition, either from the standpoints of the road builder or the road buyer. The intimate contact thus made possible between maker of machinery and maker of material can not but aid both to do better work. The bringing together of so many different ways of road making must be of incalculable value to the road buyer, the county and state engineer, the road supervisor and the taxpayer.

But perhaps the greatest benefit from this mutual contact of the forces which are behind the good road, is in the laying before the country, the magnitude of the effort involved and showing forth to the world what progress has been made in the hard surface highway idea.

Twenty years ago, before the automobile was more than a toy, the road idea was dead. "We didn't need roads. The roads we had were good enough. To spend money for roads was foolish. The railroads gave all the transportation necessary. Roads were merely an expense, a luxury, not an asset!" Such arguments were common. There were no road builders, there was no road building industry. Today there are thousands of engineers, hundreds of firms making hard road building machinery and products for hard road making, and there is not a state uninterested in modern highways, not a county which isn't talking good roads, not a farmer who does not realize the need of them

This great road exposition is a reflection of the times, and the sentiment which is behind roads; hard roads, the sort of roads which minimize the hauling cost and give the maximum of speed and intercommunication.

W. N. U., DETROIT, NO. 1—1924.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Lansing—A brother and sister who lived together in Lansing for nearly 60 years, died here recently, within a few hours of each other.

Saginaw—George W. Stone, 76 years old, a resident of this city 60 years and employed by the Saginaw Milling company 40 years died here recently.

Alpena—It is estimated by D. & M. railroad officials here that about 1,200 Detroiters, former Alpena residents, spent Christmas in this city, at least half of them coming for two days only.

Detroit—Twelve years the junior of Abraham Lincoln, and one year the senior of Ulysses S. Grant, William Stocks, aged 102, believed to have been the oldest resident of Detroit, died at his home here Christmas day.

Albion—Henry H. Hart, 68 years old, Albion pioneer, who played a prominent part in the affairs of Albion when it changed from a village to a city, died here recently. He came here in 1875 and had resided here continuously ever since.

Comstock—Stricken with heart trouble in sight of the home at which he was to have taken Christmas dinner with other members of the family, James L. Holmes, 68 years old, a resident of Alamo for more than 50 years, dropped dead in an automobile last week.

Menominee—Hurrying to complete his work so he could spend Christmas at his home here, Joseph Ducharme, 35 years old, fell from a load of logs at a logging camp near Pentoga, Mich., and was crushed to death as the logs rolled over his body. He was a veteran of the World War.

Battle Creek—Mr. and Mrs. Lycurgus McCoy celebrated their 68th wedding anniversary recently at their home here. They were wed in Keokuk county, Iowa, and came to Battle Creek 44 years ago. McCoy served as a soldier in the Civil war and was with Sherman on his famed march to the sea.

Muskegon—Final plans for the first gold medal poultry show ever held in Michigan, to be conducted here in the early part of January, were completed at a meeting of the Muskegon Poultry association. The show will be featured by presentation of gold medals to the winners by the National Poultry association.

Shelby—The orchards of Oceana County, one of the richest fruit-growing sections of the state, are being restocked. A larger fall setting of fruit trees is reported than ever before. This has been due partly to the mild weather which has made late planting possible, and also because of the increased profits from orchards.

Kalamazoo—Jasper J. Campbell, former county clerk and prominent resident of Kalamazoo, died here last week. Campbell was known throughout the state as an authority upon agricultural matters. He was master of Kalamazoo Palmona grange, secretary of the Kalamazoo county farm bureau, president of the Robert Burns society and interested in other activities.

Grand Haven—The level of Grand River in the Grand Haven Harbor has dropped three feet below normal, causing shipping much annoyance. The entrance to the harbor by the car ferries and the Goodrich steamer Alabama now is made with considerable difficulty and danger. The Alabama on one occasion during the last week was unable to make the harbor.

Oscoda—Eco Sylv Belle Pietje, a pure-bred four-year-old Holstein cow, owned by Carl E. Schmidt, local farmer, is attracting nation-wide attention by a remarkable production of milk and butter fat. Under constant watch of four supervisors the cow has produced 686.2 pounds of milk containing 33.014 pounds of fat in seven consecutive days with the test still in progress. This fat production is equivalent to 41.267 pounds of butter.

Lansing—Licenses for 724,352 motor vehicles were issued by the Department of State in the calendar year of 1923, according to a report completed here recently. Complete figures regarding the revenue to the State are not yet available, but it will total around $10,000,000, of which half goes to the State and half to the counties for highway work. The 1923 figures include passenger commercial and trailer vehicles. On the basis of the 1920 population of 3,668,412, there is approximately one motor vehicle for every five persons.

Lansing—Five hundred and forty miles of highways were completed by the State Highway Department in the calendar year of 1923, according to a tentative report prepared. Of the total 222.8 miles were paved. The rest included gravel, and some stretches where single courses of gravel were laid to open the road until it can be paved. Approximately 25 miles of pavement were laid by the State prison labor, on the Dixie Highway in Genessee county, M 16 between New Hudson and Farmington and the Galesburg-Camp Custer project.

Lansing—Christmas presents in the form of drivers' license suspensions were handed to 24 Michigan motorists last week by the secretary of state.

Hart—Four hundred and sixty-four carloads of fruit have been shipped from this station so far this season and more than 1,200 cars have left Oceana County.

Detroit—Twenty-two young deacons were ordained priests of the Roman Catholic church by Bishop Michael J. Gallagher in the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul here last week.

Detroit—The state of Michigan leads all the rest in the number of miles of roads and highways surfaced during the past year, according to officials of the Bureau of Good Roads of the department of agriculture.

Lansing—The State Public Utilities Commission has put into effect its ruling that the operation of common carrier motor vehicles, upon which the insurance to protect passengers and freight has lapsed, will be halted.

Big Rapids—There is no statute under which suit for damages can be instituted for injuries received as a result of state employe's negligence on trunk line highways, it was decided recently by Judge Joseph Barton in circuit court here.

Lansing—Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck named four Detroiters as delegates to the National Illiteracy Conference, in Washington, Jan. 11 to 14. They are: Frank Cody, superintendent of the Detroit public schools; Miss Nina Begliner, Samuel G. Mumford and Allan Campbell.

Muskegon—June 16 and 17 are the tentative dates set for the annual convention of the Michigan branch of the National League of District Postmasters, to be held in Muskegon. The organization is composed of third and fourth class postmasters, of whom there are more than 1,200 in the state.

Bay City—Charles [illegible] White, who started delivering mail on May 22, 1889 has walked nearly 145,000 miles—over half the distance from the earth to the moon—in the performance of his duties. His average daily hike was 14 miles until a couple of years ago when he became unable to maintain that pace.

Ann Arbor—A school of business administration, offering a two-year professional course to students who have had three years' work in the literary college, with Professor Edmund E. Day, present head of the department of economics as dean of the school, has been established by the board of regents of the University of Michigan.

Lansing—The appointment of five members of the State Board of Registration in Medicine for the term ending Sept. 30, 1927, was announced by Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck. Frank A. Kelly, of Detroit; J. D. Brook, of Grandville, and Hugh A. Stewart, of Flint, were reappointed. Wm. Hornbogen, of Marquette, and Henry M. Joy, of Calumet, are the new members.

Monroe—The Ida-Bedford road, running from the village of Ida to the Ohio state line, has been opened for traffic. The road is 18 feet wide, constructed of 8 inches of concrete with 4-inch macadam base. It connects with Lewis avenue in Toledo. This road will be an additional inlet for Toledo and will be continuation for routes to Jackson and Lansing. It is 12 miles long.

Springwells—Seventy-five years a resident of what is now the village of Springwells, Mrs. Josephine Schaefer, died at her home, recently at the age of 77 years. Born in the Ruhr district in Germany, Mrs. Schaefer came to Wayne County with her parents. Later with her husband, who was a veteran of the Civil War, she operated the Schaefer hotel, one of the landmarks on Michigan avenue.

Lansing—Representatives of the cities on the Detroit United Railway interurban system, have opposed the petition of the company for permission to increase its interurban rates from 2 to 2 1-2 cents a mile. They asked that the state public utilities commission consider the interurban rate proposition as it did the telephone rate case, and differentiate between profitable and non-profitable lines.

Ann Arbor—University of Michigan women debaters have swept the field this year, defeating the Ohio State university teams in both affirmative and negative in the annual debate. The members of the two teams are, Joanna Jo Dewitt, Hudsonville; Catherine Stafford, New York city; Elizabeth Van Valkenburgh, Northville; Clara Lau, Detroit; Mary McCully, Pittsford, and Florence Fuller, Lansing.

Detroit—Captain John Stevenson, dean of Detroit representatives in the state legislature, and councilman elect, tendered to Governor Alex J Groesbeck his resignation as a member of the lower house in Lansing. While his position on the city's law making body, which he assumed January 1, would not hamper his state legislative service, provisions of the city charter make it mandatory that he resign.

Ann Arbor—From schools all over Michigan and throughout the adjoining states applications for college graduates to fill positions as college and public school teachers are flooding the bureau of appointments at the University of Michigan, according to information given out by Miss Margaret Cameron, secretary of the school of education. More than 1,200 applications for teachers have been received within the year, Miss Cameron states, while the supply offered at the University of Michigan is slightly over the 300 mark.

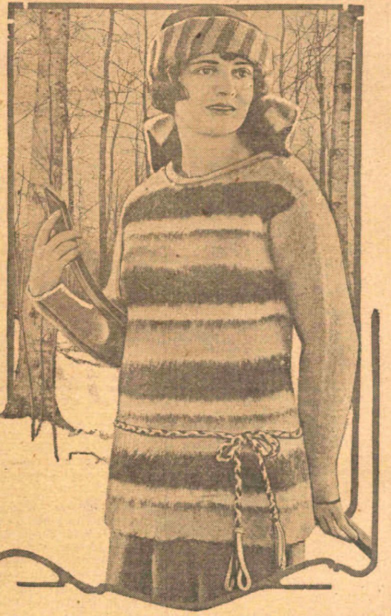
Muskegon—A radio, a radio fan and two wires caused North Muskegon to cuss them aplenty. For the radio fan, Raymond Castenholz, 28 years old, endeavoring to hook up his wireless last week threw a wire across a high tension wire in the backyard of his home. Somehow, some way, Raymond wasn't even shocked, but in an instant all of North Muskegon was, for every one of the 130 street lights was extinguished and the city cast into darkness. And that wasn't all. The lighting equipment of many residences was similarly affected.

Swagger Coat of Brushed Wool

Negligees Invite Relaxation

NOW that mid-winter sports are in full swing, fashion's pet theme is the gay, handsome, original sweater. According to the stylist's version in regard to the sweater of the moment, "brushed wool" is the most popular slogan in knitted outerwear parlance. The majority demand is for slipon or swagger coat, knitted or "comfy" looking fur-like effects.

Anyone looking for an eminently fashionable cold-weather sweater will make no mistake in selecting just such a model as is pictured herewith, for it is featured with very latest style details. It is, first and foremost, of brushed wool, which classes it as a topnotch fashion. It is a heavy slipon with horizontal broad black and narrow white stripes alternating on a tan ground. That these stripes are horizontal is one of its claims to style distinction, for stripes around and around are characteristic of the very latest in knitted garments. Other outstanding notes which guarantee its eligibility to the advance sweater class are the long, snug-fitting sleeves and the high standing collar attached at the back.



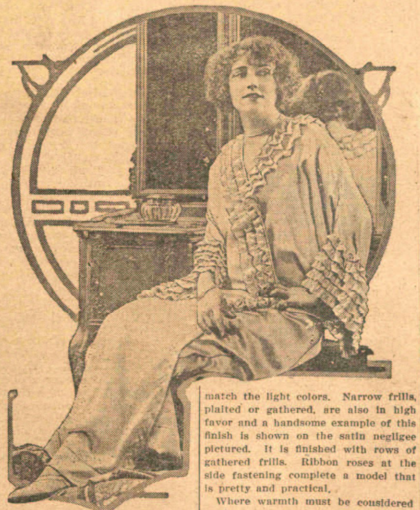
Slipon Sweater for Sport Wear.

Of interest, also, is the knitted hat of camel's-hair wool in tan with border of tan and green. It is quite the desirable thing these days that our sweaters be topped with hats and scarves which are also knitted. The wearing of the scarf is quite an art. It is thrown about the throat in "accidentally on purpose" ways, which challenge admiration from those who appreciate the picturesque.

Entrancing color effects are part of the scheme in brushed wool models. One of the most interesting is brushed wool knitted in a vague plaid pattern. Many of the shaggy sweater types are either tan or gray, with hints of powder blue, royal, green or orange, patterned in stripes and checks. No combination outclasses black-and-white.

There is a wide field to choose from in negligees, and even the most unpretentious of them undertakes to be joyous, or, at least, attractive. Materials used for them range all the way from gayly-flowered printed crepes to brocaded chiffon and chiffon velvets. Their lines are long, simple and graceful, with much emphasis placed on individuality in sleeves, which are generally set in and flaring. Sometimes they are of a different material from the body of the negligee. Plaited georgette contributes much to their making and in the most elaborate garments long sleeves of georgette are extended to trail with the trailing skirt.

Satin, crepe de chine and taffeta make the most practical of the dressier models. They are shown in the pastel shades and in changeable weaves. Besides the lighter colors, deep orchid or fuchsia, American Beauty and black find hosts of admirers. On the light colors, just now, marabou, swansdown and ostrich feather bandings are having a great vogue as trimming, dyed to match the light colors. Narrow frills, plaited or gathered, are also in high favor and a handsome example of this finish is shown on the satin negligee pictured. It is finished with rows of gathered frills. Ribbon roses at the side fastening complete a model that is pretty and practical.



Satin Negligee With Narrow Frills.

Where warmth must be considered corduroy is unrivaled for practical negligees. This cotton fabric has a silky sheen and a suppleness that assure a graceful garment and may be lined with silky, mercerized fabrics that match it in color. The less expensive models are plain.

A Silk Purse.

A handsome under-the-arm bag of black moire makes a coveted gift for a fastidious woman. Three-fourths of a yard of 12-inch ribbon is required for the outside and mandarin red ribbon makes a pleasing lining. It is made in a straight strip and one end is turned up one-third the length to make the pocket. The top flaps down and fastens with snaps. A short silk cord barely long enough to reach over from one side to the other is provided for the hand to slip under.

Pewter Is Popular.

Pewter for fruit bowls, for candlesticks, for ink pots and for vases is coming into its own. The old pewter tankards, flagons, mugs and jugs are likewise being brought out of their hiding places.

For the Evening.

A small envelope bag to carry in the evening is particularly appropriate when it is made of cloth of gold. The bag is square and can be easily tucked away.

Origin of Word Etiquette.

The word etiquette originated in this way: During the reign of Louis XIV of France, when the gardens of Versailles were being laid out, the master gardener was annoyed because people were tramping on the newly-seeded lawn, so he put up warning signs or tickets—"etiquettes," on which was indicated the path along which to go, but as the courtiers paid no attention to these directions, the gardener complained to the king in such a convincing manner that the latter issued an order comanding everyone to "keep within the etiquettes." Gradually the term came to cover all the rules for correct demeanor and deportment in court circles; and through the centuries it has grown into use to describe the conventions sanctioned for the purpose of smoothing personal contacts and developing tact and good manners in social intercourse.

An Explanation By The New York Central

Apropos of the late accident on the New York Central in New York State the company is sending out a form of circular letter giving some explanations of the modus operandi of the road as much comment has been provoked by the wreck of the 20th Century Limited. The company does not want to be misunderstood in regard to the safeguards it has placed to prevent such accidents. There has been some talk of an automatic train stopper but there is no such thing in use today and there will not be fo some years to come, if ever.

The mechanical obstacles to be overcome are far too great and inventors have worked faithfully to devise such an apparatus without results so far. And in regard to the block signals the New York Central are using the best known at this time. And it might also be said train speed was not excessive, because it is well known the 20th Century Limited does not run as fast as it could. In fact way back in World's Fair year old "999" developed a speed which has never been since equaled by the 20th Century nor any other train, notwithstanding one third more powerful engines are now used. So we can readily see speed of trains has not been materially increased because it is considered that too much speed is not safe. The accident which snuffed out nine lives on the Limited could not be avoided on account of weather conditions—that's all there is to it and the blame will have to be put on Profit and Loss—it simply can't be laid to the crews. The only question involved to date is could not the section which had stopped to ascertain damages to an auto have sent some sort of a signal back to the onrushing section? If it could why was not this done? Could not a brakey started back the minute section No. 1, stopped, with a heavy duty torpedo, ran as fast as he could, and laid the torpedo on the track just in front of the onsushing 2nd section? If he could why did he not do it?

To Open New M. A. C. Building Next Month

The new home economics building which is nearing completion at the Michigan Agricultural College will be opened formally on Tuesday evening, February 5, as a feature of the annual farmers week at the college, according to announcement made here this week.

The building, which is part of the construction program at M. A. C. for which funds were authorized by the last legislature will rank as one of the finest and most modern home economics plants in the entire country. Complete laboratory equipment for experimental and teaching work, class rooms, offices and special features make the building a model of its kind.

While formal dedication of the building will not be held until next summer, the "house warming" will mark the real opening, as college work will be conducted there during the rest of the year

PLAN TO OPERATE BARGE TRAINS ON MISSISSIPPI

Company Designs Transport on River Like Railways.

St. Louis.—A new system, expected to mark an era in inland waterway transportation, is planned by a group of prominent St. Louis business men who have incorporated the Standard Unit Navigation company. Under the plans, transportation on the Mississippi and other rivers would be handled in a manner similar to railroad transportation. New types of towboats and barges are to be used, extensive trials of which have proved successful, officials said.

Explaining the methods, Carl J. Baer, one of the directors, said that, instead of the huge barges in use on the lower Mississippi, the system provides for small barges, linked together like freight cars on a train.

The towboats, which will have a displacement of about one-third that of craft now in use for the purpose, will, nevertheless, develop as much power.

Propulsion of the boats will be paddles fixed on an endless chain on each side of the boat.

"The barges will be small, having a capacity of from one to three carloads," continued Mr. Baer. "Trains of barges would be made up in a fashion similar to freight car trains. A barge designed for a river port would be dropped at that port, and the train would proceed, picking up loaded barges at different points.

"Division of the rivers, like railroad divisions, would be established, the towboats hauling the barges through their divisions and delivering the tow to other boats at the division points.

"The design of the towboats and barges will be such that they can operate efficiently in three feet of water."

Mr. Baer pointed out that under the proposed method gulf-to-the-lakes service would immediately become feasible by using the present canal from Chicago to the Illinois river and then to the Mississippi. He added that towboats and barges of the new type had been contracted for, and that the service was expected to begin next summer.

Costly Yankee Baggage Tempts German Thieves

Cologne.—If Americans would carry less expensive looking baggage they would not have so much of it stolen, was the advice a Cologne baggage smasher gave a New York woman who was bewailing the loss of a suitcase which contained her passport and travelers' checks.

"Leave all your high-priced bags and cases and boxes at home when you come to Europe," the baggageman advised. "Buy yourself cheap cases and bags. Get those which look as if they were made in Europe for the use of second or third-class passengers. Wash off them all the steamer pasters and high-priced hotel labels. You will never lose baggage of that sort. Furthermore, you will find your hotel bills are much less. Rates in many European hotels are fixed in accordance with the appearance of the travelers' baggage and attire."

Squaws in Alaska Want White Men as Husbands

Anchorage, Alaska.—Within a few decades, full-blooded natives along the southwestern coast of Alaska will be scarce, according to Charles Coach, who has spent much time in the lower Cook Inlet country.

The squaws refuse to marry full-blooded men because the white men are better providers and offer better opportunities for social advancement, Mr. Coach explained.

Only the educated native who has some regular mode of earning a living has a chance to win a young squaw.

Suit of Armor to Shield Boy From Effects of Sun

New Orleans.—Allan Lindsay, three, still has a chance to live if experiments under the supervision of a New York scientist are successful. Allan's affliction is inability to withstand the effects of the sun's rays, the color cells of his skin being too near the surface. Allan will re-enter a local hospital to don a "suit of armor" to be furnished by an electrical engineer of New York and which, it is said, will shield him from the effects of the sun's rays.

Beggar Picks Up $34,560 Each Year

New York.—Anthony Samaro, forty-two years old, made a howl when he was arrested for begging.

The judge confiscated Samaro's account book, did a little figuring, and then murmured:

"It comes to $2,800 a month, and $34,560 a year. Why, it's more than the mayor makes Such a salary!"

Samaro went to jail for thirty days.

Adventures of Alexander Henry at Mackinac

What follows is something which few of our readers have ever read or heard of concerning the early days of Michigan territory and since it comes to us through the Michigan Historical Pioneer Society it must be authentic. These historians claim to have in hand the original MSS. and we thought perhaps it would interest the Advocate family:

Alexander Henry was born in 1739 in New Jersey and at the age of 20 years he joined the army and marched into Canada to the seige of Quebec. He fought in the disasterous battle on the Heights of Abraham between Montcalm and the English general, Wolf. Both generals were killed on the field and the results of this battle gave Canada to England which she holds to this day. Shortly afterward Henry with companions (Courier de bois) came across Ste. Sainte Marie into Michigan landing at Mackinaw as a fur trader like hundreds of adventurers who got the feverish idea of gain, his object being to dicker with the Indians receiving beautiful furs of all kinds in return for a few inexpensive trinkets. Mackinaw was largely a French town at the time and Henry desired to keep his nationality a secret for the French and their Indian allies hated an Englishman further than they could see him. Landing at Mackinac Island in 1761 Henry was accompanied by a chum named Champion. Once inside the fort Henry could not conceal his nationality at all and the angry French warned him to be gone right speedily or take the consequences. The wirey Jerseyan was not easily scared however and he staid on, keeping close to his cabin. Here he received the surprise of his life when a band of more than one hundred fierce Chippewa warriors armed to the teeth visited his lodge in single file, offered him the pipe of peace and asked for a hand-out of rum which they dearly loved and which he dared not deny them. Soon a band of 300 Ottawas came likewise but they were not so friendly, in fact they showed fight from the start and would have taken every article away from Henry and scalped him to boot but for a happy incident. Henry's luck still ran in great gobs. Just at this particular moment 300 red coated English troops under the command of a lieutenant appeared to take possession of the fort from the sullen French. They marched in to the joy of the fur trader.

He spent the winter fishing and trading with the Indians at the Soo and it looked as if fortune was indeed kind to the adventurer. To add to his comfort an Indian chief named Wawatam came to his cabin with presents and told Henry he had experienced a dream. Dreams in those days were much more prized than today. In the chief's dream he had seen the white brother and adopted him into his family; thenceforth Henry was to be a brother of Wawatam. To this strange affair the fur trader owed his life a little later.

Two years after this Wawatam came to the cabin and in his funny roundabout Indian way informed the white brother it was very dangerous to remain in Mackinac and he ought to at once get away. The chief urged and threatened—even pled with the trader. 'Twas no use; Henry paid not the least attention. He had heard this before and he was prospering. It is related that Wawatam bid him an effectionate farewell and went away in tears.

Little was thought of it at the time. The following June 1763 on a hot and sultry day the Chippewas und Sacs were engaged in a game of ball called "baggatiway" just outside the main gates which were gaping open without even a guard.

By hook or crook the ball was knocked clear over the stockade. Into the fort rushed the Indians pell mell. Once inside they seized hidden tomahawks and sawed-off guns let out an awful yell and began the work of slaughter.

Henry was sitting in his room writing a letter when he heard that blood curdling whoop; looking out a window he saw Lieutenant Jamette tomahawked and ripped open in the most approved Chippewa style and Henry was faint: his legs refused to work; cold tremors ran down his spine. But the awful necessity of it aroused him to action. Running out the back door he jumped a 7-ft fence into a French neighbor's back yard. This man named Langlade looked upon the butchery as calmly as possible and would not lift a finger to aid the fur trader. But an old woman who was at the place finally secreted him in the garret of the house under some tan bark where he was almost stepped upon by drunken Indians armed with razor sharp knives a little later but they didn't find him.

Henry lay there all that day and the next, listening to the frightful din of two thousand Indians mostly drunken, murdering, scalping and burning. Through crevices in the house siding he saw part of the awful work. In relating it afterward the trader said he believed there was never a more demoniacal crowd of savages on record; and the squaws if anything, were worse than the warriors. Each time a soldier was tomahawked the quivering body was ripped open and the red devils scooped handfuls of blood and drank it.

The Frenchman, Langlade, after sleeping over it, decided he was not safe with an English refugee in his garret and gave Henry up to a chief named Wenniway who it happened had been a friend of the trader and who knew of the friendship of Wawatam. Three times in one day did Wenniway save Henry's life as drunken Indians would have killed him, but it seemed he was to be preserved for something more sinister.

Directly the trader and several other prisoners were forced into a canoe and the expedition started for the Beaver Islands. On the way they fell in with a band of Ottawas who took them all prisoners and turned back again to the scene of the tragedy. Here a great pow wow was held over the white prisoners whom the Ottawas coolly informed if they had continued to the Beaver Islands, would have been boiled and eaten by the Chippewas! To this day there are indications on the Islands and at other points that these cannibal tribes maintained flesh pots or pits in the ground stoned up in which they boiled the bodies of prisoners and ate them.

Continuing his narrative Henry claims he copied some of the speeches of the pow wow and that they were indeed remarkable bursts of oratory for wild Indians. Of course the prisoners were condemned to death. Again it looked dark for the trader, but Wawatam made his appearance on the scene and demanded that his white brother at once be released, which after much parleying was done. The other wretched English had no intercessors and Henry related his horror at seeing seven of them tomahawked on the spot; at least one body was boiled and parceled out to the chiefs; an arm fell to Wawatam and the sickening spectacle of this ghastly banquet haunted the fur trader to his last days, which were spent at Montreal.

Worn and weary from his exciting experiences, nerves unstrung, Henry returned to the Canadian city and married. He engaged in a successful mercantile business, dying at advanced age. Parts of his narrative may have been somewhat inaccurate as to dates, etc., being compiled 30 years after from memory and notes scribbled on scraps of paper but on the whole historians including Parkman and Headley are inclined to consider it the most authentic account of an actual eye witness of the massacre of Fort Michilmacinac ever recorded.

The Reynolds Spring Co. of Jackson recently received from the Overland Automobile Co. an order for 4,000 springs to be delivered in December.

Life With Plants and Animals

People who have never tried life on the farm have no idea of the satisfaction that comes to a normal minded man or woman from living with growing things. There is a wonderful sense of companionship in farm animals, for who has not conversed with the pet cow as she contentedly munched her cud under the shade in August. Who has not swapped ideas with old Fido while on a hunting trip? Well we remember the good visits grand-mother had with the old White Brahma hen. Of course we do! The man who treats them kindly finds they are warm friends, and there is something almost human in the response they give to a considerate master.

Even the flowers and vegetables in the garden seem almost to have personality. They make a grateful response to the effort put forth to rescue them from weeds and to give them water in the dry times, and seem to say "Thank you," by redoubling their efforts to grow and flourish.

There are many rewards of happiness in this contact with nature. which is more satisfying than artificial pleasure.

Without using a general anesthetic, a noted Vienna surgeon deadens the nerves of the body surrounding the point of operation, leaving the patient entirely conscious. In Chicago, recently, he performed a major operation on a man 52 years old, while the patient still retained his senses and could see the doctor at work. With only the nerves of the solar plexus treated, a gastric ulcer was removed from the stomach. Many prominent physicians who were present pronounced the feat remarkable.

Hundreds of women will be in East Lansing from February 4 to 8 attending the annual Farmers Week, and the program for the opening will be of especial interest to them.

Smallpox Spread Can be Stopped

Smallpox is spreading in Michigan, according to the state department of health. During November the disease confined itself almost entirely to Wayne, Hillsdale, Shiawassee, Ottawa and Jackson counties, but now it is breaking out in neighboring and adjacent counties as well. Lenawee is one, and its presence there is accounted for by the fact that the county lies between Jackson and Hillsdale counties. Smallpox is highly infectious, and spreads rapidly where population is densest. For that reason it exists mostly in southern Michigan.

Coincident with the spread of smallpox, an increase is noted. During November 417 cases were reported to the department of health. Last year the figure was 97, and the average for November of the past ten years is 181. The first 19 days of December saw 299 cases reported as compared with 145 for the same time interval in December 1922.

The increase and spread of smallpox in Michigan is entirely preventable. There is no excuse for its existense anywhere. Through the simple medium of vaccination the scourge can be entirely eliminated. Counties that have smallpox right along, must be full of backward people, else they would avail themselves of the fruits of modern enlightenment to stop the uncalled for spread of disease.

The Home Newspaper

If there is anything in your town worth talking about ten chances to one your own newspaper had a hand in putting it there. If anybody beyond the walls of your burg ever learns that there is such a place as No. Adams, it will be through the home paper.

Every town gets its money's worth through the home newspaper. It's the wagon that carries all the home goods to market. It ought to be kept in good repair. It will pay to grease it, paint it and keep it in good running order, and sheltered.

The papers are the guardians and defenders of every interest, the forunners and pioneers of every movement and the sturdy advocates of law and order.

He Keeps on Building Them

It would seem to the novice that after all the bitter luck and loss to this government with the unwieldy, awkward, clumsy dirigible balloons the project would be abandoned, but not yet! Over at Washington they are considering the preparation of a Polar trip for our latest rigid dirigible the Leviathan. After the loss of the French dirigible, Dixmude, they pay no attention to the signs of the times, but go right on trying to do the impossible.

While it is a matter of national curiousity to know the exact topographical conditions surrounding the North Pole, yet the assinine foolishness of trying to fly one of these monstrosities over the pole is staggering. Any sensible thinking person must know there is not one chance in a hundred of even attaining the Arctic Circle, to say nothing of hundreds of miles to be negotiated in the frozen wastes on top of the Globe. Past experience has fully demonstrated that a Blimp does not live long enough to make such a trip. Added to this is the loss of a number of lives of brave men whose fanaticism leads them to make sacrifices to the God of science.

During the German U-Boat period it was customary to compel crews at the point of the bayonet to take their places in the submarine, but how much safer in comparison than the dirigible balloon! Army officers stationed at Washington should not assume the role of executioners for the sake of science. Let them decline to engage in this enterprise until such time as inventors have devised a safer mode of travel.

Sure and speedy death is the only result of such an expedition and government officials should be called to account for it.

Think of this! Chicago has 4 times as many telephones as the great world's metropolis, London. Cities in this country having more than 100,000 'phones now are New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, StLouis, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Washington, Minneapolis and Milwaukee.

Our Wild Game

That 50 per cent of the denizens of the field and woodland will have paid with their life this year because of the use of the automobile in hunting is the statement of Dr. Will Harnaday of New York City. That is to say, the modern hunter can easily cover far more territory than can be covered by a horse or afoot. He says four times the area can be covered by an automobile hunter. The distinguished director of the New York Zoological Garden thinks that our wild game is doomed unless protective measures are adopted.

In addition to protective legislation Dr. Harnaday would call on the good sportsmanship of the hunter. Let the hunter go slow, recognizing the new perils to wild life, and take a reasonable interest. He appeals to the sentiment of self interest. Otherwise legislation will not be able to preserve the birds of the air and the beasts of the field that have so long made this country of our's a hunter's paradise. The pump gun is accountable for much useless slaughter of birds.

The Fisher Cody Co. of Detriot will erect two new plants for the manufacture of plate glass. This is made necessary by the increase in demand for closed bodies.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Haunted Heart

A queer commotion was going on there.. There were pricklings and stabbings that worried him while the queerest shapes seemed to leap from his heart and pass before his eyes in a tousled procession. But even worse than that was the tiny voice that whispered over and over a single word, the word "Remember."

Howard frantically struggled to quiet this sudden tumult within him, only to realize more completely that his heart was haunted. Many ailments had threatened him in the past but none of them seemed so terrible as a haunted heart.

As he walked the streets day by day the little voice grew more and more insistent. "Remember", it would say as Howard reached certain parts of the town.

"Remember what?" he would ask himself vaguely.

Then the misty years would roll back suddenly and throng the streets with familiar figures, the air would become charged with a medley of voices and a confused bustle would reach his ear.

There was Joe Tucker reeling along toward home, babbling in his idiotic way. Screams of terror sounded as Bill Brookes beat his wife and children and turned them into the snowy streets. Jim Sandler was smashing the furniture into kindling and tossing the eatables into the stove. Fearful oaths flew from the throats that had gulped down the poison. Barefoot children and scantily clothed wives passed before him while lying all about him were men that had been maimed for life in drunken rows, men drowned, men frozen to death, all of them having been dazed by liquor and all of them friends and neighbors of his boyhood days. The old horror of drink slowly crept up and down Howard's spine, yet still the tiny voice kept saying: "Remember, remember."

But—the old days were different. Judge Stressing and Colonel both said so and if prohibition caused so much crime ought it not to be repealed? They had proved that it should be. Beer—but say, had beer ever made men demons? And wine—had wine ever turned men into murderers? Howard wondered, then immediately brushed aside these disagreeable thoughts. Howard was on the fence wondering where he ought to jump.

But he couldn't quiet that inner voice. "Remember, remember, remember", it continued like a fog horn warning of danger ahead. Howard's heart leaped queerly as he listened. It seemed to have become a thousand reel film that automatically unrolled itselt before his wondering eyes. The streets seemed to be an immense screen upon which were thrown the life pictures of his boyhood days. Weddings, christenings and even funerals, all flooded with mirth and misery. Men and women who could scarcely talk straight nor see clearly took upon themselves the most solemn vows. But the saddest picture of all met Howard on a side street one day. He seldom went to that part of Dalton but today a strange new longing drew him there, and, as he reached a large building he stopped abruptly.

"That was the rum shop," he muttered, then switching about swiftly he faced a small cottage and for a moment gazed at it fixedly.

"Jack's home", he thought sadly.

Even the small voice was silent now. There was no need to ask Howard to remember, for it was the home of his boyhood chum. With lightning swiftness memory supplied the details and pictured the happy boy who was shot down on the night of his own sister's wedding. Boys together they had joined in the jollification outside the house and in the midst of their hilarious tin-pan fun a man rambled over from the opposite rum shop and without a moment's warning he fired among the crowd and Jack crumpled to the ground and died instantly. Remember? How could he help it? All the old love for his chum came flooding into his soul.

Howard turned quickly away from the little home now occupied by strangers. Had beer and wine any part in that tragedy? The sudden query startled him. How blind he had been. He had almost been convinced that he ought to help wipe out the law that would make a sober nation. He surely must have been mesmerized and Howard shook himself fiercely.

"Almost a traitor to Jack," he muttered, "and to the very cause I upheld so long."

Howard's prayers had been exceedingly brief while those noted men were in town, no unnecessary words, no pleading for the coming election, and only a mumbled petition for himself. He had turned from God's guidance to man's opinions. To them he had looked for the solution of America's problems when, all the while, they were cleverly paving the way for their own advancemeut. They were willing to lower the prohibition bars that the brewers might jump over and he had almost been persuaded to help the cause he really hated. No wonder his heart had been haunted, but he was wide awake now and still had time to rally his prohibition band together.

So Howard set about his task with all the energy he possessed. He worked night and day to counteract the influence of Judge Stressing and Colonel Coon. He talked and pleaded and persuaded people to destroy the evil thing in their midst root and branch, and the one little word that became his war cry was the word "remember."

"Say, Joe, remember Dalton as it used to be."

"Say, Jim, remember that beer and wine will be the loop hole through which the other drinks will flow and flood America."

"Say, Dick, remember that prohibition has never had a square deal nor won't until we put the square men into office."

"Say, Josh, remember that wine is still a mocker and they that tarry long at it will surely have sorrow and woe."

But to himself he said: "Howard, remember God and—Jack."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Mrs. Bradford Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Phoebus, Virginia.—"Having this opportunity I just cannot refrain from saying a word of praise for the Lydia E. Pinkham medicines. I have used them as occasion required for twenty years, and my three sisters have also used them, and always with the most gratifying results. During the Change of Life I had the usual distressing symptoms—hot flashes, insomnia, etc.,—and I am pleased to testify to the wonderful results I obtained from the Vegetable Compound. I heartily recommend it to any woman and I will be pleased to answer any inquiries that might be sent to me through the publication of my testimonial."—Mrs. H. L. BRADFORD, 109 Armstead Street, Phoebus, Virginia.

Consider carefully Mrs. Bradford's letter. Her experience ought to help you. She mentions the trials of middle age and the wonderful results she obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

BEES KNOW FOES BY ODOR

Entrance to Hive Guarded by Sentinels to Prevent Invasion of Enemies.

At the entrance of every beehive during the season of the honey flow, stand guards to prevent the invasion of strange bees. Half a dozen of the nectar-laden insects fly to the tiny door. To the human eye they look exactly alike, but one among them is not allowed to pass the sentries, who recognize him as an enemy. The sense by which they detect him, according to an investigator connected with the Smithsonian institution, is not sight, but smell.

In the course of his studies the man of science has trained his nose until he can recognize the three castes of bees—queens, drones and workers—merely by their odors. His experiments show that the bees themselves recognize one another by individual odors and use the sense of smell for as many purposes as human beings use their eyes and ears. Worker bees, he says, returning to the hives from the fields, pass the guards unmolested, because they carry the proper sign, although the hive odor they convey is fainter than when they left the hive, and is also to a very large degree masked by the odors of the nectar and the pollen with which they have loaded themselves.

"Never thought of it," replied Bronson. "I hain't had the phone only a few years. Drive faster!"

"I want to get there, or I would," answered the doctor. "Don't worry. From what your wife told me over the phone I don't believe the boy's eaten any more strychnine than I have—and probably not so much."

"He was alive, then?"

"Alive and making an argument against taking the emetic," replied the doctor. "But I guess she got it down him."

Thus reassured, Mr. Bronson was calm, even if somewhat tragic in calmness, when he entered the death chamber with the doctor. Newton was sitting up, his eyes wet, and his face pale. His mother had won the argument, and Newton had lost his dinner. Haakon Peterson occupied an armchair.

"What's all this?" asked the doctor. "How are you feeling, Newt? Any pain?"

"I'm all right," said Newton. "Don't give me any more o' that nasty stuff!"

"No," said the doctor, "but if you don't tell me just what you've been eating, and doing, and pulling off on us, I'll use this"—and the doctor exhibited a huge stomach pump.

"What'll you do with that?" asked Newton faintly.

"I'll put this down into your hold, and unload you, that's what I'll do."

"Is the election over, Mr. Peterson?" asked Newton.

"Yes," answered Mr. Peterson, "and the votes counted."

"Who's elected?" asked Newton.

"Colonel Woodruff," answered Mr. Peterson. "The vote was twelve to eleven."

"Well, dad," said Newton, "I s'pose you'll be sore, but the only way I could see to get in half a vote for Colonel Woodruff was to get poisoned and send you after the doctor. If you'd gone, it would 'a' been a tie, anyhow, and probably you'd 'a' persuaded somebody to change to Bonner. That's what's the matter with me. I killed your vote. Now, you can do whatever you like to me—but I'm sorry I scared mother."

Ezra Bronson seized Newton by the throat, but his fingers failed to close. "Don't pinch, dad," said Newton. "I've been using that neck an' it's tired." Mr. Bronson dropped his hands to his sides, glared at his son for a moment and breathed a sigh of relief.

"Why, you darned infernal little fool," said he. "I've a notion to take a hamestrap to you! If I'd been there the vote would have been eleven to thirteen!"

"There was plenty wotes there for the colonel, if he needed 'em," said Haakon, whose politician's mind was already fully adjusted to the changed conditions. "Ay tank the Woodruff district will have a junanimous school board from dis time on once more. Colonel Woodruff is yust the man we have needed."

"I'm with you there," said Bronson. "And as for you, young man, if one or both of them horses is hurt by the run I give them, I'll lick you within an inch of your life— Here comes Dilly driving 'em now— I guess they're all right. I wouldn't want to drive a good team to death for any young hoodlum like him— All right, how much do I owe you, Doc?"

CHAPTER XV

The Glorious Fourth.

A good deal of water ran under the Woodruff district bridges in the weeks between the school election and the Fourth of July picnic at Eight-Mile grove. But few surface indications there were of any change in the little community in this annual gathering of friends and neighbors. Wilbur Smythe made the annual address, and was in rather finer fettle than usual as he paid his fervid tribute to the starry flag, and to this very place as the most favored spot in the best county of the greatest state in the most powerful, intellectual, freest and most progressive nation in the best possible of worlds.

Jim Irwin read the Declaration rather well, Jennie Woodruff thought, as she sat on the platform between Deacon Avery, the oldest settler in the district, and Mrs. Columbus Brown, the sole local representative of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Colonel Woodruff presided in his Grand Army of the Republic uniform.

The fresh northwest breeze made free with the oaks, elms, hickories and box elders of Eight-Mile grove, and the waters of Pickerel creek glimmered a hundred yards away, beyond the flitting figures of the boys who preferred to shoot off their own firecrackers and torpedoes and nigger-chasers, rather than to listen to those of Wilbur Smythe. Still farther off could be heard the voice of a lone lemonade vender as he advertised ice-cold lemonade, made in the shade, with a brand-new spade, by an old maid, as a guaranty that it was the blamedest, coldest lemonade ever sold.

Under the shadiest trees a few incorrigible Marthas were spreading the snowy table-cloths on which would soon be placed the bountiful repasts stored in ponderous wicker baskets and hampers. It was a lovely day, in a lovely spot—a good example of the miniature forests which grew naturally from time immemorial in favored locations on the Iowa prairies—half a square mile of woodland, all about which the green corn rows stood aslant in the cool breeze, waist-high and laid by."

They were passing down the rough board steps from the platform after the exercises had terminated in a rousing rendition of "America," when Jennie Woodruff, having slipped by everybody else to reach him, tapped Jim Irwin on the arm. He looked back at her over his shoulder with his slow gentle smile.

"Isn't your mother here, Jim?" she asked. "I've been looking all over the crowd and can't see her."

"She isn't here," answered Jim. "I was in hopes that when she broke loose and went to your Christmas dinner she would stay loose—but she went home and settled back into her rut."

"Too bad," said Jennie. "She'd have had a nice time if she had come."

"Yes," said Jim, "I believe she would."

"I want help," said Jennie. "Our hamper is terribly heavy. Please!"

It was rather obvious to Mrs. Bonner that Jennie was throwing herself at Jim's head, but that was an article of the Bonner family creed since the decision which closed the hearing at the court house. It must be admitted that the young county superintendent found tasks which kept the schoolmaster very close to her side.

"Sit down, Jim," said Mrs. Woodruff, "you've earned a bite of what we've got. It's good enough, what there is of it, and there's enough of it, such as it is!"

"I'm Sorry," said Jim, "but I've a Prior Engagement."

"I'm sorry," said Jim, "but I've a prior engagement."

"Why, Jim!" protested Jennie. "I've been counting on you. Don't desert me!"

"I'm awfully sorry," said Jim, "but I promised. I'll see you later."

One might have thought, judging by the colonel's quizzical smile, that he was pleased at Jennie's loss of her former swain.

"We'll have to invite him longer ahead of time," said he. "He's getting to be in demand."

Jim seemed to be in demand—a fact that Jennie confirmed by observation. He received a dozen invitations as he passed the groups seated on the grass—one of them from Mrs. Cornelius Bonner, who saw no particular point in advertising disgruntlement. The children ran to him and clung to his hands; young girls gave him sisterly smiles and such trifles as chicken drumsticks, pieces of cake and like tidbits. His passage to the numerous group at a square table under a big burr oak was quite an ovation—an ovation of the significance of which he was himself quite unaware.

But Jennie—the daughter of a politician and a promising one herself—Jennie sensed the fact that Jim Irwin had won something from the people of the Woodruff district in the way of deference. Still he was the gangling, Lincolnian, ill-dressed, over-stricken Jim Irwin of old, but Jennie had no longer the feeling that one's standing was somewhat compromised by association with him.

He had begun to put on something more significant than clothes, something which he had possessed all the time, but which became valid only as it was publicly apprehended. He was clearly the central figure of his group, in which she recognized the Bronsons those queer children from Tennessee, the Simmses, the Talcotts, the Hansens, the Hamms and Colonel Woodruff's hired man, Pete, whose other name is not recorded.

Jim sat down between Bettina Hansen, a flaxen-haired young Brunhilde of seventeen, and Calista Simms—Jennie saw him do it, while listening to Wilbur Smythe's account of the exacting nature of the big law practice he was building up—and would have been glad to exchange places with Bettina.

"He seems to be making an address," said Wilbur Smythe.

"Well, Wilbur," replied the colonel, 'you had the first shot at us. Suppose we move over and see what's under discussion."

As they approached the group, they heard Jim Irwin answering something which Ezra Bronson had said.

"You think so, Ezra," said he, "and it seems reasonable that big creameries like those at Omaha, Sioux City, Des Moines and the other centralizer points can make butter cheaper than we would do here—but we've the figures that show that they aren't economical."

"They can't make good butter, for one thing," said Newton Bronson cockily.

"Why can't they?" asked Olaf Hansen, the father of Bettina.

"Well," said Newton, "they have to have so much cream that they've got to ship it so far that it gets rotten on the way, and they have to renovate it with lime and other ingredients before they can churn it."

"Well," said Raymond Simms, "I reckon they sell their butter fo' all it's wuth; an' they cain't get within from foah to seven cents a pound as much fo' it as the farmers' creameries in Wisconsin and Minnesota get fo' theirs."

"That's a fact, Olaf," said Jim.

"How do you kids know so darned much about it?" queried Pete.

"Huh!" sniffed Bettina. "We've been reading about it, and writing letters about it, and figuring percentages on it in school all winter. We've done arithmetic and geography and grammar and I don't know what else on it."

"Well, I'm agin' any schoolin'," said Pete, "that makes kids smarter in farmin' than their parents and their parents' hired men. Gi' me another swig o' that lemonade, Jim!"

"You see," said Jim to his audience, meanwhile pouring the lemonade, "the centralizer creamery is uneconomic in several ways. It has to pay excessive transportation charges. It has to pay excessive commissions to its cream buyers. It has to accept cream without proper inspection, and mixes the good with the bad. It makes such long shipments that the cream spoils in transit and lowers the quality of the butter. It can't make the best use of the buttermilk. All these losses and leaks the farmers have to stand. I can prove—and so can the six or eight pupils in the Woodruff school who have been working on the cream question this winter—that we could make at least six cents a pound on our butter if we had a co-operative creamery and all sent our cream to it."

"Well," said Ezra Bronson, "let's start one."

"I'll go in," said Olaf Hansen.

"Me, too," said Con Bonner.

There was a general chorus of assent. Jim had convinced his audience.

"He's got the jury," said Wilbur Smythe to Colonel Woodruff.

"Yes," said the colonel, "and right here is where he runs into danger. Can he handle the crowd when it's with him?"

"Well," said Jim, "I think we ought to organize one, but I've another proposition first. Let's get together and pool our cream. By that, I mean that we'll all sell to the same creamery, and get the best we can out of the centralizers by the co-operative method. We can save two cents a pound in that way, and we'll learn to co-operate. When we have found just how well we can hang together, we'll be able to take up the co-operative creamery, with less danger of falling apart and failing."

"Who'll handle the pool?" inquired Mr. Hansen.

"We'll handle it in the school," answered Jim.

"School's about done," objected Mr. Bronson.

"Won't the cream pool pretty near pay the expenses of running the school all summer?" asked Bonner.

"We ought to run the school plant all the time," said Jim. "It's the only way to get full value of the investment. And we've corn-club work, pig-club work, poultry work and canning-club work which make it very desirable to keep in session with only a week's vacation. If you'll add the cream pool, it will make the school the hardest working crowd in the district and doing actual farm work, too. I like Mr. Bonner's suggestion."

"Well," said Haakon Peterson, who had joined the group, "Ay tank we better have a meeting of the board and discuss it."

"Well, darn it," said Columbus Brown, "I want in on this cream pool—and I live outside the district!"

"We'll let you in, Clumb," said the colonel.

HOW HE SILENCED THE TEMPTER

Threat Must Have Cost the Former Miser Suffering, but He Rose to the Occasion.

"If you find yourself getting close-fisted," remarked a Pennsylvania congressman, "it is time to begin to emulate the example of a wealthy old farmer in my state. He was noted for years as an old miser, but was converted during protracted meeting. Shortly afterward a poor man who had been burned out and had nothing for his family to eat, came to him for help. The farmer thought he would be liberal and give the man a ham from his smokehouse. On his way to get it the tempter whispered to him:

"'Give him the smallest one you have.'

"He had a struggle with himself as to whether he should give him a large or a small ham, but finally he took down the largest one he could find.

"'You are a fool,' the tempter whispered to him.

"'If you don't keep your darned mouth shut,' the farmer snarled at him, 'I will give him every ham I have in the smokehouse.'"—National Republican.

Winter Find You Tired and Achy?

Do You Suffer Constant Backache—Feel Old and Worn Out? Then Follow the Advice of These Good Folks!

DO YOU get up these winter mornings feeling tired, weak—achy all over? Are you so lame, stiff and miserable it seems you can never get back in trim? Does your back ache with a dull, constant throb? Sharp, rheumatic pains torture you at every step?

Then you should be giving some attention to your kidneys!

Winter, you know, is danger time for the kidneys. That's because exposure to colds and chills wears down body resistance and throws an unusally heavy strain on the hard-working kidneys. The kidneys are apt to fall behind in keeping the blood-stream pure, and poisons accumulate that well kidneys would have filtered off.

Racking backaches come with stabbing pains; muscles and joints ache constantly; there are headaches, too, with dizziness and distressing kidney irregularites. Nerves are "jumpy"; one feels old—all worn out.

Give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

MRS. LIZZIE KRABILL, 911 N. Larch St., Lansing, Mich., says: "My kidneys were weak and when I overworked or took cold it settled on these organs. This caused backaches and pains over my kidneys. I felt tired and had no energy. Nervous, dizzy headaches were frequent and my kidneys were never regular in action. I used Doan's Pills and they helped me right away, relieving me of the backaches, headaches and dizziness."

E. A. SMITH, 552 N. Madison St., Marshall, Mich., says: "My work is hard on my back and so much lifting and stooping caused my kidneys to bother me a great deal. Especially when I took cold it seemed to settle across my kidneys and I had a great deal of backache. The muscles in my hips got very sore, too. Whenever I am troubled with these attacks I get a box of Doan's Pills and a few days' use always brings the very best of relief."

CASTORIA

MOTHER:— Fletcher's Castoria is a pleasant, harmless Substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Teething Drops and Soothing Syrups, prepared for Infants in arms and Children all ages.

Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

Teach your child internal cleanliness

THE mother who permits constipation in her baby or older child is risking the health, even the life of her little one.

It must be remembered that an infant is helpless, unable to tell that constipation is making its life miserable. Consequently the mother must be able to recognize signs of constipation in her baby. Convulsions, night terrors, grinding the teeth in sleep, feverishness, fretfulness and such symptoms—any of these may indicate that poisons from baby's stagnant intestine are flooding the little body.

Washing Cleans Only The Skin

In older children biliousness, coated tongue, loss of appetite warn the mother that constipation is present. Constipation, unchecked in youth, may lead to serious consequences. In constipation, according to intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Only Aggravate Constipation

The mother should not resort to laxatives. A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

More Important Than Soap and Water

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in children's and general hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Let your infant or child have Nujol regularly—and see rosy cheeks, clear eyes and happiness return once more.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol yourself as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Use Honey To Make Anti Freeze Mixture

Experiments have proved that a diluting of honey with water, half and half, makes an economical and safe cold weather solution for automobile radiators. In fact, this novel "anti-freeze" has been used successfully in the Northwest where temperatures are much more severe than they are in Michigan.

"Dark honey, unfit for table use, can usually be bought for from six to nine cents a pound," says R.H. Kelty. bee specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College. "Sufficient honey for a whole winter's anti-freeze solution for a radiator can be made up for about a dollar and a half.

"The honey solution becomes more efficient with evaporation from steaming, whereas an alcohol solution loses strength. One needs merely to add more water as some boils away. It also holds heat longer than other radiator solutions. The same solution can be used year after year.

"Equal parts of honey and water should be thoroughly mixed and boiled for a few minutes, and the scum which rises skimmed off, before the solution is placed in the radiator. Also the engine head gasket and hose connections must be inspected and tightened before the solution is used, since when hot the honey-water will pass through apparently tight connections, causing an objectionable stickiness."

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 5th day of March, 1920, executed by Joshua Smith and Harriet E. Smith, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 6th day of March, 1920 recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 163 of Mortgages on page 124; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the said mortgagors to pay the interest and certain portions of principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable; and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Five Thousand Four Hundred Fourteen and Fifty six Hundredths (5414 56) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 25th day of February, 1924, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county,) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale with attorney's fee provided by statute The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as followz; all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, to wit; the west one half of the southeast quarter of Section 22 in Township 7 south, Range 1 west, and containing eighty acres more or less.

Dated, November 23, 1923.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON I.

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,

Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

J. H. Puelicher

Why banks? To facilitate the exchange of goods and services, says the economist.

FACILITATE = make easy.

GOODS = food, clothing, necessities, comforts, luxuries.

SERVICES = the work that goes into manufacturing, into crop-raising, into selling, buying, bookkeeping, financing—into all man's wants.

The WORKMAN sells his labor for money.

The MANUFACTURER sells his product for money, and the money is used to buy what the others have grown or produced—used in the exchange of goods and services which the banks facilitate.

A Mistaken Idea

In looking over our LEDGER we have come to the conclusion that some of our Customers think we are Bankers

instead of Hardware Men. If a man came to your place and bought some Hogs, Sheep, Cattle, or Produce or anything else and didn't pay you in six months or a year and perhaps longer, how would you feel?

If we had only one account or a dozen, it wouldn't make so much difference, but we have over 200—and we will take one of the small ones for example—$35.00. You can readily see that would amount to $7,000 or about $500 interest we are paying to carry your account—that should have been paid long ago.

We like to sell goods—we like to accommodate—but we are telling you now that we are not in the BANKING BUSINESS—and if you have got any idea that you can let your account run indefinitely, you had better see the BOSS before you start your 1924 account.

If you are one who hasn't paid your 1923 account that is six months old or older, will you please give this your attention in the next 15 days, and save us and yourself further trouble. We wish you a

The Woman's Club was pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Cora Eggleston Monday afternoon, Jan. 8. There was a very good attendance to answer to roll call with New Year resolutions. The following program was given. Paper "Our Postal System", Etta Corey; paper, "Our Mints and the Banking System," Grace Williams; book review, Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon", Bertha Young; music for the afternoon, two piano solos were given by Elfreida Calhoun. The next meeting will be Monday afternoon, Jan. 21 ot the home of Lida Kempton.

It is with some surprise we announce to our readers that Clenna Sponseller of Somerset who was recently sentenced for bootlegging and distilling liquor on the complaints of his wife, Maggie Sponseller, is not in durance vile at all but has been allowed to come home because they have no room for him. It is said poor old Michigan is getting hard pressed for a place to put her offenders and so they are allowed to run at large. Now comes the crowning shock of it all. Mrs. Sponseller has decided to forgive and forget and has remarried her erring spouse.

Ascribe ye greatness unto our God. He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he.—Deut. 32: 3,4.

An enjoyable affair was the regular meeting of North Adams Hive No. 729 L. O. T. M. held Wednesday evening, January 9. A fine pot luck supper was served to the members and their families at 6:30. Initiatory work was a part of the program and Mrs. Annabelle Gray and Mrs. Lillian Gary were made members of the Order. The Xmas grab bag was looked into on this occasion and every one was remembered by Santa Claus.

Ona Berniece Watkins Thompson was granted a divorce from Lawrence Thompson in the Circuit court Tuesday on the grounds of non-support and cruelty. They were married July 29, 1922 and lived together for one week. Mrs. Thompson made oath on the stand that he left her at this time never to return and never contributed to her support. Other divorce cases pending are Ethel House vs. Chas. House of Wheatland, Mabel Lang vs. Leo L. Lang of Hillsdale and so it goes. We should think on looking over the list that the "marriage in haste repent at leisure" plan was just as popular as it used to be. If the whole list of these birds was published each week we should be obliged to use about all our type, anyhow divorce is so common we figure its not really news.

College girls are called "hard drinking, cigarette puffing, licentious Amazons" by the president of Roanoke (Va.) College of Salem, Virginia. He also says: "dancing, drinking and social impurity have disrupted college social life even in theological seminaries. What can we do when daughters of the so-called best people come out attired scantily in clothing but abundantly in paint, carry a bottle of liquor, dance as voluptiously as possible, call for frequent intermissions to smoke, drink and engage in violent petting parties?" And the dominie is right. We are going quite rapidly back to the days of ancient Rome and our social life will soon be on a par with Sodom and Gomorroh. But as yet he is up a stump for a suitable remedy. Edward W. Bok would be much more tasty in hunting for a plan by which the social rottenness of our country could be cleansed. A reward of nine million dollars for the best plan might or might not bring results.

It is with much pleasure we announce that on both sides of Michigan a concrete road has been completed to the Ohio line and whether you are traveling east to Toledo or west to Chicago you can start from your home in North Adams and need not leave the good highway until you reach your destination. This is also true of northern points and we understand one can drive from here to Mackinaw Straits on the very highest quality of road. Such is the condition of our state today, and of course it means an annual expenditure of millions of dollars to the taxpayers. We believe there is or should be a limit and we believe that limit is near. We call in the name of common sense to the government to quit this awful drain and rest awhile; give the poor down-trodden property holders of this commonwealth a chance to recoup part of what they have put into gravel pikes. Will this be done? We are afraid not. Governor Groesbeck has been the most courageous man we have seen at Lansing who fought the road hogs and we don't expect to see another when he goes out of office, as it is rumored he don't care for the job any more. Possibly he might take it if nothing more lucrative developed, but as we understand it he wants another higher office.

Was Granted Divorce

Mrs Vena S. Watson has been granted a divorce from Clarence Watson, whom she married in 1913, on the ground of extreme cruelty. She was also awarded the custody of her eight-year old daughter, and Watson, who is now living in Detroit, was ordered to contribute $6 per week for the child's support.

Watson is the youngest son of David Watson formerly of this vicinity and will be remembered by most of our citzens. Some years ago he went to Detroit where he has worked at the factory of Henry Ford.

Basket Ball

Montgomery played basket ball at North Adams Wednesday night

The score at the end of the first half being 13 to 12 in favor of North Adams boys. The final score being 16 to 15 in favor of Montgomery boys.

The Girls game immediately followed the boys; at the end of the first half the score was 12 to 20 in favor of Montgomery girls. The final score being 16 to 14 in favor of Montgomery.

Friday might of this week both boys and girls play Waldron at Waldron.

Jan 18, both boys and girls play at Pittsford. The same night Jerome plays Montgomey at North Adams gymnasium.

If you are looking for fun and laughter be sure and come.

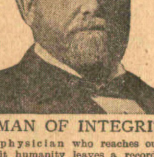
THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

Made Bald by Collars.

A French hair specialist says that starched collars are the chief cause of men's baldness. Women are not bald at forty as men are because they do not wear tight or stiff collars that press on veins and blood-vessels and thus prevent healthy blood circulation.



A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herbal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Sale of U. S. War Material to Government of Mexico Loudly Protested.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SURPLUS war material is being sold to the Mexican government, the first shipments of arms and ammunition having already been received at Mexico City. President Obregon sent a special emissary to Washington to ask this favor, and the granting of it was approved by President Coolidge on the recommendation of Secretary of State Hughes, though the amounts to be sold will be far less than Obregon requested.

Opposition to the transaction has promptly appeared in both house and the senate and is not confined to the Democrats, though the opponents of the administration perhaps are loudest in their denunciation. Representative Fairchild of New York, Republican, jumped to the front with a joint resolution to write into the permanent law of the country the prohibition of the sale of arms or ammunition to any foreign government, which was the policy of the late President Harding.

"The sale to the Obregon government is astounding," said Mr. Fairchild. "I am surprised it should ever be thought of. There is no essential difference between furnishing firearms and furnishing men to fire the arms. This act constitutes just as much interference and amounts to just as much slaughter."

Senators Norris, King and others were only a little less outspoken in their opposition to the sale, and Senator Hiram Johnson in his Cleveland speech Thursday, opening his Ohio campaign, did not neglect to include the episode in his indictment of the administration. The Democrats have evolved the theory it is a political move, pointing out that the diplomatic peace with Mexico is to be used in the coming election as one of the great Coolidge accomplishments. If a revolution upsets the government that has just been recognized, that recognition could hardly be counted as an administration asset.

It is understood Secretary Hughes takes the stand that political difficulties in Mexico, Central America and South America should be settled by the ballot rather than by the bullet; that this government should at no time encourage revolutionary movements that seek the overthrow of regularly constituted governments, and should not reject appeals for aid similar to the one made by the Obregon government.

There has not yet been anything like a decisive battle between the federal and revolutionary forces in Mexico, but both sides are exceedingly active. The former, according to dispatches from Mexico City, are now advancing on Vera Cruz from the south, west and north. The rebels have defeated the army of General Cardenas in Jalisco, that commander being wounded and captured and General Navarro being killed. Cardenas was lured into a trap and the resulting fight was bloody and desperate. This was the most serious reverse the Obregon forces have sustained and opened for the insurgents communication between Guadalajara and the Pacific ports. The rebels announced Thursday that they were beginning an advance on Puebla and Mexico City from Vera Cruz.

IT'S a poor week for news when there is not some trouble in the Balkans. Last week came up to the mark with the prospect of warfare between Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria. Of course they are always at swords' points, but now the situation has become acute. On Wednesday the Bulgarian government gave permission for the return to the country of ex-King Ferdinand, who was responsible for dragging Bulgaria into the World war on the side of Germany. At once Jugo-Slavia sent to Sofia an ultimatum protesting against this action and also against the secret increase of the Bulgarian army and alleged Bulgarian menace to Aegean ports. Serbian troops were mobilized on the frontier and were said to be ready to seize the rich coal region about Pernik which Serbia covets. Bulgaria wants an outlet to the Aegean across Grecian Thrace, and Serbia wishes to gain possession of Saloniki to make up for the loss of Fiume to Italy. In order to save that port it may be that Greece will feel compelled to support the Belgrade ultimatum to Bulgaria.

In Greece the stage is set for the establishment of a new form of government. On Wednesday, after Colonel Plastiras, chief of the revolution, had delivered to the national assembly a vigorous justification of his actions and retired to private life, the cabinet resigned and all powers were handed over to the assembly. Next day M. Venizelos arrived to assist in settling the country's affairs, and was given a tremendous ovation. As to whether Greece shall be a republic or a monarchy, Venizelos has said he favored a plebiscite but his republican supporters and most of the army officers insist this shall be determined by the assembly. British influence, which is strong in Greece, is supporting the royalists and the Bank of England has just refused to float a Greek loan mainly because of opposition to a republic.

THERE is no longer any doubt that the big French dirigible Dixmude was lost in the Mediterranean during a storm, for the body of her commander and fragments of wreckage have been picked up by fishermen. The disaster has caused much of a political scandal in Paris, the air ministry being bitterly attacked.

In this connection it is worthy of note that Captain McCrary, commander of the American dirigible Shenandoah, is outspoken in his opposition to the plan to use that airship in arctic exploration next summer. He believes it to be unsuited in construction, equipment and cruising radius for such a trip as has been planned. The builders of the Shenandoah do not agree with McCrary, but they advocate the use of hydrogen to obtain greater bouyancy and advise making a direct dash from Lakehurst to the polar region instead of the long detour by way of southern California.

CONGRESS has resumed work after the holidays and the house ways and means committee is again struggling with the treasury tax reduction bill. After this has been disposed of, which may be about January 15, the committee will take up the soldiers' bonus measure. Chairman Green believes no part of the revenue measure should be reported until after action is taken on the bonus bill. The Democrats have not yet decided on their program in relation to the revenue bill, but the farm bloc through Representative Dickinson of Iowa has offered a compromise, agreeing to accept a cut in surtax rates from the present maximum of 50 per cent to a maximum somewhere between 37 and 42 per cent. He thinks nearly all the Republicans in the lower house except the La Follette radicals would support such a reduction and that many Democrats also would favor it.

REPRESENTATIVE UPSHAW has made up his mind that liquor drinking by congressmen and high government officials must stop and that there must be no more leakage of booze from the stores of foreign diplomats into bootleg channels. Consequently he has embodied these ideas in a resolution and introduced it in the house, following with a speech in its support. He thinks the State department should "respectfully request that all foreign governments discontinue sending to this country diplomatic and consular representatives who exert a demoralizing influence upon our official and social life by dispensing from their residences and offices intoxicating liquors prohibited by our laws to American citizens." He also suggests that all federal appointees be required to make a pledge of total abstinence and that all intoxicated congressmen should be ousted.

NOW Leonard Wood, Jr., son of Gen. Leonard Wood, and his associates in four oil companies are under fire because it is said many ex-service men lost money by investing in the stock of the concerns. The federal government is inquiring into the matter, and it also may be aired in congress when Congressman Frear's demand for the investigation of the administration of General Wood in the Philippines comes up. It is likely the latter inquiry will be enlarged to include the actions of both of the general's sons.

SECRETARY OF LABOR DAVIS has transmitted to the senate and house immigration committees a draft of a new immigration bill providing for extension of the quota restriction to all countries in the western hemisphere, and for various modifications of the present entry requirements. The Italian government has made representations against a proposed provision that would restrict each nation's quota of immigrants to 2 per cent of the number of its native born citizens in this country in 1890. This stipulation Italy describes as an unjustified discrimination to the detriment of a friendly nation.

ON THE eve of the assembling of the new parliament the British do not know just what to do in the matter of a new government. King George has demanded that the Labor party be given its chance, nothwithstanding the declaration by its leader, Ramsay MacDonald, that the monarch's right to dissolve parliaments should be curbed. But the prospect of a Labor or Socialist government is having a bad effect on the money market and the pound sterling has had a decided decline. Consequently there sprang up last week a strong demand for some sort of a fusion of the Liberals and Tories to keep the Laborites out of office, and as it seems impossible to find any other Conservative leader willing to take the job, it may be that Baldwin will be induced to hang on to the premiership with the promise of Liberal support, though he is represented as eager to resign. In the Labor party there is growing friction between the intellectuals, who include its leaders in parliament, and the trades unionists, who assert they have done most of the work of building up the party and therefore are entitled to most of the offices if the party takes over the government.

PREMIER YAMAMOTO of Japan and his cabinet resigned following the attempt on the life of the prince regent, and Viscount Kiego Kiyoura, president of the privy council, was asked to form a new government. He announced two days later that he was unable to form a ministry as he could not get the support of any political party in the diet.

FRANCE and Belgium have sent to Berlin identical replies to the latest German note, and their tone is quite conciliatory, the German government being assured that the two countries are willing to co-operate with the Germans in establishing a system of administration in the Ruhr and the Rhineland. The armies of occupation already have been greatly reduced, and only sufficient soldiers will be left in the Ruhr to preserve the customs boundary for the application of taxes on exports for the reparations account. The chimneys of the Ruhr are smoking again, for the German and French industrial magnates have entered into agreements, independent of their governments and are exchanging coke and iron ore.

Henry M. Robinson, the Los Angeles banker who is the third American representative on the reparations commission's committees of experts, conferred with Secretary Hughes and the President in Washington and is now on his way to Europe.

E. W. CLARKE, "imperial giant," has issued a call for a national congress of the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta, February 26. He asks the klansmen "to gather together and prayerfully consider methods to eliminate existing evils, or else to follow the example of the founder of the original Ku Klux Klan, and have the courage and manhood to devise ways and means for the immediate disbandment of the organization."

DESPITE the protest of Secretary Hughes, the Turkish government insists that full customs duties must be paid on the vast quantities of food, clothing and medical supplies that Americans have contributed free for the destitute in Turkey. Consequently the Near East Relief has withdrawn entirely from Turkey.

MAKES COLT OF OLD HORSE

Veterinarians Give Old Dobbin Ration of Tikabipa and Surprising Result Follows.

Old Dobbin is not going to hasten to the boneyard. Goat glands and monkey glands may be rejuvenators of man, but when Pegasus begins to fade just give him a ration of tikabipa and he will become as frisky and fit as any colt in the corral. The army veterinarians [illegible] it on "Nifty," who was about ready to depart for the happy hunting ground, and now he is the spryest nag at the Presidio.

Tikabipa is a product of the Philippines and is made up of most everything from coconuts to rice chaff. However, its composition is not so important as its virtues. If, when taken as a steady diet, it will make an old horse young and put coltish notions into an ancient equine, it has many merits and vast possibilities.

Anyway, it places the horse several gallops ahead of the man who would be rejuvenated. Now that the secret is out coconuts and rice may become more popular foods in quarters other than where Old Dobbin's feed box stands, and the monkeys and goats may go on unmolested and with their full allotment of glands.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Michigan Happenings

Mrs. Mary E. Baker, 82 years old, widow of Major Charles Nelson Baker, a second cousin of Ulysses S. Grant and mother of Burton P. Baker, recently retired captain of the steamer Tashmoo, died in the residence of her son, Fred A. Baker, at Detroit recently. She was born in Glen Falls, N. Y., December 23, 1841. She was the daughter of Sidney Kenyon, whose mother was Mrs. Elvina Tappan, daughter of Asher Tappan and Polly Simpson Tappan. Mrs. Asher Tappan was a sister of Hannah Simpson, mother of Grant.

A career of 36 years of service as a teacher in Catholic schools was ended with the death recently of Sister Mary Louise, formerly Agnes Perron, at the mother house of the Dominican Sisters at Mary Wood, near Grand Rapids Sister Louise, who was 52 years old, was a daughter of Mrs. Joseph Perron, of Traverse City. She entered the Novitiate of the Dominican Sisters when 17 years old. She taught several years in the various missions in the Grand Rapids diocese.

Clark D. Smith, one of the pioneers of Shiawassee County, died at his home in Corunna, following a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Smith had been a power in county politics and was a former sheriff, one of the few Democrats elected in a strong Republican county. He was instrumental in the building of the county court house at Corunna, was a former member of the Democratic State Central Committee, former postmaster and a thirty-second degree Mason.

Although freight passing through the Soo locks in 1923 increased 38 per cent over that of 1922, it fell a half million tons short of equalling the record year at the locks, which was in 1916. This was made known when final compilation of the year's business was announced by lock officials. Total freight passing here this navigation season was 91,379,658 tons. That of 1916 was 91,888,219 tons. That of 1922 was 66,067,253 tons.

Six hundred farmers attended dairy and alfalfa meetings staged in Newaygo County recently. Clair Taylor, county agent, says that the meetings produced more results than any ever held in this county. Enough farmers signed cards to form two more cow testing associations in the county. Michigan Agricultural College experts attended all the meetings and gave lectures.

Records in the office of William C. Cron, county clerk of Monroe County, show that there were 2,281 marriage licenses issued here during 1923, as compared with 1,562 in 1922. The increase was largely due to the new law which went into effect in Ohio, July 15, requiring both men and women, to be 21 years old before a marriage license could be issued.

John W. Anderson, 30 years old, a World War veteran, died at Paulina Stearns Hospital at Ludington as a result of stepping into a vat of scalding water at the Ludington Basket Co. plant. Vapor arising from the hot water obscured his vision. Mr. Anderson had left his work to aid a fellow workman place a cover on a vat.

Grand Haven officials are making a determined effort to have repairs made to the harbor here. They will meet with Gilbert Van B. Wilkes, of the United States engineering department, at Grand Rapids, Jan. 25. The water level in the harbor is so low at present that boats are having difficulty navigating.

Walter H. French, 60 years old, professor of agricultural education at the Michigan Agricultural College, former deputy superintendent of public instruction and prominent Mason, suddenly collapsed while addressing a Masonic New Year's eve dinner and party. Death was due to a stroke of apoplexy.

Charlotte taxes are a little higher this winter than they were a year ago, due to a 73 cent increase in road and the school levies. The rate is $32.45 a $1,000. This is said to be lower than that of most cities in this part of the state.

Members of the Michigan State association of Drain Commissioners will convene at Grand Rapids early in February in its 25th annual convention.

Funeral services for Michael H. Moriarty, former state senator and upper peninsula attorney, were held at Crystal Falls last week.

Michigan's typhoid death rate for 1922 was 4.9, which was about half the rate for the state in 1918, when it stood 9.4.

A new postoffice has been established at Houghton Heights, one of the resort villages on the south shore of Houghton Lake, Roscommon county. William B. Parks is the postmaster. Daily mail service is obtained from Lake City on the recently established star route from Lake City to Houghton Lake village.

Edwin C. McRobert, 63 years old, a resident of Grand Rapids, 47 years and for many years secretary of the Grand Rapids Iron Molders union, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Croshaw.

Pontiac High school students led all others of the country in the amount of savings deposited in the school banks, according to a report covering 50 cities, made public last week. With 719 depositors, the total for the test week chosen was $450.

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

The Economical Quality Car

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923—far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

Thus, our statements have the strongest possible backing, namely, the faith and patronage of the American people who know automobiles and know practical values better than any other people on earth.

Brutal Affair on Wheatland Farm

Dr. J. M. Timms reports a particularly atrocious act against a dumb animal that was called to his attention last week.

It seems that a man from Reading by the name of Harry Crapo has been drawing logs from the William Barnard farm northwest of the city of Hudson. For several days he kept a horse standing in the hitchbarn on South Church St. and the day after Christmas took this horse out together with another and went to the Barnard farm. Arriving there he hitched the horse to a green maple log containing at least 300 feet of timber, and proceeded to snake the log out. This particular animal refused to pull properly and Crapo proceeded to club the animal over the head and later took a heavy log chain and beat the animal. Finally the animal got in such a condition from the continued and repeated beatings that it was unable to rise from the ground. Crapo left the animal there for the night and the next day came out and gave the animal to a man living on the farm by the name of Clyde Manning. The latter called Dr. Timms who had Manning draw the animal to the barn.

Manning prodeeded to swear out a warrant for the arrest of Crapo for abusing dumb animals and Prosecutor J. Culver Riggs and Sheriff Bates of Hillsdale came to the Barnard farm and investigated the affair. They ordered the horse mercifully killed and then started in pursuit of Crapo. The latter had started for his own home in Reading. Up till Saturday noon the officers had not succeeded in locating him.—Hudson Post-Gazette.

Little Towns Take Notice

Every community should have proper fire fighting apparatus. With improved roads and automobile epuipment there is no excuse for any settlement to be without adequate means of preventing fire loss. Too many towns have been relying upon others to do their fighting for them. "The Fire Chief" in commenting on this says.

"Suburbs of certain cities have in large numbers been 'beating their way' to fire protection by relying upon the generosity of large fire departments to save them from destruction if a fire broke out. The money thus saved, which should have been spent in providing their own fire apparatus, they put in their pocket. They wanted to get something for nothing. In hundreds of cases they succeeded.

"But the large cities are getting tired of this kind of philanthropy. If any community wants fire protection, it ought to be willing to pay for it."

It Won't Be Done

The other day we picked up a paper containing an article written by a would-be tax expert who claimed that every public official from the president down was in favor of reducing the taxes of the country but under existing conditions it could not be done. It is claimed that the various states have paid in bonuses about $380,600,000 and this one item alone for the tax situation looks quite dark. However there is some comfort in knowing that more taxes are coming and will continue to come.

REALITIES--AND THE ALLIED DEBT PROBLEM

By WALTER W. HEAD,
President, American Bankers Association.

As a business proposition there is just one reason for considering a recasting of the balances due the United States from foreign governments. That is the possibility that such action would aid in reestablishing a foreign market which will absorb our surplus products.

Walter W. Head

It is possible, of course, for the United States to isolate itself. We can produce everything necessary to sustain life. Mere existence, however, is not the purpose of life. We cannot prosper as we have unless we dispose of the surplus products which naturally accumulate, both agricultural and industrial. We must either sell this surplus abroad or curtail our production and generally lower our standard of living.

Our foreign trade depends upon the purchasing power of foreign countries. Europe's inability to buy has impaired our ability to sell. We have an interest in Europe's prosperity. To protect that interest we must be concerned in the restoration of our debtors' capacity to trade with us and to meet their obligations. We should deal with this subject exactly as a banker deals with a loan of doubtful value.

Get the Facts

The United States should have a representative with official standing in the Reparations Commission. We should not necessarily be bound by any agreement which may be proposed, but our representative should gather all information available. The United States Government, of its own motion and based on its own information, should then decide whether it should consider the readjustment of its accounts with Europe, and, if so, in what manner. Our own Debt Funding Commission should recommend to Congress whatever readjustment, if any, of the Inter-Allied Debt may be warranted.

THESE SUGGESTIONS ARE PURELY FOR FACT-FINDING AND ADVISORY PURPOSES—FOR GETTING DOWN TO THE REALITIES OF THE CASE. Precisely what our action should be, to serve the common interest, will be determined by information which at this time is not available. Our first step is to secure the information and our duty is to follow developments intelligently.

THE FRIEND IN NEED

(From the Nation's Business)

Some there are who still think the banker wears horns. Who is the hardboiled citizen, the man behind the thumb-screw? The banker, they will tell you. In the light of this illusion, consider a brief excerpt from the resolutions adopted at the recent Atlantic City convention of the American Bankers Association.

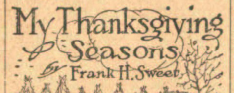
"The conclusion is inevitably forced on the impartial observer that the primary need of the world is moral and spiritual regeneration as the essential basis for economic recovery. Until the nations of the world are willing to liquidate their hates they can make little progress toward liquidating their debts."

Hard-boiled? Not that! It harks back to Socrates "The true politics," he said, "is first of all a politics of the soul."

Come to think of it, when we want someone to take care of our funds, to whom do we turn? To the banker. When we are in a tight place and need funds, to whom do we turn? To the banker. When there's a civic enterprise afoot, whose time and money do we commandeer first? The banker's.

My Thanksgiving Seasons

by Frank H. Sweet



OH, there are very many reasons
Why I am glad today:
I've had my sweet Thanksgiving seasons
Just all along the way.

I can recall a springtime morning,
All green and dewy wet,
When from its bed of fragrant beauty
I plucked a violet.

And then a wonder-night in winter,
All white on field and hill,
I thought I heard God's stars go singing

All sweet with flower perfume—
My heart fair sang with gladness
To see God's world in bloom.

And then a bitter storm at midnight,
When through the lightning's glare
I saw the crashing waves roll toward me
Yet KNEW that God was there.

Waldron Recorder Suspends Publication

George O. Bancroft who recently leased the Waldron Recorder from its owner who is in California, has been obliged to give up the paper on account of non-support and last week put out his last issue. In commenting upon the situation Bancroft makes a few quite sharp thrusts at the business men of Waldron and consignes Waldron to the Rip Van Winkle sleep from which he thinks it will never awaken. The Recorder once had a subscription list of over 900 but at present its bonafide circulation is less than 400. Following are some of the ideas which he published in his farewell: "Upon taking over the office we immediately established a business basis upon which we have conducted the business since April. However, for some reason or other, our aggressiveness and up-to-date method of doing things created a spirit of antagonism on the part of some citizens of this community and discontinued subscriptions commenced to be our lot; also some of the business men were inclined to think we were trying to "hold up" or something else and for a time some of them refused to advertise but have since come to their senses and started to advertise but some others are still holding off by such excuses as "Will talk it over and let you know." "I can't see where it gets me anything to adyertise" "and so forth and so on.

No! "Talking over" and forgetting to let somebody know, or "never getting around to it" will not save Waldron and lest we disturb you too much will say in parting sleep on, never wake up, don't take the Recorder, don't advertise, don't boost, never exert yourself beyond a certain limit, for some of the folks around this burg who are dead from their feet up might get brain fever or a crick in the back, and that would be too bad." Au revoir George O. Bancroft.

Exposition

Hillsdale County is well represented in the organization and development of the great Michigan Industrial Exposition to be held in Detroit during the entire month of April 1924. The preliminary work of getting together a suitable display of Hillsdale County products has been officially delegated to a comittee composed of Mayor Hugh F. French, W.J. Moore, President of the Chamber of Commerce and Geo. E. Tubbs, Secretay of the Alamo Farm Lignt Company.

The Exposition is to take all the phases of manufacturing in all parts of Michigan and will be staged in Convention Hall, Detroit, on upper Woodward Avenue, in the heart of the city.

The Convention Hall building is said to be the largest single ground area in the United States available for exhibition purposes, affording twice the area of exhibition room as the four floors of Grand Centrel Palace in New York.

This exposition should be one of the main features of advertising Michigan not only to the United States but to the world. Our industries and our products are among the most cosmopolitan in this country. It has been said that Michigan if cut off from the entire rest of the world could almost exist on its own resources This being the case there is a chance to show to the public next April that we are alive to our possibilities. It is hoped the entire manufacturing constituency of the state will be in evidence. If the manufactured products of this state for one year in the shape of automobiles alone could be place end to end in close formation the procession would reach half way round the globe. Henry Ford's cars would make a large percentage of this array.

Another feature of this big centennial should be the much vaunted St. Lawrence to Ocean Waterway. Here is an opportunity to push this scheme in spite of Canadian opposition which has developed in some quarters of Ontario. It is too bad this sentiment is shown and it would be a God-send if some propaganda could be put out by our nation to offset it. We believe the Canadians are misled and uninformed else they would never oppose such a valuable scheme. There must be a spirit of jealousy in Canada, believing that America is into this thing for what she could get out of it, and would cop most of the benefits. This delusion should be expelled' We hope this mighty government, will wake up and take the waterway scheme in hand and if the Canooks refuse flatly to co-operate, America can finance the scheme in herself, same as she did the Panama Canal.

Secretary of State Deland now gives notice that all autoists will have until January 15th to obtain new licenses for their machines. This is on account of the lateness of putting the 1924 plates on the market. This does not mean however that after January 15th men without plates will be permitted to drive but when the time is up the Sheriff will right speediy begin to pinch he boys' who happen to be caught without 1924 plates. That's all!

Mankind's Greatest Servant

Samuel Insull says: "Tremendous changes are coming in America with the development of Power. Fifty years from now Power will be so cheaply accessible that man will be independent of his surroundings.

"A vast system of central generating plants will place at the disposal of the small village and the isolated farmstead as well as the great city.

"Power will make the comforts and luxuries which are today inseparable from the large city available to every home in the country.

"Electricity will perform all the mechanical processes of industry and most of the domestic services. Electricity spells the knell of drudgery."

Something to Think About

The justice of penalizing individual carelessness when it results in fire damage to the property of others, is effectively argued in the following brief bulletin, issned by the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin

"A crook robs a national bank of one million dollars. The entire police power of the state and nation are put to work to apprehend him.

"A man deliberately sets fire to a grain elevator in which one million dollars' worth of grain is stored. Some fire marshal, alone and unaided, investigates this fire in the hope of discovering sufficient evidence to bring the guilty man to trial before a jury strongly prejudiced against circumstantial evidence."

Cooperative Egg Marketing

The farm poultry flock has been made a source of cash income as well as of food for the family by many farm women who have learned from their agricultural extension agents the best methods of poultry management and preparation of products for market. The experience of the women of Fairhaven (Ga.) community, is typical of the work in many states. These farm women, desiring to improve the earnings of their flocks, brought eggs to the weekly meeting of the extension club, where the home demonstration agent showed them how to grade and pack properly for shipment. This was continued each week until the members were able to do the work themselves. They then organized to ship their eggs cooperatively, secured as customer a grocery store in a nearby city, and according to reports to the United States department of agriculture, have been carrying on a satisfactory business for more than a year.

New cooperative egg marketing associations organized in 1922, according to reports, handled 490,000 dozen eggs; in 1921 some 400 new organtzations handled about 200,000 dozen eggs.

Voters and Citzens Attention!

The officers of the Farm Bureau have been trying to get a expression of the people in regard to the present legislative views relative to a Gas Tax and revision of the Reapportionment Act. It is the desire of your present State Representative Hon. F. W. Rowe, to know your attitude as to the reapportionment of representatives in both Houses of the State Legislature, Senate and Lower House as there has been a tendency on the part of Detroit to get what seems to the rural districts to be more than their due share of representation,

We invite every one to come into the Farm Bureau Office and talk the matter over so the public may come to some understanding for future action in regard to the revision of the State Constitution, which is provided for in the present constitution, to be acted upon by popular vote in 1926 and if approved by the voters, there will be a Constitutional Convention in 1927.

We call your attention to this so you may think it over and advise your representative intelligently as to your wishes in this matter in the future. During the last two years, it has been taken up through your Board of Supervisors by your representative to get an honest expression as near as might be from the different localities. But, it would be a more general expression if taken from the voters in your representative district, and it will give your representative an assurance that he is carrying out the wishes of the majority of the people whom he represents in the State Legisature.

We have decided to lower the price of the Michigan Farmer and he Advocate from $2.25 to $2.15.

Sugar Beet Men to Meet In Conference

Sugar beet men of the state will gather in conference at the Michigan Agricultural College from Jan. 23 to 25, in third annual Sugar Beet Institute held under the auspices of the college.

Both manufacturers and growers have been invited to the meeting, and it is predicted that last year's attendance of 250 will be equalled or bettered.

Problems of production, with emphasis on the cultural end, will be discussed at the conference, according to acting-dean E. B. Hill, of the M. A. C. agricultural division who is arranging details of the institute. Fertilization, disease problems, insect control and general cultural methods will be taken up.

The list of men who are to lead discussion at the various meetings includes five men from the U. S. department of agriculture at Washington, D. C. Prominent state manufacturers and growers, and specialists from the agricultural college, will also take part in the program.

Gerald D. Wells Writes a Story

Gerald D. Wells, son of Howard Wells of Adams township composed the following story which was published in the January issue of the Hillsdale County Farm Bulletin:—

"I joined the Calf Club because I thought it would help me to learn more about showing calves. I have learned a lot about showing and also a lot about type.

I selected a Holstein because my father keeps Holsteins and I like the disposition of them better than that of any other dairy breeds. I got one of them from my father and the other one or my heifer which is a senior yearling, came from up in Livingston county.

I broke my calf to lead when she was small. It is easy to break a small calf to lead if you are not rough with them; my heifer was broke to lead when I got her but I led her quite a little so she would lead good at the fair. I got her right after the state fair where she won fifth in the club, and was in the herd that won first.

Both my heifer and calf are quite tame. It does not pay to have cattle or any other animals wild. Wild dairy cattle will not give the milk they would if they were tame; and wild stock are disagreeable to handle

My heifer and calf had alfalfa hay to eat which is the best hay for dairy calves, and it will not harm them if you let them have what other hay they want before you give them alfalfa. Some people do not seem to comprehend what they are missing by not growing alfalfa hay which is the best of all hays for cattle as well as the cheapest. You can grow nearly, if not quite as much alfalfa in one year on an acre as you could grow of timothy in two or three years. They also received ground oats which is a good feed. I feed four pounds a day to each of my two heifers. I also feed linseed and oilmeal which I think is a good dairy feed. I would like to have some corn meal but it was not easy to get and it was high priced. My calf grew well tho weighing 835 pounds when one year old. But she was a little sloping on the rump; this is not liked in the show ring. For cows sloping on the rump are quite likely to have udders that hang heavy behind, which is usually the case.

My senior yearling heifer is a good built heifer but was a little thin in flesh when I got her only two weeks before the Hillsdale fair. So I did not have time to get her in very good shape for the fair but she won first in Club, first in open and Reserve Grand Champion which made me feel quite good. If I had have had her in better shape I might have won Grand Champion.

It pays to have your cattle well broke to lead when you go to the fair. For if they are not the judge will notice it and often will not give you the prize you would have won.

I think well bred calves are better to have than scrubs for they will grow better and make much better cows. I think you can grow better calves in the barn in a large pen than out doors in the sun.

Our club had a business meeting every two weeks on Monday night".

"How I Kept My Sheep

I joined the Sheep Club because I like to take care of sheep. I bought my sheep of my father.

When the lambs were old enough to eat grain, they had a trough by themselves so they would grow fast while young and make large sheep.

The sheep were sheared by hand and the wool pooled. I like pure bred sheep because the sheep of any one breed are more alike.

My sheep were always well.

I am planning to raise better lambs, if I can next year. I got second premium on one lamb at the Hillsdale County Fair."

Veteran Becomes Expert

To make a watch repairer out of a laborer is not only a super accomplishment for the instructors effecting this transformation but it proves that a man with initiative and confidence is a big factor in making such a change possible.

That such an accomplishment can be made a fact has been brought to light by the case of Joseph Kinnich, Jr., a disabled ex-soldier living at 1080 Concord Ave., Detroit.

Before entering the service Kinnick was a laborer. But while serving on the Champagne sector in France he was wounded in the chest by a machine gun bullet. The nature of this wound incapacitated him from returning to, the heavy work of a laborer. so after spending six months in the hospital, he was discharged. Knowing that it would be foolish for him to attempt to "carry on" at his pre-war occupation Kinnick applied to the U. S. Veteran Bureau for a course in vocational training which was given him.

For thirty one and a half months he recieved "placement training", training on the job, in one of Detroit's large Jewelry shops. At the end of this period he had become proficient, whereupon he was given suitable employment and declared rehabilitated.

Kinnick is doing well at his new vocation. Furthermore, he is now earning a wage which is thirty-five per cent in excess of his per-war income.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Yes, Turn on the Flashlight

A new sensation came out of Washington on the eve of Christmas. It was the report that the names of 1,400 men and women in high places had been found on a "customer list" captured in a raid on an alleged bootlegging syndicate in the national capital. The list was said to include the names of cabinet members, representatives in congress and other government officials.

The story led Captain W. H. Strayer, head of the "Association against the prohibition amendment" to assume a virtue" (as Shakespeare says) and demand that the government, "without fear or favor, publish the 1,400 names. But he had been anticipated. Wayne B. Wheeler, chief council of the Anti-Saloon League, had already demanded the the purchasers as well as members of the alleged syndicate be indicted. Two members of congress, Morris Sheppard, of Texas, in the senate, and Wm. D. Upshaw, of Georgia, in the house, call for full congressional investigation of the scandal. District Attorney Presmont announces that "regardless of the social, political or official prominence of persons who are shown to be purchasers from the alleged bootleg syndicate, their names will be presented to the grand jury." The Police commissioner of the District of Columbia has received threatening letters warning him to halt prosecution, but says he will push the case vigorously "without fear or favor."

Turn on the light, and let not any who are guilty escape. If it hits hypocrites hard, let 'em squirm. Don't spare the puyers of booze any more than the sellers. They are equally law violaters.

Nearly three months have passed since it was given out that cooperation between federal, state and local authorities was planned for better enforcement of prohibition in Michigan, especially in Detroit. How has it worked out?

That it was not a mere gesture, there is abundant evidence. Federal officials have increased their activities, as have the state authorities. Gov. Groesbeck has shown a sincere desire to aid the federal and local law officers. Sheriff's and prosecutor's offices have cooperated The courts, some of them at least, have aided through the padlock law and stiffened sentences. The only apparent rift in this unity of purpose was Police Commissioner Croul's course in publicly declaring prohibition unenforceable, which surely did not aid enforcement, if it did not hinder it.

What, in general, has been the result so far? From what has appeared in the press, it is evident enforcemsnt has taken on new vigor. The padlock law has closed many places, boozesellers and landlords being compelled or frightened into stopping the illegal business. Bootleggers and rum runners have been hunted down. The statement has been made in the press that not one half as much liquor is coming across from Canada as before. To be sure, Police Commissioner Croul has again broken into print, with the assertion that in three months blind pigs have increased from 3,500 to 7,000. If he knows this as a fact, is his department doing all it can to "get" these home moonshiners? True, as he says, the police are handicapped by the fact that the law protects the sanctity of the home. But would not an attitude of loyalty to the law lessen the number of home stills, whereas his published statements tend to increase them?

Last Survivors of Custer's Fight

It is generally believed and so recorded in history that only one man a Crow Indian was the only survivor of Custer's last stand on the Little Big Horn but it is not so. "Curly," a Crow Indian, now dead, goes down in history as the sole survivor. This is not correct, as can be learned by going among the Arikaras, and spending a day with them. Nine scouts from this reservation accompanied the expedition, three of whom are still living down near the river, and are still in good health

Three of the nine were killed near the scene of the engagement, the other six returning to the Reservation. The three still living are Red Bear, Little Sioux and Red Star. These nine scouts were delegated to charge the Sioux corral and stampede the Sioux horses while Custer's command engaged the Indians in a deep ravine. But the Sioux were too numerous and were prepared for this move. Six of the Arikaras escaped add were, several hours later, taken aboard of the steamer and carried to the fort with the Crow scout "Curley," who had seen no part of the engagement."

War Explosive Saves State Farms big Sum

Michigan farmers who purchased picric acid and Sodatol during the past year for use as agricultural explosives got their material for more than one hundred thousand dollars less than they would have had to pay for commercial dynamite bought through the usual channels, according to statistics just released by L. F. Livingston, extension specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College who is in charge of distribution of the war salvage material in the state.

Total distribution of picric acid during the year ran to 201,900 pounds, while 504,550 pounds of Sodatol were bought in the state. Saving on this material, plus smaller items such as caps and carload purchases of commercial dynamite, ran to a total of $117,941 for the year 1923, as compared with prices farmers would have had to pay for the ordinary commercial material necessary to do the same amount of blasting work.

Rosicrucians Secret Order of 14th Century

The Rosicrucians were a secret fraternity alleged to have been founded during the latter part of the Fourteenth century by Christian Rosenkreuza, German mystic, who dwelt for a time in India and Egypt, where he acquired a profound knowledge of the occult arts.

The Rosicrucians, like the alchemists, pretended to transmute metals, to prolong life and to possess knowledge of what was occurring in distant places. They first became known to the world early in the Seventeenth century, through the publication of certain documents said to have been issued by them; but according to many authorities, their existence was extremely doubtful.

The Rosicrucians were also called the Brothers of the Holy Cross, from the notion that the name is derived from "crux" (cross), and "rosa" (rose). Brewer, however, says that the word Rosicrucian comes from "ros" (dew) and "rosa" (rose). "Dew was considered by the ancient chemists as the most powerful solvent of gold, and cross in alchemy is the synonym of light, because any figure of the cross contains the letters L X V ('light')."—Detroit News.

Romans Made Bridgework of Gold and Capped Teeth

There are specimens in the museums in Italy which show that the Romans capped teeth and did bridgework of various kinds in gold, and probably also used gold wire in various ways for the fixation of loose teeth.

The Romans transplanted teeth and a slave maiden was sometimes required to give up a tooth to be implanted in her mistress' mouth, after she had lost one for any reason.

In one of the laws of the Twelve Tablets at Rome, the date of which is not later than 450 B. C., it was forbidden to bury gold with a corpse, except such gold as was fastened to the teeth.—Detroit News.

It Always Had.

A man was driving through the country in an automobile without a top. It began to rain and he sought shelter under a farm shed. As it continued to rain for some time he became impatient and said to the farmer: "Do you think it is ever going to clear up?" The farmer looked out and slowly said: "Well, it always has."

"Sure!" said Pete. "We hain't no more sense than to let any one in, Clumb. Come in, the water's fine. We ain't proud!"

"Well," said Clumb, "if this feller is goin' to do school work of this kind, I want in the district, too."

"We'll come to that one of these days," said Jim. "The district is too small."

Wilbur Smythe's car stopped at the distant gate and honked for him—a signal which broke up the party. Haakon Peterson passed the word to the colonel and Mr. Bronson for a board meeting the next evening. The picnic broke up in a dispersion of staid married couples to their homes, and young folks in top buggies to dances and displays of fireworks in the surrounding villages.

Jim walked across the fields to his home—neither old nor young, having neither sweetheart with whom to dance nor farm to demand labor in its inexorable chores. He turned after crawling through a wire fence and looked longingly at Jennie as she was suavely assisted into the car by the frock-coated lawyer.

"You saw what he did?" said the colonel interrogatively as he and his daughter sat on the Woodruff veranda that evening. "Who taught him the supreme wisdom of holding back his troops when they grew too wild for attack?"

"He may lose them," said Jennie.

"Not so," said the colonel. "Individuals of the Brown Mouse type always succeed when they find their environment. And I believe Jim has found his."

"Well," said Jennie, "I wish his environment would find him some clothes. It's a shame the way he has to go looking. He'd be nice-appearing if he was dressed anyway."

"Oh, then you haven't heard the news," said the colonel. "Jim's going to have his first made-to-measure suit for Ames. It's all fixed."

"Who's making it?" asked Jennie.

"A Dane?" queried Jennie. "Isn't he Bettina's uncle?"

"Ratherly," said the colonel jocularly, "seeing as how Bettina's Mrs. Hansen's daughter."

Clothes are rather important, but the difference between a suit made by Atkins, the tailor, and one built by Gustaf Paulsen, the new Danish craftsman, could not be supposed to be crucially important, even when designed for a very dear friend. And Jim was scarcely that—of course not! Why, then, did the county superintendent hastily run to her room, and cry? Why did she say to herself that the Hansens were very good people, and well-to-do, and it would be a fine thing for Jim and his mother—and then cry some more?

Jim Goes to Ames.

Jim had never felt more the upstart uneducated farm-hand than when he was introduced to that audience at Ames by Professor Withers, nor more completely disgraced than when he concluded his remarks. Even the applause was to him a kindly effort on the part of the audience to comfort him in his failure. His only solace was the look in Jennie's eyes.

"Young man," said an old farmer who wore thick glasses and looked like a Dutch burgomaster, "I want to have a little talk with you."

"I'm glad to meet you," said Jim. "I can talk to you now."

"No," said Jennie. "I know Mr. Hofmyer will excuse you until after dinner. We have a little party for Mr. Irwin, and we shall be late if we don't hurry."

"Where can I see you after supper?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

Easy it was to satisfy Mr. Hofmyer; and Jim was carried off to a dinner given by County Superintendent Jennie to Jim, the dean, Professor Withers, and one or two others—and a wonderfully select and distinguished company it seemed to Jim. Jennie seized a moment's opportunity to say, "You did beautifully, Jim; everybody says so."

"I failed!" said Jim. "You know I failed. I couldn't remember my speech. I can't stay here feasting. I want to get out in the snow."

"You made the best address of the meeting; and you did it because you forgot your speech," insisted Jennie.

"Does anybody else think so?"

"Why, Jim! You must learn to believe in what you have done. Even Con Bonner says it was the best. He says he didn't think you had it in ye!"

This advice from her to "believe in what you have done"—wasn't there something new in Jennie's attitude here? Wasn't his belief in what he was doing precisely the thing which had made him such a nuisance to the county superintendent? However, Jim couldn't stop to answer the question which popped up in his mind.

"What does Professor Withers say?" he asked.

"He's delighted—silly!"

"Silly!" How wonderful it was to be called "silly"—in that tone.

"I shouldn't have forgotten the speech if it hadn't been for this darned boiled shirt and collar, and for wearing a cravat," urged Jim in extenuation.

"You ought to 've worn them around the house for a week before coming," said Jennie. "Why didn't you ask my advice?"

"I will, next time, Jennie," said Jim. "I didn't suppose I needed a bitting-rig—but I guess I did!"

Jennie ran away then to ask Nils Hansen and Bettina to join their dinner party. She had a sudden access of friendliness for the Hansens. Nils refused because he was going out to see the college herds fed; but at Jennie's urgent request, reinforced by pats and hugs, Bettina consented. Jennie was very happy, and proved herself a beaming hostess. The dean devoted himself to Bettina—and Jim found out afterward that this inquiring gentleman was getting at the mental processes of a specimen pupil in one of the new kind of rural schools, in which he was only half inclined to believe. He thanked Jim for his speech, and said it was "most suggestive and thought-provoking," and as the party broke up slipped into Jim's hand a check for the honorarium. It was not until then that Jim felt quite sure that he was actually to be paid.

Mr. Hofmyer was waiting to give Jim the final convincing proof that he had produced an effect with his speech.

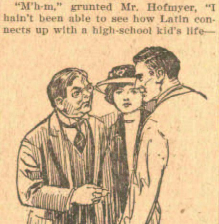
"Do you teach the kind of school you lay out in your talk?" he asked.

"I try to," said Jim, "and I believe I do."

"Well," said Mr. Hofmyer, "that's the kind of education I b'lieve in. I kep' school back in Pennsylvany fifty years ago, and I made the scholars measure things, and weigh things, and apply their studies as fur as I could."

"All good teachers have always done that," said Jim. "Froebel, Pestalozzi, Colonel Parker—they all had the idea which is at the bottom of my work; 'learn to do by doing,' and connecting up the school with life."

"M'h-m," grunted Mr. Hofmyer, "I hain't been able to see how Latin connects up with a high-school kid's life—unless he can find a Latin settlement som'eres and git a job clerkin' in a store."



"I Want to Have a Talk With You."

"But it used to relate to life," said Jim, "the life of the people who made Greek and Latin a part of everybody else's education as well as their own. Latin and Greek were the only languages in which anything worth much was written, you know. But now"—Jim spread out his arms as if to take in the whole world—"science, the marvelous literature of our tongue in the last three centuries! And to make a child learn Latin with all that, a thousand times richer than all the literature of Latin, lying unused before him!"

"Know any Latin?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

"I—I have studied the grammar, and read 'Caesar,'" he faltered, "but that isn't much. I had no teacher, and I had to work pretty hard, and it didn't go very well."

"I've had all the Latin they gave in the colleges of my time," said Mr. Hofmyer, "if I do talk dialect; and I'll agree with you so far as to say that it would have been a crime for me to neglect the chemistry, bacteriology, physics, engineering and other sciences that pertain to farmin'—if there'd been any such sciences when I was gettin' my schoolin'."

"And yet," said Jim, "some people want us to guide ourselves by the courses of study made before these sciences existed."

"I don't, by hokey!" said Hofmyer. "I'll be dag-goned if you ain't right. I wouldn't 'a' said so before I heard that speech—but I say so now."

Jim's face lighted up at this, the first convincing evidence that he had scored.

"I b'lieve, too," went on Mr. Hofmyer, "that your idee would please our folks. I've been the standpatter in our parts—mostly on English and —say German. What d'ye say to comin' down and teachin' our school? We've got a two-room affair, and I was made a committee of one to find a teacher."

"I—I don't see how—" Jim stammered, all taken aback by this new breeze of recognition.

"We can't pay much," said Hofmyer. "You have charge of the dis-cip-line in the whole school, and teach in Number Two room. Seventy-five dollars a month. Does it appeal to ye?"

Appeal to him! And yet, how about the Simmses, Colonel Woodruff, the Hansens and Newton Bronson, now just getting a firm start on the upward path to usefulness and real happiness? How could he leave the little, crude, puny structure on which he had been working—on which he had been merely practicing—for a year, and remove to the new field?

"I'm afraid I can't," said Jim Irwin, "but—"

"If you're only 'fraid you can't," said Mr. Hofmyer, "think it over. I've got your post office address on this program, and we'll write you a formal offer. We may spring them figures a little. Think it over."

"You mustn't think," said Jim, "that we've done all the things I mentioned in my talk, or that I haven't made any mistakes or failures."

"Your county superintendent didn't mention any failures," said Mr. Hofmyer.

"Did you talk with her about my work?" inquired Jim, suddenly very curious.

"M'h'm."

"Then I don't see why you want me," Jim went on.

"Why?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

"I had not supposed," said Jim, "that she had a very high opinion of my work."

"I didn't ask her about that," said Mr. Hofmyer, "though I guess she thinks well of it. I asked her what you are tryin' to do, and what sort of a fellow you are. I was favorably impressed; but she didn't mention any failures."

"We haven't succeeded in adopting a successful system of selling our cream," said Jim. "I believe we can do it, but we haven't."

"Wal," said Mr. Hofmyer, "I d'know as I'd call that a failure. The fact that you're tryin' of it shows you've got the right idees. We'll write ye and mebbe pay your way down to look us over. We're a pretty good crowd, the neighbors think."

Think of It.

Ames was an inspiration. Jim Irwin received from the great agricultural college more real education in this one trip than many students get from a four years' course in its halls; for he had spent ten years in getting ready for the experience. The great farm of hundreds of acres, all under the management of experts, the beautiful campus, the commodious classrooms and laboratories, and especially the barns, the greenhouses, gardens, herds and flocks filled him with a sort of apostolic joy.

"Every school," said he to Professor Withers, "ought to be doing a good deal of the work you have to do here."

"I'll admit," said the professor, "that much of our work in agriculture is pretty elementary."

"It's intermediate school work," said Jim. "It's wrong to force boys and girls to leave their homes and live in a college to get so much of what they should have before they're ten years old."

"There's something in what you say," said the professor, "but some experiment station men seem to think that agriculture in the common schools will take from the young men and women the felt need, and therefore the desire to come to the college."

"If you can't give them anything better than high-school work," said Jim, "that will be so; but if the science and art of agriculture is what I think it is, it would make them hungry for the advanced work that really can't be done at home. To make the children wait until they're twenty is to deny them more than half what the college ought to give them—and make them pay for what they don't get."

"I think you're right," said the professor.

"Give us the kind of schools I ask for," cried Jim, "and I'll fill a college like this in every congressional district in Iowa, or I'll force you to tear this down and build larger."

More nearly happy, and rather shorter of money than he had recently been, Jim journeyed home among the companions from his own neighborhood, in a frenzy of plans for the future. Mr. Hofmyer had dropped from his mind, until Con Bonner, his old enemy, drew him aside in the vestibule of the train and spoke to him in the mysterious manner peculiar to politicians.

WINDING GRAINS OF TWO TREES

There are two common trees in the eastern United States which admirably illustrate in their winding grain the opposite tendencies in direction. These are the red maple and the sourwood, or sorrel tree. Both trees are distinctly inclined to form a twisting growth, and in practically all cases of pronounced twisting the maple turns to the left and the sourwood to the right. Not more than one or two trees in a hundred of either species will be found departing from this rule.

No very satisfactory attempt has been made by scientists to explain why so many plants of twining habits have adopted definite and constant directions of curvature. It has been suggested that in some species of vines the tip of the growing plant is attracted by and drawn toward the sun, resulting in a left, or "anti-clockwise," curvature; while in other species the tip is repelled by the sun, causing it to bend to the right in a "clockwise" fashion.

Wily Woman.

"So you persuaded your husband to join a glee club."

"Yes," answered Mrs. Higgins. "When he starts to sing in the house now I can advise him not to tire his voice."

In order to be perfectly fair, one has to take some of the worst of it.

FOR THE BEST TESTIMONIAL $25 TOLD IN YOUR OWN WORDS

Open to Everyone

Thousands of people in this state who were weak, run-down, nervous, suffered with indigestion or stomach trouble, or had chronic coughs or colds, have been relieved with Earle's Hypo-Cod, the great, pleasant tasting cod liver oil health builder. These people can tell in their own words mighty interesting stories of their troubles and their relief after taking Hypo-Cod. When one bears in mind that there are countless thousands suffering with the same ailments that they suffered with before being restored to health by taking Hypo-Cod, few, if any, will hesitate about telling their story for the benefit of those who now suffer needlessly. In order to secure these stories, we are going to offer a series of prizes, the first one being presented here for the month of January. For the best story told in your own way, in not over 250 words, we will present to someone in each state $25.00 in cash; for the 24 next best stories from each state we will pay $1.00 in cash for each story. For every story submitted we will send prepaid one box of the famous Hypo-Cod Laxative Tablets. All that you have to do is to tell your story in not over 250 words, using one side of the paper only to write upon. Every story sent in must be accompanied with the coupon torn from the top of a Hypo-Cod carton. Help those who are suffering needlessly by relating your story in your own words of how Hypo-Cod helped you.

IMPORTANT

On the top of every Hypo-Cod carton you will find a coupon imprinted; tear this off and send it in with your story. Write on one side of the paper only. All stories must be mailed by 12 P. M., January 31st, 1924. Mail all stories to the Executive Board, Earle Chemical Company, Wheeling, W. Va., who will judge the winners and announce them by February 10th, 1924. When a story is submitted, it becomes the property of the Earle Chemical Co., Inc., and may be used by them for publicity purposes unless otherwise specified by the writer. Simply write your story in your own words and send it in at an early date.

Diameter of Universe Is 10,000 Milky Ways

The diameter of the universe is the length of 10,000 milky ways. And this milky way yardstick is 30,000 times the distance that light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, covers in one year. Light comes from the sun to the earth in about eight minutes.

This is the conclusion of Prof. Archibald Henderson of the University of North Carolina, given in a communication in Science, the official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He assumed that space and the universe are constructed according to Einstein's general relativity theory.

"It would take a ray of light, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, 1,000 million years to go around the universe," Professor Henderson says. "To go around the universe it would take the fastest airplane three quadrillion years; the fastest automobile five and a half quadrillion years, and an express train, traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour, eleven quadrillion years."

Effie Hanning Smith was born Feb. 4, 1875, in Adams township, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hanning. On May 3, 1893 she was united in marriage to Arthur A. Smith. Her death occurred on Dec 29, 1923, following an illness of short duration. Nearly all her life was spent in Hillsdale county, she, with her husband residing the last few years at Moscow.

Mrs. Smith was beloved of all who knew her. She was of a sunny disposition and had a willingness to help all in need. She was well known to old and young alike as a kind and sympathetic friend. An irreparable loss is felt by her relatives, by her friends and the whole community. She was an earnest and faithful member of the Methodist church and of its Aid Society. She was a highly respected member of Moscow Chapter O. E. S. She had a part in all social and charitable work in the community. She leaves a bereaved husband, mother and sister, besides many other relatives who keenly feel a distinct loss.

Funeral services were held at her home in Moscow and her body was interred in North Adams cemetery.

Hunting Safety With Blinders On

The enormous death toll, and the greater accident list which mars the path of the progress of the automobile is giying city fathers and county police authorities a great deal of concern. To meet the situation all sorts of remedies are being tried, the commonest of which is more drastic speed regularions, more police, and a more strict enforcement of the speed limit.

But in many cases it is found that all such additional "safeguard" do not accomplish the result; carelessness wrecks a car just as much when regulated by the police as when no police are about, and lack of skill causes as many accidents when licensed as when outlawed.

Authorities are beginning to believe that as far as the crowded streets of the cities are concerned, two drastic steps must be taken; the flow of traffic must be controlled either by a very elaborate system of one way streets, distance control (as on Fifth Avenue, New York), or a boulevard system which eliminates the deadly crossing; the other step, a real standard of proficiency to which a driver must attain before being permitted to drive.

The "driver's examination," in the few places where it exists, is well known to be more or less of a joke, A mere ability to get thru a half mile of city traffic without a crash will give, in many places any child of sixteen a motor license.

One Way to Stop the Ku Klux

The following article is copied from the Michigan Christian Advocate and at these exciting times when there is a real cause for all good people to be anxious regarding the trend of the fraternal bodies these words are opportune:

"The Ku Klux Klan is going "some" in Michigan, and two of the causes are not difficult to find. There is the problem of the parochial school question in this state and there is so much denunciation by our Catholic friends of the men who are trying to remedy what they consider an evil.

The Advocate has said before that the best way for the Catholics to conserve their schools was to open them to a rigid inspection and supervision by the state. By compelling to come up to the standards of the public schools, they would save their schools, and give religious education of their own kind.

True, we have such a nominal supervision uow, but its only nominal. We have the Catholic teachers getting a taste of the state's Normal School education, just enough to demonstrate their need of a full course.

Secondly, stop the rhetorical abuse of the Protestants who are fighting conscientiously against the parochial school. Insinuation and false charges as to motives produce anti-Catholics faster than the Ku Klux Klan can take them in. Argument is always better than denunciation.

Surely the wiser half of the Roman Catholic church can see through the hole in the grindstone. If the leaders who ought to see it, do not, or will not, then the laity ought to help them see it. The laity are getting new power in Catholicism as elsewhere.

During the war, a certain Michigan priest declined to order the parochial school to march in a great civic patriotic parade. His laymen went straight to the bishop with their complaint and a few days later the priest was removed to another parish. We have much to hope from a rising tide of democracy within the Roman church.

If, instead of teaching the children to sing the Star Spangled Banner for visitors and salute the flag on puplic occasions, they would junk their own specially written histories, and use histories that have no soft pedals, then they could go on with their religious instruction without let or hindrance.

They would profit by it most of all. It makes us Protestants blush to read some of our own history, but we try to profit by the shame of yesterday. Some history is hard for us to swallow, but the swallowing is good insurance against like horrors in the future.

But the main point is that when the Catholic church takes the surgeon's lance and digs out its own sore spot, our Catholic friends will wake up the next morning to find only the ashes of the fiery cross, for the cause of it will have disappeared.

Better look out upon this complex movement from the watch tower of the Advocate. You may get mad at times, but better be mad than blindfolded. We cannot tell you what you want us to see, nor what you think we ought to see, but what we really do see."

Get Good Seed Corn

Too much importance cannot be placed upon getting good corn for seeding purposes and it is to be planted. Therefore it is not always best to import seed from northean countries or other states. The best ears for planting usually are those which are picked right from the field if possible from standing corn. The ears should be well matured and it will be found that those which naturally droop upon the stalk are best since that is the natural position of ripe ears The same day the seed is gathered it should be hung in a dry, airy place. One of the best ways to cure seed corn is to hang it from the rafter of a barn or open shed, care being taken to see that it is thoroughly dry before there is danger of freezing. After it is well cured, store the corn in a dry place where it will not be damaged by mice, rats, birds, and insects. The corn that produces the best crop is cheapest in the long run and care in selecting and handling seed corn will be more than repaid by increased yields.

The farm of Edd Cojer formerly know as the Zelotus Post place, southeast of North Adams, has been sold to Earl Wertz of near Bankers who has already taken possession and is moving to same. He has disposed of his property between Hillsdale and Bankers.

Friends in town have received the announcement of the birth of a daughter, Patricia Ann on Jan. 10 th to Mr and Mrs Charles D. Carney of Pawhuska, Okla. Mr and Mrs Carney are both well known in this locality, Mrs Carney was formerly Miss Rose Anton, the community nurse.

U. H. Fillio of Seattle, Washington, arrived in North Adams this week en route to New York where he was called upon important real estate business. Mr Fillio is putting over a deal for a large acreage of Washington big timber to parties from away. He says the town looks quite natural to him but he misses many of the old time faces from our streets.

Mr. Beach son of H. Beach who is employed in the saw mill of Steven Cobb at Hoxie, received a lascerated finger while handling lumber on Tuesday and was brought to Dr. McFarland's office where an examination showed an amputation necessary. Accordingly Dr. McFarland assisted by Dr. Growt of Addison took off the digit at the first joint. Mr Beach is doing nicely.

We are pleased to report that the diphtheria patient, Mrs. W. W Clingerman is improving quite rapidly and there are no more cases in the village, all of which indicates that our health regulations are well taken care of, also that with modern methods of treating these deadly diseases the danger of fatal results are reduced to zero. With anti toxin and serum vaccine the world has been freed from a yoke of ages.

We stated last week the Waldron Recorder had suspended publication. We should have said the Recorder has been taken over by the owner Frank Nevin who has returned from California and Mr. Bancroft has surrendered his lease. Nevin in his editorial says he will at all times be found rooting for the taxpayers and paying particular attention to all news which is printable. He don't give any formula for what he considers printable matter according to Hoyle.

A Parent Teachers meeting occurred at the school building on Monday evening and while not so largely attended as hoped for, the evening was an instuctive one. A good program was renered consisting of music, readings and the debating team who went to Springport consisting of Miss Ruth Steveson, Theron Randolph and James Meeks gave their speeches as given at Springport. Rev. A. Reiser of the Baptist church was then called and gave a strong dissertation on discipline both at home and in school. His remarks as usual hit the nail squarely on the head. The next meeting will be held Feb. 20. 1924. The speaker will be from the University of Ann Arbor.

Word received from Mrs Burr Anderson at Ann Arbor says that her daughter is now in the contageous ward of the University Hospital with the worst case of diphtheria known for some time there. She is attended by three nurses and hope of recovery is very remote.

A rich mine of high grade glass sand has recently been struck near Carleton, Michigan and there is talk of a new glass factory being started. Henry Ford's investigators have also struck glass sand in certain localites, and as Ford is one of the largest users of glass in the United States thus will prove of great value to him.

Why is it that Adams township does not have a Farmers Institute any more. They are mighty interesting meetings and much good can be learned in these gatherings. Other townships hold one every winter and they are looked forward to with great anticipation. Our farmers are progressive in every way and there is no reason why they can't have an Institute.

We understand that the job is let to a contractor from Ohio to build the gravel pike from Knowles school house to the old territorial road at Moscow and operations will begin upon this highway as soon as spring opens. People who are worried about getting to Jackson from North Adams next summer need not give themselves any uneasiness since by traveling about seven miles futher they can reach Jackson all the way on first class road. The route is three and one half miles east, thence north through Jerome to the old turnpike thence east to Somerset Center then north and angling to the stone blacksmith shop road through Liberty Mills. This route though very crooked, furnishes good transportation.

He Drank it for His Health

The whiskey job over at Locust Corners whereby a chap named Kane came to his death is being investigated and probably will be investigated right along for some time. Another chap called Boyden at Hillsdale as we understand it, is languishing in the county Bastile because he furnished the juice which put Kane to his death. Mrs Kane swore that her estimable spouse usually drank about three times per day just as man would take his coffee, and that he very recklessly paid Boyden $5.00 for two quarts of liquid hell, the same that furnished both his drink and his embalming fluid later. Of course we know that three times per day is not considered excessive, we also know that $2.50 per quart is real low for such a low drinking liquid, and we sometimes wonder why Boyden (foolish fellow) put the bargain day figure on necessities of life as he did.

Anyhow Kane's in Heaven, Boyden's in jail, whiskey is in demand, and the whole moonshine business is looking up. Kane had been more or less shiny all the time since the Hillsdale Fair, and his vision also got impaired but he didn't heed the fog horn; results as stated: Sunshine, moonshine, darkness; moonshine drink, glorious drunk, scrdid wake, another soul in the happy hunting grounds from which no wanderer ever returneth.

Sudden Death Of Silas Schilling

News came Saturday afternoon that Silas Schilling formerly of this vicinity and well known here had been fatally hurt at Jackson about 3:00 of that day. He passed away at the Foote Memorial Hospital at 10 o'clock It seems Mr. Schilling was driving a Ford car at 4 th Street crossing, reputed the most dangerous in Jackson and was hit by an Air Line train. The auto was instantly smashed to smithereens and Mr. Schilling was carried a distance of 800 feet on the pilot, being unconscious when taken to the hospital. Later he rallied and recognized a nephew Floyd Daniels of this place who arrived shortly after Mr. Schilling regained consciousness. However it was seen that his injuries consisted of a broken pelvis bone and internal lascerations.

Mr. Schilling was 65 years of age and had always been an active man. He resided with his son in Jackson and leaves beside the son 4 sisters Mrs George Holcomb and Mrs Lester Daniels of this vicinity, two sisters in northern Michigan, three brothers Stanbury Schilling, Clement Schilling of Hudson, Will Schilling of Glendale, California, three grandsons and one grandaughter.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 9:00 a. m. at the home of his son and at Rollin Baptist church at 1:00 p. m. and interment was at Hudson.

England's Prime Ministers.

The title of prime minister in England was first used by Sir Robert Walpole, who was in office from 1721 to 1742. By this time ministers were being chosen from one political party, and they had begun to act together, so that they obtained the name of the ministry. Their leader was then called the premier or prime minister. This title was not recognized by law until 1905.

This is a geographical name employed throughout Europe to designate the eastern part of the Mediterranean sea and adjacent countries. In a wider sense, it is applied vaguely to the regions eastward from Italy, as far as the Euphrates and the Nile; but more generally is used in a more restricted sense, as including only the coasts of Asia Minor, Syria and Egypt.

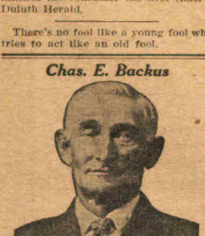
Chas. E. Backus



Health is the Most Valuable Asset You Have

Newago, Mich.—"Some years ago I was troubled with dizziness, palpitation, loss of appetite and sore and painful stomach. I tried the best physicians I could hear of, and also several put-up medicines, but nothing did me any good. Some physicians said it was my heart; some said it was my stomach; while others said it was my nerves. I got so bad I could not work very steadily, when a friend came to see me and insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was discouraged, but tried it anyway, and after taking the second bottle I felt much better. I then bought six bottles and I believe the 'Discovery' saved my life. It was rightfully named 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I would recommend it to all who need such a medicine.—Chas. E. Backus.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Lansing—The annual convention of the Michigan State Association of Fairs was held here.

Ionia—George Majinska, 20 years old, was killed last week when he fell across a buzz saw. He was sawing wood at the farm of a neighbor in Odessa Township.

Lansing—The counties of the state paid out $54,923 in 1923 for chickens, rabbits, sheep and other fowls and animals killed by dogs, according to a report completed by the auditor general.

Ann Arbor—The Ann Arbor railroad has petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue $1,092,000 of equipment trust certificates to finance the purchase of 500 box cars.

Lansing—Floyd C. A. Lockwood, 45 years old, for 20 years an employe of the local postoffice department and for the last six years postmaster at North Lansing, died here recently, following a brief illness.

Paw Paw—Southwestern Michigan fruit growers have checked over the damage done to their orchards by the cold wave. Mild weather up to the recent cold wave had a tendency make buds and wood tender.

Pontiac—The pulpit of Rev. Father T. J. Ryan, who died here recently, after 30 years in charge of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic parish, will be filled by Rev. Father James B. Thornton, of St. John's church, Monroe.

Lansing—Announcement has been made here that arrangements have been completed for the annual Lansing Automobile Show, Feb. 5 to 9 in the Hudson-Essex garage, near the business center. The exhibition promises to be one of the largest in Michigan.

Kalamazoo—Dr. Benjamin Southworth, 45 years old, of Schoolcraft, one of the most widely known physicians of southwestern Michigan, died here recently. He owed his wide popularity in several counties to the fact he would drive many miles day or night, whenever called.

Grand Rapids—While the Rev. H. E. Walker, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, was delivering the funeral oration at the services for Gilbert Coffey, in the church last week, Joseph C. Coade, 63, grocer and lifelong friend of Coffey, died of apoplexy. Coade was stricken as the minister began the sermon.

Lansing—Letters have been addressed by the State Department of Conservation to all of the Representatives and to the two Senators from Michigan, asking them to introduce and support legislation which would cause the Federal government to deed the unused portion of Round Island, adjacent to Mackinac Island, to the State.

Detroit—Despite the fact that in December, 1922, Detroit postal receipts made so large a gain over the same month in, the preceding year that the city ranked second in the country, the continued heavey business done at the local postoffice once more brought it well up in the gains for December, 1923, over those of December, 1922.

Lansing—A request has been received from the Traverse City state hospital by the administrative board for an increase in its $50000 appropriation for the construction of a dining hall for women patients. It was explained that by authorizing the expenditure of a greater sum a combination building which would afford a recreation room for the patients, can be erected.

Lansing—A tentative highway program for 1924, suggesting total expenditures of approximately $22,000,000, has been submitted to the highway finance committee of the state administrative board by Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers. The program probably will be revised to meet the state's financial condition, Rogers said. It allots the cost, about $5,000,000, to the counties, $15,000,000 to to the state, and $2,000,000 to the federal government.

Port Huron—Police Court jury recently convicted William Ellerthorpe, Clyde Township farmer, of not paying his dog tax, and so far, the constitutionality of State Dog Tax law has been upheld. Mr. Ellerthorpe, however, says that he will appeal his conviction to the Circuit Court and if necessary, to the Supreme Court in his effort to have the law declared unconstitutional. Mr. Ellerthorpe, following his conviction by a jury of six men, was fined $10. The fine has not been paid pending his appeal.

Marquette—Shortening of the open season on partridge in the upper peninsula will be one of the questions to be considered at the spring meeting of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association. Delegates from the lower peninsula to the annual meeting of the Congress of Michigan Game associations, held in Marquette reported that only a few partridge are left in the lower part of the state and that unless a closed season in southern Michigan is ordered, there is a danger of the birds becoming extinct.

Lansing—The state public utilities commission has demanded of all railroads operating in the state, compliance with the cab curtain and bell ringer laws. Letters set to railroad officials declared that complaints have been received that unnecessarily large openings are left in the fronts of cabs. The commission requested that the cabs be made as light as possible, therefore insuring more comfort for enginemen and inducing safer operation. The bell-ringer law passed by the 1923 legislature, specifies that bells shall be automatic.

Ann Arbor—Miss Adeline B. Ladd, 85 years old for many years teacher of history and Latin in the high schools of Ann Arbor and St. Clair, died here recently.

Detroit—Detroit's assessed valuation for the coming year will be $175,000,000 in excess of last year's, according to an estimate made by Joseph A. Schulte, president of the board of assessors.

Lansing—Rev. Thomas Riley, 81 years old, dean of the Lansing Ministerial association, died at his home here recently. He was formerly circuit rider in Michigan and Ohio, coming to Lansing in 1884.

Grand Rapids—Charles S. Wilson, 79, Civil war veteran and former municipal employe, died recently. He had lived here since 1879, and was city marshal, in 1888, he raised the first flag over the present city hall.

Grand Rapids—Rev. Watson Groen, of Grand Haven, has accepted a call of the Creston Christian church, of Grand Rapids, and will be installed here February 1. The new minister is a graduate of Calvin Theological school and Princeton.

Hart—The new Oceana County Hospital has been opened. The capacity of the hospital is 12 beds, and it is believed that it is large enough for the needs of the county. The hospital was realized through public subscription obtained from all parts of the county.

Ann Arbor—The gift of a $1,000 bond from Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry Association, to the University of Michigan has been announced. The income will provide an annual prize to be awarded the best essays written by a forestry student.

Cheboygan—An additional 612 acres at the west end of Mackinac Island has been acquired by the State Park Commission for $75,000. The land, which now is occupied by the Wawashakana golf course, was the site of a battle between American and British forces in the war of 1812.

Muskegon—For the first time in its history Muskegon's $1,500,000 water works system is on a self-supporting basis. The revenue from the plant for 1924 is expected to pay not only the costs of operation, water main extension, but also the bonds falling due and interest.

Pontiac—A recommendation that Oakland County bond itself for $450,000 for the erection of a new county infirmiary, contagious disease hospital, tuberculosis hospital and juvenile detention home on the present county farm site, has been made by the committee of supervisors appointed in October to study the situation.

Freemont—A campaign is being launched in Newaygo county under the leadership of Miss Carrie L. Carter, Newaygo county school commissioner, to lessen the danger of automobiles hitting children walking along the highway. Children will be taught to use the left hand side of the road, thus enabling them to see cars approaching.

Flint—The first Boy Scout troop ever organized at the Michigan School for the Deaf, and as far as is known, the first organization of its kind in Michigan, has been formed here. There are 12 boys in the troop, all mutes and the leader, Clyde Stevens, a teacher, also is deaf. Fifty members are expected in the troop when the organization is completed.

Cheboygan—For the first time in many years the straits between the mainland and Bois Blanc Island were open for navigation, at the first of the year, not even a light layer of ice having covered them. The Walker's Point coast guards have returned to the mainland for the winter season. Their crossing was somewhat perilous owing to a heavy blizzard.

Lansing—Fourteen years ago a Lansing business firm wrote to the secretary of state of Missouri at Jefferson City. No answer was received. A few days ago the letter reached its proper journey's end. For all these years it had lain behind some cases in the postoffice of that city. Then someone conceived the idea of tidying up and moved the cases. The letter was found.

Ann Arbor—Benjamin F. Mortenson, of Detroit, a graduate of the law school of the University of Michigan in 1911, has informed university officials of the establishment of three scholarship funds, each amounting to $3,000, open to graduates of Detroit parochial or public schools, who may wish to attend the university, Michigan Agricultural college, or the University of Detroit.

Port Huron—St. Clair County roads will be marked by approximately 1,500 new cast iron signs next spring, W. W. Cox, county road engineer, has announced. The signs will warn against parking and will inform drivers of railroad crossings, dangerous curves and schools that lie ahead. To save money on the purchase price, St. Clair joined Macomb, Monroe, Wayne and Washtenaw counties in buying 6,625 signs.

Ludington—By the favorable vote of four townships in Beazie county, local funds are now assured for the completion of the paving of M 11 from the end of the concrete in Oceana county to Traverse City. The distance is approximately 85 miles and the expense is estimated at $2,500,000. Tentative promise to undertake this work and push it to completion in 1924 was made early last fall by Governor Groesbeck when a delegation from western Michigan presented their cause to the state administrative board.

Lansing—William R. Roberts, 55 years old, colored, whose handwriting will be found on thousands of diplomas held by graduates of Lansing and Michigan schools, and who also engrossed the papers of many state documents and protographs of legislators died here. His ability was recognized throughout the state, and for years he engrossed the diplomas for the M. A. C., Mt. Pleasant Normal, Lansing and Charlotte high schools and others. Mr. Roberts had been employed at the State Capitol for 22 years.

MRS. YOUNG ENTHUSIASTIC

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amherst St., Charleston, S.C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it.

Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Lord Was Far-Sighted.

Nearly a century ago Lord Lonsdale, owner of coal mining property along the northwest coast of England, near Whitehaven, asked the government for a concession to mine coal under the sea for a distance of ten miles from the shore and for an extent of 20 miles along the coast. For this he offered to pay the sum of £50,000. The thing seemed so impractical to the British government that they acceded at once to the proposition, feeling that they had sold the noble lord something resembling a gold brick. But science kept on developing the mining industry and now the coal mines at Whitehaven extend four and a half miles out to sea and 1,500 feet beneath the bottom. The lessees pay to the heirs of Lord Lonsdale more royalty every year than the original price of the concession.

Turkeys Are Particular About Winter Quarters

Turkey raising is a distinct and separate business from that of raising chickens; the nature of the turkey is so different from that of the chicken that it requires different management altogether. The turkey still retains many of its wild haunts. Then, of late years, serious diseases have played sad havoc with the business in many parts of the country. Blackhead, particularly, has carried off many thousands, compelling some of the largest growers to quit the business. The farmer who has never had turkeys on his farm is not likely to suffer, provided he starts with perfectly healthy stock.

When diseases can be avoided, the cost of raising a turkey is less than that of raising a chicken, while the former weighs more and sells for more per pound. The fact that turkeys will, from the time they are eight weeks old until winter sets in, obtain the greater part of their living from the bugs, grasshoppers, waste grain and weed seeds picked up in their wanderings over the farm, insures their maintenance throughout the summer at a low cost to the grower.

Breeding stock should always be selected from the flock in the fall, before any have been marketed, at which time the choicest specimens can be picked out. If this has not been done there should be no further delays. Those selected probably would bring a little more money than some of those marketed, but they are also worth more as breeders than the poor ones. Strong, active, healthy birds—those that have never been afflicted with a serious disease—are wanted if the future turkey crops are to prove profitable. The old turkey raiser should separate his breeders from those that are to be marketed before fattening commences, as breeding stock is easily injured by becoming overfat.

Up to their fifth year turkeys are profitable as breeders, though it is a good plan to change gobblers every year, especially if some of the young females are retained for breeding. Hens are not fully matured until two years old and they are at their best during the next two or three years. During the mating season the proper proportion in which to divide the sexes is from six to ten hens with one gobbler.

The breeding stock should receive good care during the winter months. Without proper care and attention, as well as suitable quarters, turkeys will not go through winter in good health, and, consequently, will not be in such good condition for the breeding season, and that means poor success with the young. Young turkeys bred from healthy stock are hard enough to raise, without the extra handicap of unhealthy parentage.

Turkeys do not thrive in damp, stuffy quarters in winter. A well-lighted open shed or loft, fitted up so as to prevent direct draughts but having good ventilation at all times, makes a good place. Turkeys can stand a good deal of cold, but they cannot stand close, foul-smelling quarters. Fix up some broad perches a couple of feet from the floor; provide troughs for grit and water and, in real cold weather, put some straw or other litter on the floor. Feed corn and other grains regularly and, during severe weather, give an occasional warm mash.

White Rocks and White Orpingtons Are Similar

The characteristics of White Rocks and White Orpingtons are very similar. Sometimes it is quite hard for the inexperienced to make a distinction between the two breeds. The White Rocks should have a yellow beak, while the White Orpingtons have a white or pinkish white beak. Both breeds have reddish-bay eyes and in each breed the comb, face, wattles and ear-lobes should be a bright red. The shanks and toes of the White Rocks are a bright yellow, while with the White Orpingtons the shanks and toes should be white or pinkish white. You will note, therefore, that the chief characteristic to look for in distinguishing one breed from the other is the color of the beak, also that of the shank and toes.

It is Seldom Desirable to Cross Chicken Strain

It is seldom desirable to cross strains. It can be compared, in a way, to crossing breeds; the first cross may appear to give uniform offspring, but in the second generation many undesirable qualities are liable to appear. If you have reason to believe that some other strain will give you better results, gradually work into the pure strain. Crossing the strain may set you back several years.

Diseases of Fowls.

When a fowl sneezes, waters slightly at the eyes and nostrils, and the face puffs up, this indicates a common cold. When accompanied by a rattling in the throat, the trouble is bronchitis. Difficult breathing indicates pneumonia. Canker in the mouth means diphtheria.

When Duck Eggs Don't Hatch.

When the eggs from a certain pen of ducks do not hatch well, the trouble often may be corrected by changing the male to another pen or by introducing a new leader.

Incubation of Goose Eggs.

The period of incubation of goose eggs varies from 28 to 30 days. The first eggs usually are set under hens, while the last eggs which the goose lays may be hatched either under hens or under the goose if she becomes broody.

Attention to Pullets.

Pullets are the money-makers for the next year. They will give their highest and most economical production in their first year and demand care at this time.

"Miss America" Declares Tanlac Wonderful Health Giving Tonic

Miss Campbell in "Miss America" crown which she has won on two occasions.

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell, twice proclaimed "Miss America," has taken TANLAC and endorses it in a statement recently given to the women of America. In this statement, Miss America declares that Good Health is the basis of all Beauty, and advises women who would be beautiful to "first find good health."

Her complete statement as given is as follows: "I consider it a great privilege to be able to tell the thousands of women everywhere what a great tonic TANLAC is. Health is the basis of all beauty. Without good health, one is apt to be run-down, nervous, underweight, high-strung, anemic. Indigestion drives the roses from a woman's cheeks and robs her of that radiant quality of womanhood that is real beauty.

"I have taken TANLAC and I do not hesitate to say that it is a wonderful health-giving tonic. It has brought relief and good health to many women, and with good health one may have a measure of beauty that will overcome shortcomings in face and figure.

"Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a well-rounded figure, a lovable disposition, go hand in hand with good health. To those searching for beauty, I would say—'First of all, Find Good Health.' The TANLAC treatment has proven itself a boon to womankind, and I recommend it."

Miss Campbell has written a booklet on Health and Beauty which may be secured by filling out the coupon below.

Convicts Are Injured In Auto Accident

Sergeant Joseph Kearney of the Michigan State Police and stationed at Jackson, was recently taking thirty prisoners from the state prison at Jackson to a road building job to which the men had been paroled, when the truck in which they were riding was ditched and one of the convicts seriously injured.

truck was forced to the ditch by appraching automobilet, he reported, and upon discovering that one of the men was badly hurt and another in need of immediate medical attention, he hailed a passing motorist who took them to the county jail at Mason where they were treated. Sergeant Kearney reported that during the accident all of the men acted in almost commendable manner. They were put in another truck and taken on to Meridan, where a convict road camp had been established.

Bank Robber At Republic Apprehended

We will remember about the bank robbery at Republic Mich when the cashier attempted to put up a resistance and was shot by the bandit and severely wounded. State Police will be given the credit of this capture and they should be as it was their job entirely. With the arrest of Joseph Parent, alias "The Wolverine," alias Spaulding, and Renier, who on September 19 held up and robbed the State Bank at Republic, Mich, of $10,200 in cash, the concluding chapter in one of the most unusual crime stories ever written into the records of the Michigan State Police was begun.

Parent was arrested in Warren Ohio, by Trooper Charles Burnham of the Neguanee detachment of the Michigan State Police. Sergeant John Palmer of the Lansing detachment and a city detective of Cleveland and is now in jail in Marquette, Mich. Following the bank robbery, Parent left a trail through Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Ohio before he was finally appreh ended on December 12.

A few days after holding up the cashier and a teller of the Republic bank, Parent addressed a letter to the cashier thanking him for the money and signing it "The Wolverine." It was one of the boldest bank robberies in Michigan in a long time, and for three months the members of the State Police worked in an effort to apprehend the robber, picking up here and there bits of information that were woven into the chain of evidence that led to his arrest in the Ohio city.

Parent's arrest was directly the result of a love affair with a girl who worked in a Cleveland restaurant, the police say. The one person in Michigan who is believed to have known of the affair made known the fact a short time prior to Parent's arrest in Cleveland.

DISCOVERS GOLD IN WISCONSIN

Richland Center, Wis.—Wisconsin is now among the gold-producing states of the Union. Ore, containing $10 worth of gold and an ounce of silver in each ton, has been discovered by W. E. Warren, prospector, in Bogus cave on Bogus bluff, a mile and a half from Gotham, Richland county.

Assays have been returned to Mr. Warren with the ore he had tested, which will convince the most dubious. The ore was exhibited at the Richland county fair.

"I have known that there was gold there for a long time," said Mr. Warren. "I have received assays from other samples tested which proved them to contain between $4 and $8 worth of gold and a little silver."

Mr. Warren believes that this discovery will pay him to install machinery to remove the ore from the ground.

Cave Famous Many Years.

"Ten dollars to the ton is a high percentage for low grade ore," he continued. "And then, too, the deeper I dig the better it gets."

Bogus cave has been famous for many years. Its history is a continuous story of mystery and adventure.

Between 1872 and 1875 it was connected with the operations of a daring gang of counterfeiters. Signals have been seen flashing from Bogus bluff, which were answered as far away as Blue Mound, more than 25 miles.

"I don't believe the counterfeiters ever made their money here," said Mr. Warren. "The rooms are too dark and too small. They may have used it for a storing place, however."

Before the days of the counterfeiters Bogus cave was a refuge for Indians. Many Indian relics have been unearthed by Mr. Warren in his excavations in the cave.

"In one room I found a white domelike structure, which must have been used at one time for an altar," said Warren.

Yellow Stone Gave It Name.

The name Bogus bluff did not come from the counterfeit money believed to have been made there, Mr. Warren tells. In 1850 his father began digging around Bogus for gold, and as his efforts were rewarded with only a yellow stone which looked like gold, but was valueless, the neighbors said he was digging "bogus" gold.

Mr. Warren's father was forced to give up his work because of his lack of money. He told his son that some day he must return and continue the enterprise. W. E. Warren was born in 1853, but it was not until three years ago that he could save enough money to return from the West.

The land around Bogus cave is owned by Ward Lamberson, Richland Center. The miners have promised to give Mr. Lamberson one-fifth of whatever they find.

Mr. Warren's father furnished him with a detailed map of the cave which had been given him by an Indian of the Chippewa tribe. It is rather generally believed in Richland county that Mr. Warren is really digging for a buried treasure.

Auto Held Responsible for Lop-Footed Persons

New York.—Observe, as you walk along the streets, the position of the feet of pedestrians. You will be surprised to see that in numerous instances while the left foot is turned outward the right travels in a straight line and often actually "toes in."

The right foot of the Manhattanite seems literally to be following in the footsteps of the moccasin-clad aborigines, from whom his ancestors wrested possession of the soil. They were "pigeon toed." This phenomenon, apparent in all large cities, is of comparatively recent appearance and has hitherto been unnoticed even by physiologists. But of late the tendency to "toe in" with the right foot has become so marked that search has been made for the cause.

This cause has been found to be the automobile. The motorcar accelerator is turning the walking right foot of booted modern man inward to the line of his barefoot primeval ancestors.

Finds $5,680 in Waste Paper.

New York.—A man emptying waste paper on the pier at Old Orchard, Me., found a long, black pocketbook containing $5,680 in checks, cash and notes, and bearing the name Edgar E. Rhodes. Mr. Rhodes explained that he missed the pocketbook the day before. It is supposed that he laid it on a shelf in his studio and it was brushed into the waste paper basket

Daughter for Adam and Eve.

London.—Those familiar with the story of the Garden of Eden—and that's everyone—pricked up their ears, figuratively, when it was announced that a daughter had been born to Eve, wife of A. D. Adam, at 26 Myddleton square. It wasn't announced whether the child will bear a biblical name.

"Old Curiosity Shop" Is Sold.

London.—The "Old Curiosity Shop" in Lincoln's Inn fields, familiar to all lovers of Dickens, has been sold for $11,250. The purchaser, J. A Phillips, said he bought the shop to preserve it as a curiosity.

He's A Little Mad Evidently

The editor of the Hudson Post has recently got warmed up and reared on his hind legs concerning the Ku Kluv crosses which were burned in Hndson a short time ago. It seems that the K.K.K started to burn one of their insignias in the streets and H.S. Albaugh of Pittsford, Mich., driving a Ford coupe with malice aforethought evidently ran his car right smack into the cross and knocked it galley west. He then backed away and made his exit. Judging from what the Post scribe says the occasion must have been quite an interesting one for all concerned but we see no particular grounds for criticising anybody. The scribe calls it a "disgraceful and sacreligious scene." and further says, "They work in the dark, and attempt to keep their identity a secret. Whether it is reason of fear of the law, or because of the silliness of the proceeding, that they do not wish their identity disclosed, we do not know. Probably a little of both, One who would be foolish enough to pay his money that the Grand Wizard of the Klan could loll up in the lap of luxury and debauchery undoubtedly would not want his neighbor to know it. There is one way to enforce the law and that is by standing back of and lending support to the duly constituted officers of the law in the enforcement thereof.

A band that works behind masks and in the dark, can bring forth no good. We trust that anotner act such as was perpetrated on our streets on Monday night will be taken cognizance of by the proper officials. The appearance of an officer or two, or a small band of citzens, would send the perpetrators scurrying for darkness like rats for their holes."

Can it be possible that Catholicism has got its grimy paw on the Post Scribe's neck? Or has Popery ganvered him in? Shades of Paris! what next?

We understand Hudson has a Catholic church but we didn't suppose that any good one hundred per cent American printer was ever controlled by such ecclesiastical bodies. If he is then his slug will be become "30" in the rural districts right speedily. the chap who put the Kibosh on the fiery cross had a joke or two up his sleeve and we enjoy the joke with him, but leave it to the parties concerned Brother; they'll make fun enough before they are through to amuse the whole world

And that reminds us we saw a fiery cross burned in North Adams the other night but nobody paid the least attention to it and nobody went where it was; evidenty crosses don't cut much figure with any of our citizens, but we believe most of the church people thiuk that this kind of allegorical work is quite wrongly put, and we agree with them.

Carelessness Causes much Child Mortality

"Where there is smoke there must be fire. The death of a child from mechanical suffocation, while a tragic occurrence, is but one manifestation of a much vaster and more dangerous evil—that of human carelessness." Thus commented Dr. R. M. Olin, Michigan Commissioner of Health, after hearing of the suffocation of a 10 months old child from stearate of zinc.

Stearate of zinc makes excellent powder for toilet use and also for dusting furniture, but the dangers of letting it lie around for children to get hold of is well illustrated by the case in point. While no more harmful than any other powders, stearate of zinc should be placed out of the reach of youngsters' prying fingers.

Far too many cases of child death are caused by the careless mother who leaves a pail of water on the floor while she answers the telephone. Others give chiidren easy access to tubs of hot water on wash day and deaths from scalding result. Mortality of children who take poisons by mistake, or medicine at the wrong time, is also traceable to neglectful parents. The "loose gun around the place," always followed up by the "didn't know it was loaded" plea, is so common an occurrence as to barely warrant mention.

Items such as these form that many more causative agents in this country's high child mortality rate. Exercise a little care, folks, and at least cut down your funeral expenses!

Will our Catholic Friends help Monte Mario

At Cleveland, Ohio, there is a movement on foot to raise three million dollars for a Jesuit university. The appeal is to all citizens, regardless of creed, and there will doubtless be generous response from many non-Catholic citizens who consider that the Jesuit control is merely an incidental feature. "The money is to be used"—we quote an editorial in a Cleveland daily—"In starting the great building project that is to provide the new university, successor of St. Ignatius college, with a spacious and beautiful home on the eastern heights, where thousands of youths not now provided for in that important respect may pursue college studies in all the liberal arts and sciences under auspices and within environments approaching the ideal. That, as we understand it, is what the Methodists are trying to do in Rome—and on the heights, too

The long story of Catholic failure in Italy ought to entitle some other group to a right to see what it can do. The history of Catholicism in Rome, much of which it ought to be glad to let the world forget, gives it no equitable claim to a monopoly. Protestant prospective donors in Cleveland ought to have a full knowledge of the attitude of the Catholic church toward Protestant institutions. But it is a little hard to have satisfactory reciprocal relations with an organization which claims equal rights where it is in a minority and exclusive rights wherever it has the power to enforce them.—The Christian Century.

Is It Well?

It is stated that the old battleship Louisiana which was being towed to its graveyard to be scrapped was lost at sea. During the trip a severe storm came up and the tow lines had to be cast off, leaving the old Amazon to her fate. This would not have been such a casualty but there were some human souls on board and if the old vessel really went down she took these brave men along with her. It is interesting yet pathetic to observe the final disposition of these old fighting craft. The real truth about them is never published by the government but more than one reason exists which would lead the average citizen to believe that they are far from useless. We can scarcely understand why a ponderous fighting machine like one of these, but fifteen or twenty years of age is worn out and should be either sunk beneath the waves or used as a target to practice gunnery upon. The cost running up into the millions should be a factor in determining the final disposition of these mammoth fighters. There is a kink some where in our naval management when a mammoth fighting machine built with all the latest devices both electrical and steam should become obsolete and useless inside the above short period of years. Furthermore in times of peace why build such expensive toys? Toys seems like an insipid definition but nevertheless it applies thoroughly because for every battleship that really engages in war 50 are built for parade purposes only, and their only mission seems to be to junket about the world with crews of highly trained swivel chair officers and kid glove sailors and marines. To send a fleet of these dreadnaughts on a trip around the globe as has been done time and again for a show and to season the crews costs fabulous sums of upkeep and maintenance, yet it is done year after year and beyond newspaper reports the great masses of taxpayers in our country know practically nothing as to where their money has gone. A short investigation into the doings of the naval and army boards will convince most any skeptic that millions are literally being frittered away by this process and the results are about as beneficial as the memory of a stick of candy eaten by a baby.

Somebody has said that the vocaton of us poor little uninformed souls in inland villages and cities far removed from the capitol at Washington should be something besides criticising the government, yet we are the government, and our votes and our individual desires have put the officials in their seats. Having done all this are we supposed to be totally unfit to know or dream of the affairs of the Nation? Later report says the Louisana has been locatsd drifting near Cape Henry, so it is possible she will after all grace the junk yard.

Speakers For Farmers Week

While the list of speakers who will appear upon the general programs at farmers week has not yet been announced, it is understood that a line-up of interesting and instructive platform talent is being scheduled.

Special exhibits, covering almost every phase of rural life and agriculture, are being prepared and will be shown in a new way this year Entertainment features will again include the annual livestock parade moving picture programs, special gatherings for the ladies who attend the conference, and other events of interest.

Crowds at the annual farmers week have run above 5,000 in recent years, and plans are being made to accommodate another record attendance this winter.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON III

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

Banks are defined as "institutions chartered to receive deposits and make loans." What is a bank deposit? What is a bank loan?

J. H. Puelicher

BANK DEPOSIT = money or checks left with a bank to be kept safe from thieves, fire or other loss; to earn interest, if in a savings account; to be convenient for the future use of the depositor; to be loaned out to earn the expenses of the bank's services, and interest for the depositor when in an interest bearing account.

BANK LOAN = advance of money to help business enterprise so that business may again help the earner and saver by giving employment.

In the Middle Ages safes were very few. Goldsmiths kept their jewelry in strong boxes, and also accepted for safekeeping, for a fee, money packed and marked with the owner's name. In those days money saved lay idle; today it is put to work by banks for the benefit of the depositor and the community.

A Turn of Fate

As a private in the 125th Infantry, Long served overseas, participating in two of the major battles and other squirmishes. He was a good soldier, but due to his broken health caused by an injury to his spine, he was forced to the hospital. After long months of suffering and longing for his loved ones, he was sent home—a casual.

In the meantime, the wife of Private Long was, of necessity working long hours in a vain attempt to support herself and little girl. But, because she was untrained for the business world, and not even properly trained for domestic life, she was compelled to give up her struggle for self-support, and, together with her child, she went to Garden, the home of her mother, until such time as her husband returned from the war.

At last the day dawned when James did return. Then the little family resumed life's duties with renewed vigor, and all went well—but for only a time.

As if fate had decreed against them, the next misfortune which befell the little family was death of the mother after the birth of their second child. Heartbroken, the father placed his two little ones in the care of one of the societies, and he himself was placed in vocational training by the government. His health preventing him from continuous training, his rehabilitation was delayed, and, his government compensation not being large enough to allow him making any payment to the society for the care of his children they were about to release the children and he was at a loss to know what to do.

But good luck sought him out, and he was told about the home the American Legion had established at Otter Lake, Mich. for the children of deceased and disabled service men. Eagerly, James made inquiries about the Children's Billet, and when he learned of the motherly care the children at the Billet receive and the homelike features which they enjoy, he applied for admission for his two little girls. The Legion was only too willing to assume the care of these unfortunate kiddies, and soon they will be growing rapidly under the environment of the "happy home for happy kiddies", which the Legion and its Auxiliary have provided for the "Kiddies of their Buddies."

Maple-Sugar Makers, do Your Tapping Early

Makers of maple sugar have lost half and even more of their crops many seasons by not being prepared for the first runs, says the United States department of agriculture. It is a good policy to tap early in the season, not only in order to obtain the earlier runs of sap but also because these early runs are generally the sweetest and therefore the best sugar producers.

All sugar makers are familiar with "sugar weather." In general, the season is ready to open during the middle or last part of February in the southern section and later in the northern ones, when the days are becoming warm, the temperature going above 32 degrees F., and the nights are still frosty. If the days are very bright, warm, and sunny the sap starts with a rush, but soon slackens. A high wind, warm spell, or a heavy freeze checks the flow, but the return of seasonable weather causes it to start again.

Records of opening and closing dates kept in an Ohio sugar camp show the opening season as early as February 13 in 1891 and 1906. The latest opening date recorded was March 27 in 1885. The number of days of flow varied from 9 to 50, the average being about 30 days.

Three years more, under present conditions, and there will be no more salmon for the canneries. Ruthless competition and piratic methods of canners and fishermen have caused this condition.

Captain MacMillan and his crew on the steamer Bowdoin frozen in the ice off the shores of Greenland, chat by wireless daily with neighbors living in the tropics. They have heard concerts from stations in England, Germany, Holland, Mexico, France, Italy, Norway, Japan, Spain and the United States. They have talked with Hawaii, more than 5,000 miles.

Harry Lauder is just Scotchman enough to refuse to give any shows on Sunday. On his second American tour he was contracted for Sunday work without his knowledge. He has never been caught that way since. For seventeen years he has had but one manager, a Jew, Wm. Morris, who is said to be one of the squarest men in business.

The latest invention in the line of sanitary utensils is an electric floor scrubber. This machine is pushed along the floor by two handles similar to a wheelbarrow. As it travels there is a wheel carrying a number of regular floor brushes which is revolved very rapidly by an electric motor. Tanks on top of the apparatus supply proper amounts of soap or scouring powder and water. For large areas this machine is said to do the work of ten persons and the electric juice is taken from a common fixture and through a long cable wound on a drum. As the machine advances this cable is unwound. The machine takes a swath 30 inches wide and moves at 150 feet per minute, requiring two men to operate. One man follows behind with a mop.

The Delirium House of California

Some years ago the widow of the late Mr. Winchester millionaire manufacturer of fire arms of Connecticut, finding herself alone in the world and with an enormous fortune on her hands determined to remove to California's balmy clime, and peing a believer in the spiritualist faith she began to harbor strange ideas. It is said she developed a hallucination that she ought to erect a mansion and as long as she was in the process death would not come to her. Therefore she expended literally oceans of money in the construction of her "spook house" as it has since been called by the neighbors. The woman certainly must have been a little off in her think tank but accounts of the house she caused to be built are still the wonder of the times. Thirty-nine years ago Mrs. Winchester began the work which progressed steadily up to her death which occurred about six months or a year ago. Never a day passed in the thirty-nine years but the rasp of the carpenter's saw and the rat-atat of his hammer was heard in and about the premises. It is not positively known that all the rooms have been discovered but to date 144 are catalogued. 2,000 different doors, 10,000 windows, 150,000 panes of glass are among the little items of the house. The residence is four stories in height, has 25 bath rooms, ranging from a common zinc tub to the most elaborate fixtures of silver plate and rich mosaic floors. There are a number of kitchens with shiny fixtures, fireproof and burglar-proof vaults, gold plated electric fixtures and a magnificent pipe organ in the main dining hall which is 30 x 40 feet and finished in mahogany and walnut elegantly carved. In fact the whole house is as beautifully and expensive as it could be built, this poor old deranged woman having no other use for her money than to spend it. She employed a real army of servants and care-takers but none of them ever saw the whole interior and nobody knows for what or why so many of these rooms were equipped with electric alarms with bells hidden in the ceilings and in unexpected places. Recently the property has fallen into the hands of outside parties and is open to the public as a sort of a museum. Popular Mechanics magazine for February shows a birds-eye view of this wonderful mansion and it resembles a small city. There are towers and additions running in all directions. The total cost is said to have been $5,000,000.

Farmers to Try Luck at Cattle Judging

Clear the ring for "Dad", for the old boy himself is going to unlimber his judging cane and take a chance on picking the winner in the livestock show rings at M. A. C. during Farmers Week, Feb. 4-8.

College students, high school students, boys and girls club members, and about all other classes of novices at the farming game have been seriously engaged in livestock judging contests for years. Teams have met at county, state, national and international events to decide the best pickers of blue ribbon stock,—but always the events were listed for students.

The idea that maybe the real farmer himself knew something about livestock finally filtered through to someone's mind, and as a result behold the special event for practical, "practicing" farmers of the state, which is booked for farmers week.

Winners at last year's International Livestock Show from M. A. C. herds will be included in the list of stock to be judged. The events will cover many classes. Any farmer who is particularly well acquaiuted with one class of stock may try his hand at selecting blue ribbon winners from the classs. It will be an informal event, open to everybody.

Incidentally, more than 500 Smith Hughes high school agricultural students from the state will enter special judging contests during Farmers Week. These men will come from more than 70 different schools.

Final preparation of exhibits and arrangement of programs is being completed at the college in preparation for the reception of another record crowd of Farmers Week guests. More than 5,000 attended last year.

State Farm Groups Plan Annual Meets

Thirty different state agriculturnl associations and groups will hold meetings at the Michigan Agricultural College this week during farmers week, which is to be held February 4-8. Many of them will be holding their regular annual meetings, while all will draw a large attendance to swell the crowds at the big state farm conference.

The Michigan state farm bureau comes first in point of number of members among the groups which will gather. Other of the larger units will be the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, the Michigan Breeders and Feeders Association, with its many affiliated breed associations, the Michigan Beekeepers Association, the Michigan Potato Producers Association, the Michigan Soils Association, the Michigan Poultry Association, and various other special groups.

Farmers And Bussinessmen's meeting. January 15, 1924

To The Business men of Hillsdale County:

You are cordially invited and urged to attend a Farmes' and Bussiness's meeting to be held in the Council Room in the City Hall, Hillsdale, on Tuesday Jan. 15, at 1 o'clock P.M. Sharp. Mr. M.L. Noon, Vice president of the State Farm Bureau, will be the speaker and his topic will be the "Farmers' Problem." To those who have heard Mr. Noon it is needless to add he is a wide awake, up to date speaker and understands the problems of the farmer and businessmen.

The farm industry and business interest of Hillsdale county can be greatly improved if the farmer, the merchant, the banker, and newspaper men will get together for the one purpose of bettering conditions in Hillsdale County. Mr Noon can tell us how to do it. Be There.

Yours very truly,
Farmers' and Businessmen's
Comm.

The above invitation was sent out over Hillsdale County, and we understand the meeting was well attended.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

Many Diseases Start from Clogged Intestines

THERE is no reason why you should suffer from constipation. Headaches, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

"What kind of a proposition did that man Hofmeister make you?" he inquired. "He asked me about you, and I told him you're a crackerjack."

"I'm much obliged," replied Jim.

"No use in back-cappin' a fellow that's tryin' to make somethin' of himself," said Bonner. "That ain't good politics, nor good sense. Anything to him?"

"He offered me a salary of seventy-five dollars a month to take charge of his school," said Jim.

"Well," said Con, "we'll be sorry to lose yeh, but you can't turn down anything like that."

"I don't know," said Jim. "I haven't decided."

Bonner scrutinized his face sharply, as if to find out what sort of game he was playing.

"Well," said he, at last, "I hope you can stay with us, o' course. I'm licked, and I never squeal. If the rist of the district can stand your kind of thricks, I can. And say, Jim"—here he grew still more mysterious—"if you do stay, some of us would like to have you be enough of a Democrat to go into the next convention f'r county superintendent."

"Why," replied Jim, "I never thought of such a thing!"

"Well, think of it," said Con. "The county's close, and wid a pop'lar young educator—an' a farmer, too, it might be done. Think of it."

Jim was almost dazed at the number of "propositions" of which he was now required to "think"—and Bonner's did not at first impress him as having anything back of it but blarney. He was to find out later, however, that the wily Con had made up his mind that the ambition of Jim to serve the rural schools in a larger sphere might be used for the purpose of bringing to earth what he regarded as the soaring political ambitions of the Woodruff family. To split the forces which had defeated Mr. Bonner in his own school district, with the very instrument used by the colonel at the last school election—that, to Mr. Bonner, would be a fine thing.

Jim had scarcely taken his seat in the car, facing Jennie Woodruff and Bettina Hansen in the Pullman, when Columbus Brown, pathmaster of the road district and only across the way from residence in the school district, came down the aisle and called Jim to the smoking-room.

"Did an old fellow named Hoffman from Pottawatomie county ask you to leave us and take his school?" he asked.

"Mr. Hofmyer," said Jim, "—yes, he did."

"Well," said Columbus, "I don't want to ask you to stand in your own light, but I hope you won't let him toll you off there among strangers. We're proud of you, Jim, and we don't want to lose you."

"The fact is," said Columbus, "I know that Woodruff district job hain't big enough for you any more; but we can make it bigger. If you'll stay, I believe we can pull off a deal to consolidate some of them districts, and make you boss of the whole shooting match."

"I appreciate this, Clumb," said Jim, "but I don't believe you can do it."

"Well, think of it," said Columbus. "And don't do anything till you talk with me and a few of the other boys."

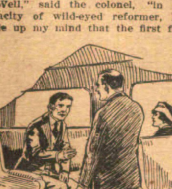
"Think of it" again!

A fine home-coming it was for Jim, with the colonel waiting at the station with a double sleigh, and the chance to ride into the snowy country in the same seat with Jennie—a chance which was blighted by the colonel's placing Bettina and Nils Hansen in the broad rear seat, and Jim in front with himself. The colonel would not allow him to get out and walk when he could really have reached home more quickly by doing so; no, he set the Hansens down at their door, took Jennie home, and then drove the lightened sleigh merrily to the humble cabin of the rather excited young schoolmaster.

"Did you make any deal with those people down in the western part of the state?" asked the colonel. "Jennie wrote me that you've got an offer."

"No," said Jim, and he told the colonel about the proposal of Mr. Hofmyer.

"Well," said the colonel, "in my capacity of wild-eyed reformer, I've made up my mind that the first four miles in the trip is to make the rural teacher's job a bigger job. It's got to be a man's size, woman's size job, or we can't get real men and real women to stay in the work."



"We're Proud of You, Jim."

"I think that's a statesmanlike formulation of it," said Jim.

"Well," said the colonel, "don't turn down the Pottawatomie county job until we have a chance to see what we can do. I'll get some kind of a meeting together, and what I want you to do is to use this offer as a club over this helpless school district. What we need is to be held up. Do the Jesse James act, Jim!"

"I can't, Colonel!"

"Yes, you can, too. Will you try it?"

"I want to treat everybody fairly," said Jim, "including Mr. Hofmyer. I don't know what to do, hardly."

"Well, I'll get the meeting together," said the colonel, "and in the meantime, think of what I've said."

Another thing to think of! Jim rushed into the house and surprised his mother, who had expected him to arrive after a slow walk from town through the snow. Jim caught her in his arms, from which she was released a moment later, quite flustered and blushing.

"Why, James," said she, "you seem excited. What's happened?"

"Nothing, mother" he replied, "except that I believe there's just a possibility of my being a success in the world!"

"My boy, my boy!" said she, laying her hand on his arm, "if you were to die tonight, you'd die the greatest success any boy ever was—if your mother is any judge."

Jim kissed her, and went up to his attic to change his clothes. Inside the waistcoat was a worn envelope, which he carefully opened, and took from it a letter much creased from many foldings. It was the old letter from Jennie, written when the comical mistake had been made of making him the teacher of the Woodruff school. He read only the sentence in which Jennie had told of her father's interest in Jim's success, ending with the underscored words, "I'm for you, too."

"I wonder," said Jim, as he went out to do the evening's tasks, "I wonder if she is for me!"

CHAPTER XVIII

Old Man Simms Speaks.

Young McGeehee Simms was loitering along the snowy way to the schoolhouse bearing a brightly scoured tin pail two-thirds full of water. He had been allowed to act as water superintendent of the Woodruff school as a reward of merit—said merit being an essay on which he received credit in both language and geography on "Harvesting Wheat in the Tennessee Mountains." This had been of vast interest to the school in view of the fact that the Simmses were the only pupils in the school who had ever seen in use that supposedly-obsolete harvesting implement, the cradle. Buddy's essay had been passed over to the class in United States history as the evidence of an eyewitness concerning farming conditions in our grandfathers' times.

"Mr. Simms, I believe?" he said.

"I reckon you must be lookin' for my brother, Raymond, suh," said Buddy.

"I am a-lookin'," said Pete impressively, "for Mr. McGeehee Simms."

"That's me," said Buddy, "but I hain't been doin' nothin' wrong, suh!"

"I have a message here," said Pete, "for Professor James E. Irwin. He's what-ho within, there, ain't he?"

"He's inside, I reckon," said Buddy.

"Then will you be so kind and condescendin' as to stoop so low as to jump so high as to give him this letter?" asked Pete.

Buddy took the letter and was considering of his reply to this remarkable speech, when Pete, gravely saluting, passed on, rather congratulating himself on having staged a very good burlesque of the dignified manners of those queer mountaineers, the Simmses.

The note was from the colonel:

"Please come to the meeting tonight, and when you come, come prepared to hold the district up. If we can't meet the Pottawatomie county standard of wages, we ought to lose you. Everybody in the district will be there. Come late, so you won't hear yourself talked about—I should recommend nine-thirty and war-paint."

It was a crisis, no doubt of that; and the responsibility of the situation rather sickened Jim of the task of teaching. Only one thing kept him from dodging the whole issue and remaining at home—the colonel's matter-of-fact assumption that Jim had become master of the situation. How could he flee, when this old soldier was fighting so valiantly for him in the trenches? So Jim went to the meeting.

How could he impose conditions on the whole school district? How could the colonel expect such a thing of him? And how could anyone look for anything but scorn for the upstart fieldhand from these men who had for so many years made him the butt of their good-natured but none the less contemptuous ridicule? Who was he, anyway, to lay down rules for these substantial and successful men—he who had been for all the years of his life at their command, subservient to their demands for labor—their underling?

The season was nearing spring, and it was a mild thawy night. The windows of the schoolhouse were filled with heads, evidencing the presence of a crowd of almost unprecedented size, and the sashes had been thrown up for ventilation and coolness. As Jim climbed the back fence of the schoolyard, he heard a burst of applause, from which he judged that some speaker had just finished his remarks. There was silence when he came alongside the window at the right of the chairman's desk, a silence broken by the voice of Old Man Simms, saying "Mistah Chairman!"

"The chair," said the voice of Ezra Bronson, "recognizes Mr. Simms."

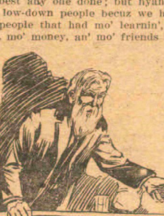
Jim halted in indecision. He was not expected while the debate was in progress. There is no rule of manners or morals, however, forbidding eavesdropping during the proceedings of a public meeting. Therefore he listened to the first and last public speech of Old Man Simms.

"Ah ain't no speaker," said Old Man Simms, "but Ah cain't set here and be quiet an' go home an' face my ole woman an' my boys an' gyuhls withouten sayin' a word fo' the best friend any family evah had, Mr. Jim Irwin." (Applause.) Maybe Ah'll be thought forrard to speak hyah, bein' as Ah ain't no learnin' an' some may think Ah don't pay no taxes; but seein' as how we've took the Blanchard farm, a hundred an' sixty acres for five yeahs, an' move in a week from Sat'day, we pay taxes in our rent, Ah reckon, an' howsomever that may be, Ah've come to feel that you-all won't think hard of me if Ah speak what we-uns feel so strong about Mr. Jim Irwin?"

Old Man Simms finished this exordium with the rising inflection, which denoted a direct question as to his status in the meeting. "Go on!" "You've got as good a right as any one!" "You're all right, old man!" Such exclamations as these came to Jim's ears with scarcely less gratefulness than to those of Old Man Simms—who stammered and went on.

"Ah thank you-all kindly. Gentlemen an' ladies, when Mr. Jim Irwin found us, we was scandalous pore, an' we was wuss'n pore—we was low-down." (Cries of "No—No!")

"Yes, we was, becuz when a man gets in a new place, he's got to lift himse'f up to what folks does where he's come to, or he'll make a place fer himse'f lower'n anybody else. In the mountings we was good people, becuz we done the best we could an' the best any one done; but hyah, we was low-down people becuz we hated the people that had mo' learnin', mo' land, mo' money, an' mo' friends than what we had. My little gyuhls wasn't respectable in their clothes. My childern was igernant, an' triflin', but I was the most triflin' of all. Ah'll leave it to Colonel Woodruff if I was good fer a plug of terbacker, or a bakin' of flour at any sto' in the county. Was I, Colonel? Wasn't I perfectly wuthless an' triflin'?"



"We Owe It All to Jim Irwin."

There was a ripple of laughter, in the midst of which the colonel's voice was heard saying, "I guess you were, Mr. Simms, I guess you were, but——"

"Thankee," said Old Man Simms, as if the colonel had given a really valuable testimonial to his character. "I sho' was! Thankee kindly! An' now, what am I good fer? Cain't I get anything I want at the stores? Cain't I git a little money at the bank, if I got to have it?"

"You're just as good as any man in the district," said the colonel. "You don't ask for more than you can pay, and you can get all you ask."

"Thankee," said Mr. Simms gravely. "What Ah tell you-all is right, ladies and gentlemen. An' what has made the change in we-uns, ladies and gentlemen? It's the wuk of Mr. Jim Irwin with my boy Raymond, the best boy any man evah hed, and my gyuhl, Calista, an' Buddy, an' Jinnie, an' with me an' my ole woman.

"He showed us how to get a toe-holt into this new kentry. He teached the children what orto be did by a rentin' farmer in Ioway. He done lifted us up, an' made people of us. He done showed us that you-all is good people, an' not what we thought you was. Outen what he learned in school, my boy Raymond an' me made as good crops as we could last summer, an' done right much wuk outside. We got the name of bein' good farmers an' good wukkers, an' when Mr. Blanchard moved to town, he said he was glad to give us his fine farm for five years.

"Now, see what Mr. Jim Irwin has done for a pack o' outlaws and outcasts. Instid o' hidin' out from the Hobdays that was laywayin' us in the mountings, we'll be livin' in a house with two chimleys an' a swimmin' tub made outen crock-ryware. We'll be in debt a whole lot—an' we owe it to Mr. Jim Irwin that we got the credit to git in debt with, an' the courage to go on and git out agin!" (Applause.)

"Ah could affo'd to pay Mr. Jim Irwin's salary myse'f, if Ah could. An' there's enough men hyah tonight that say they've been money-he'ped by his teachin' the school to make up mo' than his wages. Let's not let Mr. Jim Irwin go, neighbors! Let's not let him go!"

Jim's heart warmed. "There isn't a man in that meeting," said he to himself, as he walked to the schoolhouse door, "possessed of the greatness of spirit of Old Man Simms. If he's a fair sample of the people of the mountains, they are of the stuff of which great nations are made—if they only are given a chance."

New View of Home.

Happiness, satisfaction and progress—all demand a new view of the home as a permanent human institution if the highest welfare of the individual, the family and the nation is to be secured with its help. Neither men nor women should be content to cling to outworn industrial, educational and social customs as a basis for the home. They should rather seek to find expression, under changed and ever-changing conditions, for those functions of the home which will outlast any industrial, educational, or social system.—Marion Talbot in "The Education of Women."

Modern Destruction.

"If there should be another war," remarked the military expert, "It won't last long."

"No," rejoined Senator Sorghum. "Neither will anything nor anybody else."—Washington Star.

Bird in New Guinea Builds Own Garden

The gardener bird of New Guinea, according to naturalists, selects a level piece of ground for its home and clears a circular patch around a slender sapling.

It carefully removes leaves, twigs and every object that could give the place an untidy look. Then it brings tufts and slabs of moss and builds up a conical structure around the base of the sapling, reaching an apex about eighteen inches from the ground.

Outside this it builds a parallel conical wall at such a distance from the inner cone as to afford the birds elbow room for a circular corridor between the two for their mysterious dances—marathons and circumambulations. And this wall, forming a miniature Indian tepee with a triangular doorway, is a living structure of the stalks of orchids plucked fresh by the bird and woven warp and woof in such a way that they continue to put forth leaves for a long time.

In front of the entrance of the tepee the builders now plant a little green meadow of soft mosses. All weeds are plucked up and the mossy carpet is continually swept clear of all accidental blemishes. The feathered gardener now brings from near and far a wealth of highly colored specimens of flowers and small fruit, and these they will dispose about the garden and tepee.—Detroit News.

"Oh, will you?" gasped the farmer. "Oi jolly well know you won't! Oi thought it must be a swindle, as you don't usually see sights for nothing in Lunnon!"

So down the stairs he went again, with the umbrella grasped firmly in both hands.

Fastest Double-Star Found by Astronomer

The densest and fastest double-star known has been discovered by F. C. Jordan, famous American astronomer. The new star is composed of two stars. In rotating, the light from one is stopped by the other every six hours; that is, in six hours the stars of this doublet revolve around each other so as to eclipse.

This pair of stars, or this star composed of a pair, is three times denser than our sun and each is about the same size as the sun. The double-star is so far distant from the earth that it takes its light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, several years to reach the earth. In fact, if it died or disintegrated, it would be years before we knew it. For all we know we may not be looking at this star itself, but at its image of years ago. When we look at the stars we do not see them as they are today, but as they were when the light left them perhaps hundreds of years ago.—Detroit News.

THE reason is simple. Coffee and tea contain drugs which tend to irritate the delicate nervous system of children, and so upset health.

The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among growing school children, the warning that "children should not drink tea or coffee at all."

Why confine the warning to children?

You are careful to protect the health of your children; why, then, take chances with your own health, when a change from coffee or tea is made so easy by Postum.

Osseo Oil Company About Done

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the notice of a meeting called for Feb. 4 for the purpose of dissolution of the company. We understand this is final and about the last gasp of the efforts to locate oil in this territory. After two unsuccessful attempts to drill and get the stuff the officers and members of the association are satisfied the goal will never be reached in this way and judging from the antagonistic feeling which exists between the leading lights of the enterprize nothing can be done. We have been told that underhanded methods are the rule instead of the exception, and we are sorry for that.

One man upon whose property the wells have been sunk tells hair raisers about leading officials, and the officials give the other fellow the hook so there you are! It has been said that somebody plugg d the last hole with a steel ball to stop further operations but this will have to be demonstrated. The same yarn is circulated gratuitously about the first well, and in summing up we would say it is quite likely there is not enough oil in Hillsdale county to lubricate a sewing machine, and if there was it could never be obtained by a class quarreling, bickering farmers who don't know the first rudiments of the oil business. No! Something or somebody more expert will have to get on the job.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 5th day of March, 1920, executed by Joshua Smith and Harriet E. Smith, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 6th day of March, 1920 recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 163 of Mortgages on page 124; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the said mortgagors to pay the interest and certain portions of principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable; and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Five Thousand Four Hundred Fourteen and Fifty six Hundredths (5414 56) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 25th day of February, 1924, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county,) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale with attorney's fee provided by statute.

The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, to wit; the west one-half of the southeast quarter of Section 22 in Township 7 south, Range 1 west, and containing eighty acres more or less.

In Black and White

The white people of the United States owe a great debt to the Negroes of America because of three fundamental wrongs which were done them by the white race. First the Negro was torn from his God given home in Africa and brought to these shores against his will; second, he served the white man faithfully for a hundred years, with no reward beyond a bare living; third, the sanctity of home life has been often denied him and the blood of the white man has been injected into the black race by the illegal gratification of the white man's lust. These wrongs all true Christian condemn and, in the spirit of Christ will endeavor to make atonement therefor.

The Negro himself has already answered this question. Sixty years ago the Negro stood still, dazed, blinking, as it were, in the bright light of freedom, then, plucking up heart, he plunged forward to "run with patience" his race in this foreign land. Today, representatives of the race stand out in the arts, the professions, the church and the state. Schools, colleges, libraries, hospitals and churches without number have been built. The slave has made himself a master of many business enterprises. No other race in the history of the world, has made such rapid progress.

Work Among Colored People, as a separate department of the National W. C T. U., was established in 1881. For one year previous, work along this line had been attempted by the department of Work Among Foreigners, Indians and Colored People.

In striving to be of help to the Negro, we should bear in mind that his opportunities along temperance lines have been most meager. No Washingtonian movement in the early half of the nineteenth century touched him as it did the white man for he was then a slave; no Bands of Hope pledged his children to total abstinence, and later, no Anti-Saloon League orators nor Flying Squadrons stirred his church membership to zeal in the cause of prohibition. When we remember that even in the twentieth century, the W. C. T. U. is the only agency which has a definite temperance program for Negroes, we as white ribboners should feel our souls stirred at the thought of the great opportunity before us.

While the white man, in his program of temperance reform, has almost entirely ignored the Negro, the conscienceless and unscrupulous white man has not hesitated to make of him a tool for his nefarious work of violating and evading the prohibition law. The Negro has served many long penitentiary sentences in order that the white man "higher up" might go free. A great and glorious task is ours to teach the race sobriety, good will toward the white race, noble ideals and Christianity in its purity and beauty. Let us throw our souls into this great work. Study the Plan as outlined by the National superintendent and strive to apply it to your Negro population. Thus shall our community life be uplifted, our government made more secure, and our God glorified.

Liberty Bell Deplores Methodist Strength

We are in receipt of the Liberty Bell published at Washington D. C. which seems to be, the official organ of the whisky Party. Some of its reasoning is indeed cunningly taken and were it not for the fact the contributors are known to be paid workers of the "wet" issue it might mislead a large number of good people. Among other contributions is an article suposed to have been written by an ex Methodist minister of the gospel. He makes an awful wail because the Methodist church through its numerous organizations and its all-covering influence. is tyranizing over the personal liberty of the people who want a drink now and then for their stomach's sake. He says this was never the original purpose of the sect of John Wesley. Further he says: "Again, I say, it is pointless for Methodists or anybody else to plead that this "amendment" was inserted because of the "greatest evil in the world."

Are Pheasants A Nuisance To You

Following is a letter from the China Farmers Club, St Clair Co. concerning pheasants as a nuisance as crop destroyers and asking that action be taken to allow farmers to protect their crops. The letter:

St. Clair, Mich. Jan. 2. 1924.
Mr. Clark Brody, Mgr.,
State Farm Bureau,
Lansing, Michigan.

Dear Sir:

The China Farmers' Club at a recent meeting passed a resolution declaring pheasants a nuisance and requested me as head of the committee on legislation to inform you of our opinion and request that farmers be allowed to protect their crops.

I have talked of this matter to farmers of other communities and find them all outspoken against the pheasant. One farmer assured me that crows had never destroyed as much corn for him as pheasants did last spring.

Trusting you will pass this on to where it will do most good, I remain, Yours sincerely,
Jessie J. Delore.

If sentiment is general on this subject, this is a matter that local Farm Bureaus and Farm Bureau members might consider as subject matter for a resolution at the sixth annual meeting of the State Farm Bureau at the Michigan Agr'l College, Farmers Week, Feb. 7 to 8. Don't forget that all resolutions must be in the hands of the Resolutions Committee in time so that they can be printed and presented to the delegates on the first day of the annual meeting.

Commencement Programs Here

Schools desiring to procure Commencement invitations for 1924 will find here a very nice display of samples which we can print out for you at a very reasonable rate. It has become fashionable in some villages to send away to the mail order house for this class of work and tc recieve mail order workmanship which in some cases proves highly unsatisfactory, But then of course you know we have different ideas about life. The mail order printer is careful to get your money first of all; then after getting that, he gets the order out as it suits him and if it don't suit you why what does it matter? He has your money; you have his promise.

North Adams Again on University List

Supt. Young of our high school received the following letter from J B. Edmonson of Michigan University, secretary of diploma schools who is inspector of schools for Michigan.

"January 15, 1924

Mr. R. C. Young,
Supt. of Schools,
North Adams, Mich.

My dear Mr. Young:

I take great pleasure in informing you that upon the recommendation of the Committee on Diploma Schools the diploma relation between your school and this University is continued for the term of one year ending June 30, 1925.

In re-accrediting your school the committee desires to urge the following recommendations:

1. That additional equipment be provided for physics in order to meet the minimum standard.
2. That continued efforts be made to secure a more satisfactory school building.
3. That special attention be given to the University requirements for two year accrediting in order that your school may be eligible for two year accrediting.

Very respectfully yours,
J. B. Edmonson"

THE TWO SATURNALIAS

Lenine is dead; Trotsky ought to be; he has retired an account of ill health. These two lifted Russia out of her stupor of 400 years' duration, but ignorance of the masses in Russia has made a shambles of it. Over and above the ashes of murdered nobility this maniac Lenine, has established one fact—his utter bestiality.

Across the Rio Grand is another shambles with just as incompetent managers. America will we hope, not be foolish enough to recognize either of these governments until they emerge from the dark ages. But the close proximity of recognition, at times has startled us

Lansing—New members added during the recent Red Cross roll call conducted by Ingham county chapter totaled 1,165. The total does not include those recruited in the county outside of Lansing, but includes new membership from the community chest fund.

Flint—Consideration of plans for submission to the taxpayers of Genesee County of a bond issue for $1,000,000 with which to replace the courthouse destroyed by fire, and to combine the jail in the new building, was the principal business at the January session of the board of supervisors.

Alpena—Work was started last week on opening M-10, south from Alpena, in order that automobile traffic could be resumed. There was 10 miles of snow to be plowed in order to open the entire road. Fifty cars were stalled at various points between Alpena and Lincoln awaiting the opening of the road.

Saginaw—A two-foot snake, very much alive and wriggling and a butterfly with daintily tinted wings were added recently to the Saginaw list of harbingers of spring, which already had assumed sizeable proportions through the presence here of a dozen or more chubby, red breasted robins and several pairs of cardinals.

Muskegon—Muskegon has fewer minor workers than any other city in the state, in the opinion of Benjamin Peterson, public school attendance officer. This condition is the result, he says, of the recent decision of virtually all the industries of the city not to employ any minor who cannot produce a working permit.

Grand Rapids—George Hooper, formerly superintendent of the Victoria Copper Mining Co., in the Upper Peninsula, died here. He was a prominent Mason, being a member of Rockland Lodge, at Rockland, Mich.; Francis M. Moore Consistory of Marquette, Palestine Commandery of Houghton and Ahmed Temple of Marquette.

Kalamazoo—The state administrative board authorized the release of $50,000 of a $100,000 appropriation for a women's infirmary at the Kalamazoo state hospital. According to Superintendent of Public Instruction Thomas E. Johnson, the plans for the structure virtually are completed and it is planned to expend $50,000 now and the rest later, perhaps next year.

Kalamazoo—One thousand three hundred and fifty-five births to 980 deaths is Kalamazoo's official record for 1923. This would indicate a population increasae of 370. Three more were born than in 1922, while 25 more persons died in the last year than in the preceding one. Of the new arrivals, 703 were boys and 657 were girls. Records also show that 496 males and 484 females died.

Ann Arbor—A gift of $2,000 has been made to the University of Michigan by Dr. Willian J. Mayo, head of Mayo Brothers Hospital at Rochester, Minn., to be known as the Mayo Lectureship in Surgery. With it, the university will bring prominent surgeons to address the medical students in the school of medicine, according to the terms of the gift agreement. Dr. Mayo graduated from the University of Michigan during the Eighties.

Lansing—The State Administrative board granted a request for $10,000 for a refrigerator plant at the Ionia reformatory, gave the Newberry state hospital $16,000 for improving its dining hall and the Traverse City state hospital $1,200, for improvements to its industrial building. A request from the state industrial school for boys for $163,200 to complete its heating plant, on which $98,000 already has been spent, was referred to a committee.

Lansing—The sale of $3,000,000 worth of highway bonds, to meet payments on contracts awarded and work done in the 1923 building season was authorized by the state administrative board recently. Bids will be received on 4, 4 1-4 and 4 1-2 per cent basis. The board also ordered the transfer from the 1923 automobile license to the highway sinking fund of an amount sufficient to care for interest in 1924 and 1925 on the total outstanding bonded indebtedness.

Ann Arbor—Though it draws its students from every state in the Union and from practically every civilized nation in the world the University of Michigan remains, primarily, a "state university." Of the 11,800 students enrolled during the academic year of 1922-23, 7,159 were residents of the state, the remaining 4,641 non-resident undergraduates lending the cosmopolitan touch to the institution. Wayne, Washtenaw and Kent counties furnish the largest number of students.

Lansing—The Michigan Electric Railway Co., filed a petition with the Michigan Public Utilities Commission recently for authority to operate a highway bus line between Owosso and Flint, thereby continuing their present eltctric line between Lansing and Owosso, to Flint via the highways. The proposed bus line would compete with the existing automobile carrier line between Owosso and Flint. The latter was started 10 years ago and was one of the first highway bus lines in the Middle West.

Wayne—Heeding the request of numerous automobilists the Board of County Road Commissioners will begin the erection of comfort stations next spring in Wayne County roads most frequented by motorists, Leroy C. Smith, engineer-manager of the road commission announced. One will be built at the junction of Middle Belt road with Huron River Drive, while the other will be located in Phoenix Park, between Northville and Plymouth, where Livonia Center road runs into Northville road.

Lansing—The state supreme court recently ruled that boards of education are virtually supreme in administering the affairs of the public schools.

Charlotte—The Baptist church was recently destroyed by fire of unknown origin causing a loss, according to trustees, of $6,000. The structure will be rebuilt.

Ann Arbor—Thirty-three members of the scientific faculties of the University of Michigan have been elected to membership in the Junior Research society.

Ionia—In spite of the thinning ranks of the veterans of the Civil war, there were 50 members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. at their annual meeting here recently.

Alpena—The Rev. H. A. Webster, of Manistique, has accepted a call to the Alpena Baptist Church. He takes the place of the Rev. I. M. Compton, resigned, who has gone to Wayne.

Marshall—Some farmers' wells near here have gone dry as the result of the construction of the Nottawa Creek drain which also lowered the level of several lakes. This drain cost $237,445.

Battle Creek—The veteran bureau's $2,500,000 psychiatric hospital now under construction at Camp Custer will be ready for occupancy by July 1, has been announced by Captain A. F. Dershimer, construction quartermaster.

Ann Arbor—Harry D. Hoey, of Youngstown, O., a senor literary student of the University of Michigan, has een appointed managing editor of the Michigan Daily, official student newspaper, by the board in control of student publications.

Lansing—Despite the fact that Michigan's geological history records the occurrence of numerous earthquakes in this state in the past, no alarm need be felt that any serious disturbance will take place in the future, according to R. A. Smith, state geologist.

Carleton—There are indications of considerable glass rock sand in certain localities in Ash Township, according to reports here that drillers operating for the Ford Motor Co. had struck 67 feet of pure white glass sand rock in a hole. During the drilling a steel casing is used.

Pontiac—Oakland County supervisors failed to adopt the ordinance prepared at the suggestion of the county road commission which designated State and county trunk highways as through streets and would have compelled all vehicles to stop on entering them. The vote on the measure was 13 to 10 and it required 18 votes, or a majority of the board to pass it.

Flint—Four Michigan veterans have accepted commissions in the officers' reserve corps, according to announcement by the war department. They are Howard R. Coggins, Flint, second lieutenant, field artillery; Ray F. McDougall, Lansing, first lieutenant, quartermaster corps; Ivan W. Swift, Lansing, second lieutenant, field artillery; James L. Parkhurst, Flint, second lieutenant, infantry.

Ann Arbor—The proposed Michigan Archaeological society, discussed in scientific circles for the last year, was organized at a meeting called recently at Lansing. The purpose of the society, according to professors of the University of Michigan, will be to study and preserve pioneer relics, as well as archaeological specimens left by the Indians and the prehistoric inhabitants of Michigan.

Muskegon—The old spell-down is to become a regular feature of the work in the Muskegon grade schools. Miss Marjorie Kinnan, assistant superintendent of the schools, says she doubts that the children of today are as good spellers as their parents. She believes the way to correct the fault is by staging the spelling bees. "Spelling today in the schools is a mechanical process," says Miss Kinnan. The contests will be between teams from the various schools.

Marquette—What probably is a new record for winter motoring in the Upper Peninsula was completed recently when Frank Marlowe, of this city, completed a trip from Ironwood to Marquette, which required two days and a half. The distance is 157 miles. Marlowe encountered snow drifts as high as five feet, but managed to force the car through on its own power. He refused offers of assistance by drivers of horses along the road, but had to make good use of a shovel.

Traverse City—The last official act of Judge Frederick W. Mayne, who retired at the end of last year in favor of Judge Parm C. Gilbert in the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit, was to render a decree establishing the water level of Lake Leelanau to be observed by the Leland Power Co., a case which was started in 1908 and which was dragged through numerous hearings and new trials since then. Judge Mayne fixed the maximum and minimum water level one foot and two inches apart.

Detroit—During the last 10 years, the public debt of Michigan, State, counties, and municipalities combined, has increased 503 per cent, it is set forth in figures issued by the Department of Commerce. In 1912, Michigan's total debt was $59,996,825. In the following decade it increased to $361,778,549. The per capita obligation jumped from $20.43 to $94.04. The Government figures show that expenditures of the counties were the chief factor in this increase. The counties piled up their debt burden 727 per cent.

East Lansing—For the last two or three years Michigan potatoes have been receiving lower prices on eastern markets than those from other states. This condition has been generally realized, but state agricultural leaders have disagreed as to the real cause. Prof. J. T. Horner, markets expert with the department of economics at Michigan Agricultural College says. Part of it is due to the preference of consumers for a white potato and part to hollow-heart in the Michigan product, also in the lack of grading.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."—Mrs. Gus Vogel, 6608 Pelouze Street, Detroit, Michigan.

Some Horse

A young married artist has a predilection for talking in his sleep. Several times recently he mentioned the name "Irene," and his wife questioned him about it.

"Oh, that," said he, thinking fast, "is the name of a horse."

Several days later when he came home he asked his wife the news of the day.

"Nothing exciting happened," she said, "except your horse called up twice."

POULTRY

Ipecac Most Successful Remedy for Blackhead

Ipecac is the remedy being used most successfully for blackhead, though if the disease is far advanced there is little or nothing that can be done for it.

To use ipecac as a cure, put ten drops of the fluid extract of ipecac in the mouth of the sick birds three times a day for three days, then once a day for the same time.

As a preventive use a teaspoonful of the powdered ipecac on enough wet mash for 20 birds. Feed twice a week, commencing when the poults are two weeks old and continue until three months old, then give once every ten days. The amount need not be given all in one feed, but spread among the feeds for the day.

Sick turkeys are always preyed upon by lice and mites and special care should be taken to keep the young and old birds free from these pests.

Green food in the form of carrot tops, onion tops or lettuce should comprise at least one-half of the ration.

The brood coops and house should be kept clean, and grit and charcoal must be where they can get it. Old plaster is especially liked by turkeys and they seem to thrive on it.

Both chickens and turkeys thrive better if they are kept apart.

Sixty hens laid 14 eggs in ten days before culling and, after culling, the 34 hens left laid 133 eggs in ten days. This report came from a Lincoln county (Colorado) farm.

This isn't the whole story, however. The culling was done in January. We believe that had the 26 culls been kept they also would have started laying at least by the last of February and would have probably more than paid for their keep until the following June or July.

As a general rule a complete culling should not be made in the winter or spring, because even the culls will pay for their keep from January until July. It is sometimes necessary to cull in the winter to make more room for pullets when the flock must be confined. That was undoubtedly the case in Lincoln county, and proably part of the increase in egg production was due to the fact that the hens left had more room and more food.

Another difficulty in winter culling is that it is very hard to tell which are the pullets when the whole flock is housed together. Many pullets that have happened to be a little out of condition at the time of the culling have been sold when they certainly should have been left in the flock.—P. C. Jamison, Extension Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Use Bands to Mark Best Laying Fowls in Flock

According to N. E. Chapman, poultry specialist with the agricultural extension division of the Minnesota State university, the first of February is a good time to band the best pullets—the birds that have the early-laying and high-production marks.

"These are the birds," says Mr. Chapman, "to breed for next year. The successful poultryman employs every means possible to determine the highest producers of his flock that he may put them in the breeding pen. Bands made of celluloid can be secured from poultry supply firms.

"A pullet that has a white beak on February 1 has made a fair record in egg-production and deserves a blue band on her right leg. Such fowls will generally have long keels, loose "side bones" on the keel, wide back and a spread of three fingers between the pelvic or lay-bones, and a hand depth from these to the end of the breastbone or keel."

The necessity of cooling hatching eggs is a disputed point.

When the ducks are hatched, make them comfortable, but do not feed for 36 to 48 hours.

* * *

* * *

* * *

Hens that show the least broodiness are better layers than those that are broody a large part of the time.

* * *

A fowl must carry a little fat in order to be in a laying condition. A poor or lean hen can never be a laying hen.

* * *

Diseases of Poultry, farmers' bulletin 1337, may be had by writing the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

* * *

Hens that molt late and quickly are the best layers. By this is meant that hens molting during the latter part of September, October and November are better layers than those molting earlier.

* * *

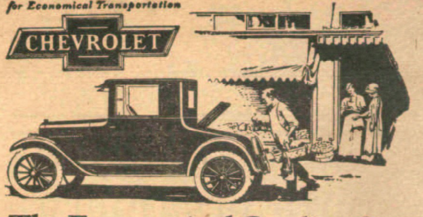
* * *

A male bird deprived of its generative organs to improve its flesh and weight is called a capon. A pullet similarly treated is called a poulard.

* * *

Sour skim milk is now well established as a feed for poultry. Its value has been clearly demonstrated by experiments at a number of agricultural colleges, among them the Idaho experiment station.

for Economical Transportation



The Economical Quality Car

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923 —far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

Thus, our statements have the strongest possible backing, namely, the faith and patronage of the American people who know automobiles and know practical values better than any other people on earth.

Let any one of our seven thousand dealers show you our seven types of cars and explain how easy it is to get one and enjoy its use.

Knew Where She Was

A young woman, traveling alone, and unused to the ways of the world, had left her home on an early morning train to visit a friend in Fifeshire. It had been a tiring journey, and just before reaching Dunfermline she had fallen asleep.

Waking up, she turned to an old gentleman on the seat beside her and said, "Will you please tell me if we are on this side of Dunfermline or the other side?"

"We are on this side," he said.

And she settled down again, entirely satisfied.

His Kind Act

The Sunday school teacher was telling her class that they ought to do at least one act each week to make some one else happy.

Turning to one boy, she said, "Have you made anyone happy this week, Robbie?"

"Yes, miss," the boy replied. "I went to see my aunt, and she was happy when I left."

Weeping for Joy

"Is she sentimental?" "Very! She will even weep over her old divorce papers."—Judge.

Albion College is Somewhat Disturbed

Reports somewhat shady are being broidcasted over the country concerning Albion College students and the whole body are up in open rebellion against the president whom it is claimed they have placarded as "immoral" and as a crook. Jackson papers make great capital out of the yarn but as a matter of fact the whole uproar was started by dismissal of anunruly co-ed who it is claimed, with two other girls and three young men made a trip by auto to Coldwater and this young woman was seen smoking a cigarette. The party ar also said to have carried liquor in the machine all of which is strenuously denied by the parties and other students of the Methodist seat of learning. There are probably two sides to the story and no doubt the whole scrape will be pretty thoroughly aired before they are done. Trustees of the College have been asked to investigate the character of the president, who has explained away the charges quite satisfactorily.

The first allegation is that President Laird was seen in company with a woman not his wife: This he says is true but gives the best reasons in the world for it. Second It is claimed Dr. Laird falsified in his claims to degrees obtained from Syracuse University; third, he is alleged to have spoke disparagingly of Dr. Samuel Dickie, President Emeritis of the institution.

It would not be strange if some tough characters could be found among the students of a religious college, neither would it be unlikely they should have a large delegation of supporters among the classmen and different fraternities. Fraternities produce just such results as that in spite of the fact they are very popular.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 25th day of October 1921 executed by Harvey Kelley and Bessie Kelley, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 29th day of October, 1921 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in liber 163 of mortgages on page 494; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagor to pay the interest and portions of the principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the options contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Seven Thousand, Nine Hundred Seventy Seven and seventeen hundredths ($7977.17) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute; and no suit or proceedings at law or equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof. Now, therefore Notice is hereby given thatby virtue of the the power of sale in said mortgage contained and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 18th day of February, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan (said courthouse being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; all those certain lands and premises and property situated in the township of Wheatland in the county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, described as follows; to wit; the southeast one quarter of the southwest one quarter of Section 23, also the west one-half of the southwest one quarter of the said section 23, also the northeast one quarter of the southeast one quarter of section 22, all in township 6 south, range 1 west, containing one hundred sixty acres of land more or less.

Used Dynamite to Remove Man

One of the most unusual murder cases which has come to the notice of the Pennsylvania State Police in years was that in which Antonio Fuente of Limestone township, Clairon county, was killed by someone who placed a stick of dynamite between Fuente's arm and body while the man was sleeping, the explosion tearing his flesh to shreds. Ben Cesa was arrested and charged with the crime. He disapproved of Fuente's desire to marry Cesa's daughter.

Greater assistance to sheriffs and other peace officers throughout the state is aimed at in the plans of Commissioner Harry H. Jackson of the Department of Public Safety for his administration of this important branch of the Michigan government. According to his idea, the state will furnish trained men, experts in criminal investigation, to assist local officers in dealing with crimes or criminal conditions which require such aid. The identification bureau at Lansing will be built up further as an auxiliary in this plan.

"It is fortunate that Michigan has the splendid identification bureau built up by Captain I. H. Marmon. It is only the truth to say that this is one of the best identification bureau in the entire country and is well on the way to become the best. This is acknowledged by police officers who have made a specialty of identification of criminals.

State Bureau Needed.

"The only way to handle fingerprints successfully is through a state bureau which acts as a clearing house. The fingerprint method is valuable in the detection of crime, especially in cases of burglary and safeblowing, and it is also valuable in establishing the identity of men who have been arrested on suspicion or for some minor crime, but who may be fugitives from justice. In our own state the bureau has made the recapture of escaped prisoners a much less difficult task because within a few hours of the reporting of such an escape, circulars bearing the description and fingerprints of the fugitive are in the mails on their way to police officers, not only in this state, but in other states. The same is true of the bringing back of parole violators.

"It is my intention to combine the investigation bureau, or detective bureau, of the state with the identification bureau and to place its work under the direction of one capable and responsible man. Under this system, as soon as the state headquarters is notified of a serious crime, men capable of recognizing every clue and following it up will be assigned to the case.

Specialize the Work.

"It is probable that the same sort of specialization in the state's police system can be perfected within a comparatively short time as is done with the police departments of the large cities. Thus, men who are specialists in any particular sort of crime detection will be assigned to the cases calling for such special experience. In this connection, I am of the opinion that it will be advisable to form a special squad to deal with enforcement of the prohibition law. This squad will have the duty of securing evidence necessary to obtaining warrants, and will receive the assistance of the uniformed force in making arrests. This prohibition squad will be composed of the men in the force who have shown themselves most successful in dealing with the evil conditions created by the lawless element which has engaged in liquor-running and bootlegging."

CONVICT THREE KILLERS

The Michigan State Police (Department of Public Safety) recently concluded three homicide cases in one month with verdicts of guilty in all three. William J. McPhee of Melvin was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to from one to fifteen years imprisonment; Ralph Lindsley of St Joseph county was convicted of second degree murder and Marjorie Kuhn of Hillsdale county was convicted of murder. The first two were accused of killing their wives and the last named of poisoning her common law husband.

DELAWARE GETS TROOPERS

The state of Delaware is the latest to organize a state police force. All of her neighboring states have long had such forces. C. C. Reynolds has been appointed superintendent. A Pennsylvania state officer was loaned to the Delaware force as instructor during the training period.

Early Treatment For Syphilis Cases Best

Declaring the first case of syphilis on record was that of a sailor, shortly after the discovery of America, Dr H. L. Keim of the University of Michigan, told staff members of the State Department of Health, "the authentic antiquity of syphilis does not extend back further than the time of Christopher Columbus."

"Syphilis", said Dr Keim, "is a disease peculiar to the human race". It is identified by its chronic character, its intermittent attack, by the fact that it may be acquiredor inherited, and that it effects any part of the human body. It has been known as Luis Veneria; as large pox, as contra distinguished from small pox; but it was first designated as syphilis by a philosopher of the University of Pada.

Syphilis is a disease of three stages; primary, secondary and tertiary. The points of demarcation are determined by the action of the syphilitic germs, called spirochetes. While these remain local, as evidenced by the chancre or initial sore, syphilis is in the early stage. But with the progress of the disease an "explosion" occurs, and the spirochetes get into the blood stream to be distributed to all parts of the body.

More Than 100 Men To Address Farmers

More than one hundred different speakers are scheduled to address the various conferences and meetings which will be held in connection with Farmers week at M.A.C from February 4 to 8 according to announcement of the program made here this week by A. M. Berridge, chairman of the college committee in charge of arrangements for the big gathering.

Experts on almost every line of agricultural and home economics work are included in the list. Less than a dozen will appear before the "general" meetings attended by all the guests at Farmers Week, the others being included on the numerous special association meeting and conference programs.

Those attending Farmers Week will be able to select from a wide variety of subjects in their attendance at meeting. There may be as many as a dozen different conferences going on at the same time, and the visitor will be given the opportunity of choosing the material that interests him most.

Prominent among the speakers on the general program are: Dr. Hugh Cabot, dean of the school of medicine at the University of Michigan, who will talk on "Germs, What They Can Do For Us and To Us"; Eugene Davenport, former dean of agriculture at Illinois University and widely known agricultural speaker and writer; Vern Brance, director of Municipal Markets in Detroit; Dr. R.S. Shaw, acting president of M.A.C.; L.J. Tabor, Master of the National Gange, of Columbus Ohio; and H.R. Smith, Livestock Commissioner, Chicago.

Music, movies and other entertainment features will play a prominent part in the general programs.

State's Best To Be Shown At Grain Show

Michigan's best seeds and grains will be shown in the annual Crop Improvement Association Show, which is to be one of the features of exhibits at the M.A.C. Farmers Week this year.

More than 500 entries have already been made, according to H.C. Rather, secretary of the association and extension specialist at M.A.C., and many of these have been made by the same growers who won such brillianr victories for the state at the International Hay and Grain Show, in Chicago last fall.

Unusually keen competition is expected in the classes where the state showed strongly at Chicago and also in wheat, oats, rye and barley sections. A special class for Berkely Rock wheat, Michigan's new hard winter variety which was good enough to place against the best western wheat at the International, will be a feature.

Another section of special interest will be the class for Hardigan alfalfa, where the Solway Process Company has offered 20 tons of pulverized limestone for the winners. The Upper Penninsula will be represented at the show by splendid samples of field peas which, by the way, won high honors at Chicago.

The general educational exhibit of the M.A.C farm crops department, which will go hand in hand with the Association show, will feature alfalfa, showing the tremendous increase in alfalfa growing made in the state since 1920. The state now harvests over 350,000 acres of alfalfa annually, and it is estimated that this acreage adds over $6,000,000 to the agricultural wealth of the state which it would not have if the acreage were devoted to some other crop.

Methods farmers employ in growing and handling alfalfa successfully will be worked out in detail in the exhibit.

"I understand" said Boggs, "You were an aviator in France" "Right" said Scroggs. "I made a high record. Had to come down on account of clogging my propeller with butter picked up in the milky way."

Sunday School Specialists Coming to Hillsdale

Teachers of children in Sunday schools of Hillsdale county are to have unusual opportunity.

February 4 and 5 are announced as the dates for the county wide institute for persons working with children in the Sunday schools of Hillsdale county. The institute is to be held in the Hillsdale Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the Hillsdale County Sunday School Association.

Mrs. A. N. Brown is the county officer of the association and has charge of the institute.

It is said, by those in charge of the Religious Education work throughout Michigan, that one of the marked advance steps taken by the association, both county and state, is the introduction of the institute type of program. It is copied in many ways, after the public school teachers institute which has been and is so popular.

The meeting will bring to Hillsdale, three prominent speakers, Miss Florence P. Carmichael, the elementary superintendent of the Christian Board, Indianadolis, Ind., who has special supervision over their churches in several of the central states; Miss Myrtie Huckelberry, the dieector of children's work for the Baptist Board in the same area working out of her Indianapolis Office and Miss Irene Rockenbach, Superintendeet of the childrens division of the Michigan Sunday school council of Religious education. Miss Rockenbach's offices are in Lansing and it is under her direction that the institute is being conducted in 8 of the more progressive counties of this state, including Hillsdale county.

At 10:30 the first day a meeting of state, county and district childrens division superintendents, 1:30 a demonstration worship service for a primary department by Miss Irene Rockenbach; 2:00 the nature and needs of the child by Miss Florence Carnichael; 3:00, the group will divide into three sections, each being presided over by one of the specialists. The groups will be classified according to the age of the children taught in the Sunday school. The evening session will open at 7:00 and the group arrangement will continue making special study of the expressional work and the departmental program. The program of the second day is very similar, concluding with an address at 3:00 by Miss Huckelberry, entitled "Giving the Child a Square Deal."

This institute is open to pastors and superintendents as well as association officers and workers with children.

A supper will be served in the parlors of the Presbyterian church Feb. 4 at 5:30 p. m.

Map shows Newspapers Interested In roads

In the National Highways exhibit at the great road exposition at the Coliseum, Chicago, this week, is a great map of the United States, in which 7,452 red headed pins have been driven, indicating the location of that number of newspapers of the 13,388 daily and weekly papers of the United States Which have accepted a Newspaper Association membership in the National Highway Association and are in receipt of, and publishing from time to time, the roads news the association sends to its members.

The map must be seen to appreciate the thorough way in which this great educational campaign is being carried on by the newspapers of the United States, more than half of which are so progessive and so interested in the transporation problem which affects in one way or another every one of their readers, that they contribute of their valuable space to the cause of good roads everywhere.

As is natural, the pins in the map are thickest in the extreme East and Midd e Eastern States, and thinnest in the far West, where towns are more widely scettered and newspapers are fewer. Certain parts of the West however, notably the immediate vicinity of San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Portland and Seattle are so thick with pins that the map is completely hidden from view.

Visitors to the National Highways Association exhibit in the Coliseum express themselves as amazed at the amount of effort being put into the cause by the newspapers, as well as much pride and satisfaction when their own particular home paper is found to be represented upon the map.

HOW THE NATION IS PROTECTED FROM SERIOUS DISASTER

City Without a Reserve Water Supply Against Destruction by Fire Likened by Bankers' Committee to Business Situation Without Federal Reserve System.

A vital element in everybody's prosperity is that mysterious sounding "something or other" called bank reserve, says the Committee on Public Education of the American Bankers Association, adding: "It isn't an easy matter to make simple and interesting, but its importance to every man, woman and child in the country makes the effort worth while." The Committee continues:

Money on deposit must always be ready for depositors when they desire it. Banks must also be ready to loan money, when needed, to their customers, or business would be hampered. In other words, prosperity depends largely on the ability of the banks to meet these demands—that is, depends on the "bank reserves." The problem of handling reserves has been difficult. The Federal Reserve System has met the problem more satisfactorily than any other method ever tried in this country.

The Great Solution

Our banks are managed by officers and directors, elected by their own stockholders. They are interested in helping the town to grow and prosper. But just as a local telephone station is valuable to the interchange of thought because it belongs to a system whose wires reach to all parts of the nation, so the local bank is valuable to the interchange of business because of its connections with other banks in the United States, finding its strength and its usefulness in being part of a system.

For many years a plan was sought whereby our thousands of separate and independent banks could get together and cooperate for the improvement of our banking methods, and for mutual protection in emergencies, both for themselves and customers. We had periodical money panics, dangerously disturbing to business, and chargeable, in large part, to defects in our banking and currency system.

There was no central bank from which the individual banks could get assistance in time of trouble. Panic conditions caused weak banks to fail, and even strong and sound institutions to be imperilled. Bankers, business men, and leaders in Congress for years made a careful study of banking and finally Congress passed a law providing for the establishment of twelve great Federal Reserve Banks, each designed to serve as a sort of central bank for such banks in its allotted territory as might become members of the Federal Reserve System.

It retained the American plan of independent banks doing business under the management of their own directors and officers. About 10,000 banks have become members of the Federal Reserve System. The member banks in each district own the entire stock of the Federal Reserve bank there, and elect two-thirds of the directors. The other directors are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, the Governmental body having supervision over the Reserve banks, though it does not operate them. Its members are appointed by the President of the United States.

The Federal Reserve banks hold member banks' reserves. Formerly each bank carried in its own vault the cash required by law as a legal reserve so that it would be ready to pay depositors on demand. The gold supply of the country was thus scattered among thousands of independent banks.

When Fire Rages

This situation may be likened to the old-time water supply in a town. Each house had to depend on its individual well, tank, or cistern. Picture such a town attacked by fire. If the water was low in one well, from drought, or excessive use, water would have to be borrowed from a neighboring well. Suppose the water in that well also was at a low level. Thus the safety of all was sacrificed because no RESERVE water supply was at hand. The fire would become a conflagration.

Under the Federal Reserve System, we have a series of modern reservoirs, located in various parts of the country, each serving the needs of the banks in its own district. In each of these reservoirs credit is stored up to be supplied to the various banks, as the need arises. Each reservoir is in turn connected with all the others so that when the supply in one becomes low, the others may be temporarily drawn upon. By gathering the gold reserves of the member banks into the twelve Federal Reserve banks, a result has been obtained like that yielded by the construction of a great city water supply.

Each member bank formerly had to depend almost entirely upon its own resources in making loans to its customers. When it had loaned all of its own money, it could do no more, even though the merchant, manufacturer, or farmer customer had great need of more credit, and was seeking it for highly important and necessary purposes. Hence arose what was called a "tight money" situation. Now the member bank can, and frequently does take the notes of its customers to the Federal Reserve bank, and borrows there in much the same way as the customer borrows from the member bank.

This reserve-storing and loaning work of the Reserve System is only part of the wonderful protection and service it is rendering the nation.

Look to Your School Houses

A few years ago the world stood aghast at the burning of a school building at Collinswood, Ohio, that resulted in the loss of the lives of 173 children. There was not a newspaper in the land that did not use up pages of copy in describing the harrowing scenes and giving the disasterous details. The editorial writers wrote pages of discussion as to the reasons for and the cause and results of the terrible catastrophe. Those of us who have given more or less of our time to fire-fighting and fire prevention remember the details of the story vividly. How many of us have not in the dark hours of the night pictured the horrors of the children trying to escape from that immense bonfire and seeing them piled in heaps, their charred bodies reduced to ashes. Public sentiment was aroused as never before, and doubtless a great deal of faulty construction in public buildings was remedied and a large number of school buildings that were fire traps were doubtless condemned. That fire should have prevented the recurrence of any such disaster, but did it?

In Cleveland, South Carolina, this spring they had a school building which was unsafe, still it was the only place large enough in the little town in which to give the commencement exercises of the public school. No officer of the law would dare forbid the holding of the graduating exercises when the exercises mean so much to the boys and girls who are graduating and so much appreciated by the parents. Three hundred people crowded into the little auditorium on the second floor of the old school building. The building was barely able to hold the audience. Suddenly, a lamp that was suspended over the stage fell and no one could tell just what happened. Seventy-six persons were horribly killed, forty-one of them were children.

From A Reader

We received the following communication from R. E. Porter who says his address is Addison, Mich., and while we have not the pleasure of this person's acquaintance. we believe the heart is in the right place, so we are glad to publish same. We welcome letters from anyone who does or does not agree with us on any question. That's what the Advocate is for—to discuss questions of the day pro and con:

Mr. Editor:

"Sympathizing with you without suggesting a remedy for the predicament you are in, would be akin to a request I once heard a minister make to his prayer meeting congregation at the closing hour.

"We will all arise and bow our heads in silent prayer for a dear brother, a member of this church, whom I met on my way to prayer meeting tonight; asking him why he had not attended services for some time, he told me he had been walking the streets of Detroit for two weeks looking for work, and was discouraged, and thought he would go down to the river and end it all.

He said his wife was home in bed sick and discouraged, and when I left there was only half a loaf of bread in the house, and two children to feed with no prospect of anything tomorrow."

I urged him to trust in the Lord, and not do anything rash, and now I ask the prayers of all Christians here to pray that the Lord will preserve him provide him with some means to tide him over idle hours.

There was one man in that house who never affiliated himselt with any religious organization, and could not conceive of any way to relieve the situation by prayers, and the more he thought the madder he got, finally before the heads were straightened up, he stalked out of his seat and walked up to the religious table and slapped down the only silver "cart wheel" he had with him, and turning around facing the audience of religionists, bawled out "this is the way I pray, come you professors and do likewise, then see that the family h s a feast, then it will be in order to pray." The intruder then walked out and left the brothers and sisters to attend to the rest; but it resulted in a raise of twenty bucks, and a committee of prayerful ones to administer to the household in question.

Now Mr. Editor, I cannot pray but I might if pinched prey, on a bootlegger if he had the genuine stuff, but not on the moonshine. However I will suggest that your proper official make a requisition on our jail, as we have no use for it from the fact that we do not moonshine, we are open and above the stigma of bootlegging, our squint eyed pigs know how to shave close to the law, and just be*fore the stuff gets close to the legal* content, we empty the flask and let it do its fermenting inside.

The stuff we get here makes wives love husbands more when under the influence of it, as it sweetens the breath and kills the stench of the tobacco-cabbage combination.

A test gauge for our beverage, and the formula can be had just across the pond in the Jerico subdivision.

R. E. Porter."

Latent syphilis, a condition attending the second stage, is an obscure form of the disease. Many considering themselves rid of the attack after the passing of early manifestations with no subsequent developments, prefer to " let sleeping dogs lie", rather than investigate their condition. These cases lie dormant during the second stage, only to break out actively with paresis, locomoter ataxia, and other "telling" aspects of tertiary syphilis.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Dear Comrades: The great battle to retain what was won by long years of hard work and self-denial is on. The enemy we face is the same enemy that was entrenched in the open saloon. Unscrupulous and untruthful as of old, it is fighting viciously for what it lost when the eighteenth amendment was adopted.

The incentives that spur the wets to actions are avarice and appetite, and in the fury of their wrath over the results of prohibition they are seeking every possible point of attack. Even the church of the living God has not escaped.

One man whose name has been on the church record for long years has, as you know, tried to start a new church from which political subjects shall be banned. In the last analysis that would mean that the flag could not enter, neither could the singing of "America" or the "Star Spangled Banner" be permitted.

The latest news along that line, as I write, is that the name proposed for this new church is to be the "Joy Christian Church." Rev. A. Stanley Copeland, of Buffalo, N. Y., who states that he has been asked by Mr. Earle to supervise its organization, in an open letter printed in the Detroit Free Press of Friday, Nov. 23, makes the following statement.

"Prominent in the Joy Christian protest against the changes in methods of existing churches is its insistence that real wine be used in communion, on the basis that the use of a substitute lacking alcohol is a denial of the perfection of Him who used wine in both social intercourse and ceremonially.

"In addition to the Lord's supper we have instituted our 'Joy Communion' in happy celebration of the wedding feast of Cana, both in the homes of the members and in public assemblage; securing legally under the Volstead Law the right to the social use of wine in Jesus' name.

"If twelve or more who are interested in making this manner of protest against present day Phariseeism will write me stating their willingness to join together and make permanently effective a protest of their rights as Christians, I shall be glad to come and help in getting their organization under way."

The heading of the article supplied by the paper was, "Offers to Form a Church Using Real Wine Often." Comment is unnesessary. If any of these churches are started we shall be interested in knowing the personnel of their membership and their activities outside of that second communion to celebrate the wedding feast of Cana, permitting them to use "real wine often".

Propaganda is rampant, but do not be mislead. Let me quote for your encouragement some statistics from Mr. Volstead's address in the Congress at Copenhagen on "The results of Prohibition". You will find in my annual address in the State Report in a form that you can keep but I think this may reach you sooner and perhaps reach some who are so unwise or unfortunate as not to secure a State Report.

He assured the members in the Congress that prohibition in America was not the product of hysterical or fanatical impulse, but was adopted deliberately after careful and repeated trials, and assured them that millions of our citizens were in dead earnest.

The wets are doing everything that they can to discredit it, their most popular method being to declare that the law cannot be enforced. No law is fully enforced and it takes time to overcome such violent opposition.

Reports of alcoholic wards in two of our largest cities where law enforcement is most lax show great improvement. In Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., admissions to the alcoholic ward in 1917 were 8210; in 1920, 2318; a reduction of 75 per cent. Deaths during the last nine wet years averaged 237. In 1920 there were 10 deaths and in 1921 only 8.

Judge Gemmill reports that two municipal courts in Chicago, where from two to three hundred cases were tried each day, have been closed for lack of business.

The ward for inebriates in the Chicago city prison, where from 50 to 100 were constantly strapped to steel beds, suffering from delirium tremens, last year did not have a single case.

Dr. Deacon, of the Michigan Bureau of vital statistics, reports that from 1917 to 1921 prohibition reduced tuberculosis 21 per cent.

Before prohibition there were 240 institutions for the cure of inebriates in the United States. One by one they have been closed until today they are all gone. The Manufacturers' Record sent out 1500 letters to business men asking their views on prohibition. 85½ *per cent favor*ed strict enforcement and 1½ per cent opposed it. The reasons they gave were: Accidents decreased, homes purchased, debts more promptly paid, death rate less, drunken men on the streets rare, laboring men and their families enjoying life as never before, destitution diminished.

He quoted from Collier's Magazine: Jack O'Donnell, a wet, was employed to make a survey for that magazine. In his report he said, "I am wet, I always have been. I am loathe to admit it, but there is abundance of evidence to prove that a great dry wave is rolling eastward and riding on the crest of that wave is the solid citizenship of the land—the John Smiths and Tom Browns, and always by their side is riding their wives, mothers, sisters and daughters. Some day and that day is not far distant, we are going to wake up and find that the people are weary of the boot-legger, the rum-runner and the dry-law violator Some day the people will rid the country of this lawless element as the vigilantes of the fifties rid California mining camps of gun-men and prostitutes."

Some time I hope we will have space in our paper for many wonderful papers given in that great Congress. I had hoped in this issue to give my view of the international situation, but it must be postponed. I did not go as a tourist but as a student, and cannot tell you how much I learned in a small space.

FarmerS Miss Bet With Home Garden

Careful planning and proper care of the farm garden will supply fresh vegetables throughout the entire growing season, an important consideration which many farmers are not giving attention, according to Lewis.

" In order to obtain the best use of the land, and have a continuous supply of vegetables, it is essential that the garden be planned carefully in advance" says Lewis In this way the work of planting and caring for the garden may be greatly simplified.

" One of the first things to consider is the arrangement which will reduce the labor to a minimum The vegetables should be grouped according to their cultural method and the number of plantings made as small as is consistent with the temperature requirements of the various crops.

" One of the most important points in a well planned garden is the provision for continous supply. This is accomplished in two ways: first, by making successive plantings of the same variety, and second, by planting early intermediate, and late varieties at the same time.

" For example, plantings of Golden Bantam sweet corn may be made two weeks apart, for Mammoth White Cob, Golden Bantam and Evergreen may be planted at the same time. In the same way such crops as peas, lettuce, onions, cabbage and beans may be made to cover the entire gowing season.

" Another cause of failure in the home garden is the use of poor seed or the indiscriminate selection of suitable varieties. In the well planned garden the choice of varieties is carefully made far in advance so that the seed may be secured from a reliable source before planting time."

French Writer Believed Napoleon Ended Warfare

The prophesies of Joseph de Maistre are often cited as forecasts which have not "made good," yet worthier "prophets" have gone astray, as witness the following curious passage from a chapter in Chateaubriand's "Memoirs d-' Outre-Tombe":

"Napoleon has closed the era of the past. He has made war too great to beguile the human species in the future. He has slammed upon his heels the portals of the temple of Janus and against them he has piled mountains of corpses so that never may they be opened again."

If the dead can see what is going on here on earth, it is not without some spite that Chateaubriand will have to admit, with the evidence of the World war, that he would have been better advised not to have played the prophet.—Le Petit Parisien of Paris.

Back came the answer:

"Orchids. They are so rare."

Back went this: "But girls are not." And with his note were some red carnations.

Turquoise-Blue Dragon Flies Seen in Hampshire

In South America I was accustomed to see dragon flies in rushing hordes and clouds, and in masses clinging like swarming bees to the trees; here we see them as single insects, but I once witnessed a beautiful effect produced by a large number of the common turquoise-blue dragon fly gathered at one spot, and this was in Hampshire. . . . It was a very bright windy morning in June, and the oak woods had been stripped of their young foliage by myriads of caterpillars, so that the sunlight fell untempered through the seemingly dead trees on the bracken that covered the ground below. Now, at one spot over an area of about half an acre, the bracken was covered with the common turquoise-blue dragon fly, clinging to the fronds, their heads to the wind, their long bodies all pointing the same way. They were nowhere close together, but very evenly distributed, about three to six inches apart, and the sight of the numberless slips of gemlike blue sprinkled over the billowy, vivid green fern was a rare and exceedingly lovely one.—W. H. Hudson, in "Hampshire Days."

What We Forget Between 15 and 50

Schools teach, and nearly every home applies the rule against coffee and tea for children.

When middle age comes, a great many people remember the facts about the caffeine drug of coffee and tea, and how its regular use may disturb health. Often they have cause to remember what it has done to them.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—delightful, and safe for any age—at any time. Good for breakfast at home, for all the family; good for lunch at the club or restaurant; good with the evening meal; good with a late night dinner—good on any occasion. Postum satisfies, and it never harms.

Why not be friendly with health, all the time?

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

—15—

A School District Held Up.

Colonel Woodruff was on his feet as Jim made his way through the crowd about the door.

"Mr. Irwin is here, ladies and gentlemen," said he, "and I move that we hear from him as to what we can do to meet the offer of our friends in Pottawatomie county; but before I yield the floor, I want to say that this meeting has been worth while just to have been the occasion of our all becoming better acquainted with our friend and neighbor, Mr. Simms. Whatever may have been the lack of understanding, on our part, of his qualities, they were all cleared up by that speech of his—the best I have ever heard in this neighborhood.

More applause, in the midst of which Old Man Simms slunk away down in his seat to escape observation. Then the chairman said that if there was no objection they would hear from their well-known citizen, whose growing fame was more remarkable for the fact that it had been gained as a country schoolmaster—he need not add that he referred to Mr. James E. Irwin. (More and louder applause.)

"Friends and neighbors," said Jim, "you ask me to say to you what I want you to do. I want you to do what you want to do—nothing more or less. Last year I was glad to be tolerated here; and the only change in the situation lies in the fact that I have another place offered me—unless there has been a change in your feelings toward me and my work. I hope there has been; for I know my work is good now, whereas I only believed it then."

"Sure it is!" shouted Con Bonner from a front seat, thus signalizing that astute wirepuller's definite choice of a place in the bandwagon. "Tell us what you want, Jim!"

"What do I want?" asked Jim. "More than anything else, I want such meetings as this—often—and a place to hold them. If I stay in the Woodruff District, I want this meeting to effect a permanent organization to work with me. I can't teach this district anything. Nobody can teach any one anything. All any teacher can do is to direct people's activities in teaching themselves. You are gathered here to decide what you'll do about the small matter of keeping me at work as your hired man.

"If I'm to be your hired man, I want a boss in the shape of a civic organization which will take in every man and woman in the district. Here's the place and now's the time to make that organization—an organization the object of which shall be to put the whole district at school, and to boss me in my work for the whole district."

"Then I want you to work out a building scheme for the school," Jim went on. "We want a place where girls can learn to cook, keep house, take care of babies, sew, and learn to be wives and mothers. There's somebody right in this neighborhood able to teach anything the young people want to learn.

"And I want a physician here once in a while to examine the children as to their health, and a dentist to look after their teeth and teach them how to care for them. Also an oculist to examine their eyes. And when Bettina Hansen comes home from the hospital a trained nurse, I want her to have a job as visiting nurse right here in the Woodruff District.

"I want a counting-room for the keeping of the farm accounts and the record of our observation in farming. I want co-operation in letting us have these accounts.

"I want some manual training equipment for wood-working and metal working, and a blacksmith and wagon shop, in which the boys may learn to shoe horses, repair tools, design buildings, and practice the best agricultural engineering. I want to do work in poultry according to the most modern breeding discoveries, and I want your co-operation in that, and a poultry plant somewhere in the district.

"I want a laboratory in which we can work on seeds, pests, soils, feeds and the like. For the education of your children must come out of these things.

"I want these things because they are necessary if we are to get the culture out of life we should get—and nobody gets culture out of any sort of school—they get it out of life, or they don't get it at all.

"So I want you to build as freely for your school as for your cattle and horses and hogs.

"The school will make for you—this new kind of rural school—a social life which will be the social center, because it will be the educational center, and the business center of the countryside.

"I want all these things, and more. But I don't expect them all at once. I know that this district is too small to do all of them, and therefore, I want a bigger district—one that will give us the financial strength to carry out the program I have sketched. This may be a presumptuous thing for me to propose. If you think so, let me go. But if you don't, please keep this meeting together in a permanent organization of grownup members of the Woodruff school, and by pulling together, you can do these things—all of them—and many more—and you'll make the Woodruff District a good place to live in and die in—and I shall be proud to live and die in it at your service, as the neighborhood's hired man!"

As Jim sat down there was a hush in the crowded room, as if the people were dazed at his assurance. There was no applause, until Jennie Woodruff, now seen by Jim for the first time over next the blackboard, clapped her gloved hands together and started it; then it swept out through the windows in a storm. The dust rose from stamping feet until the kerosene lamps were dimmed by it. And as the noise subsided, Jim saw standing out in front the stooped form of B. B. Hamm, one of the most prosperous men in the district.

"Mr. Chairman—Ezra Bronson," he roared, "this feller's crazy, an' from the sound of things, you're all as crazy as he is. If this fool scheme of his goes through, my farm's for sale! I'll quit before I'm sold out for taxes!"

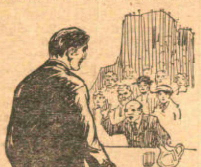
"Just a minute, B. B.!" interposed Colonel Woodruff. "This ain't as dangerous as you think. You don't want us to do all this in fifteen minutes, do you, Jim?"

"Oh, as to that," replied Jim, "I just wanted you to have in your minds what I have in my mind—and unless we can agree to work toward these things there's no use in my staying. But time—that's another matter. Believe with me, and I'll work with you."

"Get out of here!" said the colonel to Jim in an undertone, "and leave the rest to your friends."

Jim walked out of the room and took the way toward his home. A horse tied to the hitching-pole had his blanket under foot, and Jim replaced it on his back, patting him kindly and talking horse language to him. Then he went up and down the line of teams, readjusting blankets, tying loosened knots, and assuring himself that his neighbors' horses were securely tied and comfortable. He knew horses better than he knew people, he thought. If he could manage people as he could manage horses—but that would be wrong. Horse management was despotism; man-government must be like the government of a society of wild horses, the result of the common work of the members of the herd.

Two figures emerged from the schoolhouse door, and as he turned toward his home after his pastoral calls on the horses, they overtook him. They were the figures of Newton Bronson and the county superintendent of schools.



"Tell Us What You Want, Jim."

"Dad wants you back there again," said Newton.

"What for?" inquired Jim.

"You silly boy," said Jennie, "you talked about the good of the schools all of the time, and never said a word about your own salary! What do you want? They want to know?"

"Oh!" exclaimed Jim in the manner of one who suddenly remembers that he has forgotten his umbrella or his pocket-knife. "I forgot all about it. I haven't thought about that at all, Jennie!"

"Jim," said she, "you need a guardian!"

"I know it, Jennie," said he, "and I know who I want. I want—"

"Please come back," said Jennie, "and tell papa how much you're going to hold the district up for."

"You run back," said Jim to Newton, "and tell your father that whatever is right in the way of salary will be satisfactory to me. I leave that to the people."

"I can't go back there!" said Jim.

"I'm proud of you, Jim," said Jennie. "This community has found its master. They can't do all you ask now, nor very soon; but finally they'll do just as you want them to do. And, Jim, I want to say that I've been the biggest little fool in the county!"

CHAPTER XX

Theory and Practice.

Superintendent Jennie sat at her desk in no very satisfactory frame of mind. In the first place the court was to convene on the following Monday, so that her one-room office was not to be hers for a few days. To Wilbur Smythe, who did her the honor of calling occasionally, she remarked that if they didn't soon build the new courthouse so as to give her such accommodations as her office really needed, "they might take their old office—so there!"

"Fair woman," said Wilbur, as he creased his Prince Albert in a parting bow, "should adorn the home!"

"Bosh!" sneered Jennie, rather pleased, all the same, "suppose she isn't fair, and hasn't any home!"

This question of adorning a home was no nearer settlement with Jennie than it had ever been, though increasingly a matter of speculation. There were two or three men—rather good catches, too—who, if they were encouraged—but what was there to any of them? This is what Jennie asked her paper-weight as she placed it on a pile of unfinished examination papers. And the paper-weight echoed, "not a thing out of the ordinary!" And then, said Jennie, "Well, you little simpleton, who and what are you so out of the ordinary that you should sneer at Wilbur Smythe and Beckman Fifield and such men?" And echo answered, "What?"—and then the mail-carrier came in.

Down near the bottom of the pile she found this letter, signed by a southern state superintendent of schools, but dated at Kirkville, Missouri:

"I am a member of a party of southern educators—state superintendents in the main—en tour of the country to see what we can find of an instructive nature in rural school work. Professor Withers of Ames suggests that we visit your schools, and especially the rural school taught by a young man named Irwin, and I wonder if you will be free on next Monday morning, if we come to your office, to direct us to the place? If you could accompany us on the trip, and perhaps show us some of your other excellent schools, we should be honored and pleased."

And then came the shock—a party of state officials were coming into the county to study Jim Irwin's school! They would never come to study Wilbur Smythe's law practice—never in the world—or her work as county superintendent—never!—and Jim was getting seventy-five dollars a month, and had a mother to support. But there could be no doubt that there was something to Jim—the man was out of the ordinary. And wasn't that just what she had been looking for in her mind?

Jennie wired to her southerner for the number of his party, and secured automobiles for the trip. She sent a note to Jim Irwin telling of the prospective visitation. She would show all concerned that she could do some things, anyhow, and she would send these people on with a good impression of her county.

She was glad of the automobiles the next Monday morning, when at nine-thirty the train discharged upon her a dozen very alert, very up-to-date, very inquisitive southerners, male and female, most of whom seemed to have left their "r's" in the gulf region. It was eleven when the party parked their machines before the schoolhouse door.

"There are visitors here before us," said Jennie.

"Seems rather like an educational shrine," said Doctor Brathwayt of Mississippi. "How does he accommodate so many visitors in that small edifice?"

"I am not aware," said Jennie, "that he has been in the habit of receiving so very many from outside the district. Well, shall we go in?"

Once inside, Jennie felt a queer return of her old aversion to Jim's methods—the aversion which had caused her to criticize him so sharply on the occasion of her first visit. The reason for the return of the feeling lay in the fact that the work going on was the same sort, but of a more intense character. It was so utterly unlike a school as Jennie understood the word, that she glanced back at the group of educators with a little blush. The school was in a sort of uproar. Not that uproar of boredom and mischief of which most of us have familiar memories, but a sort of eager uproar, in which every child was intensely interested in the same thing; and did little rustling things because of this interest; something like the hum at a football game or a dog-fight.

On one side of the desk stood Jim Irwin, and facing him was a smooth stranger of the old-fashioned lightning-rod-agent type—the shallower and laxer sort of salesman of the kind whose sole business is to get signatures on the dotted line, and let some one else do the rest. In short, he was a "closer."

Standing back of him in evident distress was Mr. Cornelius Bonner, and grouped about were Columbus Brown, B. B. Hamm, Ezra Bronson, A. B. Talcott and two or three others from outside the Woodruff district. With envelopes in their hands and the light of battle in their eyes stood Newton Bronson, Raymond Simms, Bettina Hansen, Mary Smith and Angie Talcott, the boys filled with delight, the girls rather frightened at being engaged in something like a debata with the salesman.

ORIGIN OF FIRST MODERN ATLAS

The first modern atlas was the work of Abraham Ortelius, a Dutch geographer, who died in Antwerp.

His monumental work, entitled the "Theatrum Orbis Terrarum," was first published at Antwerp in 1570, and was revised and reissued five times during the author's lifetime. It was a folio volume containing nearly 100 maps representing the different countries and continents as they were then known. Although this atlas was a momentous achievement, a monument of erudition and industry, a bright schoolboy of today could draw maps from memory with a better approximation to correctness.

Even England and Scotland appear in this pioneer volume with amazing distortions of coastline and relative area, and many other maps in the volume bear only a slight resemblance to those of today.

The name of "atlas," derived from that of the Greek god condemned to bear on his shoulders the vault of heaven, was first given to a collection of maps by Girard Mercator, another distinguished Dutch geographer of the Sixteenth century.

The W.C.T.U. meeting held with Ethel Clement on Friday was well attended. Two comforters were tied and after a fine potluck dinner all enjoyed a good program. A number of legislative bills were mentioned of interest to temperance worker sand while it was shown that the Prohibition outlook is encouraging it was also shown that the opposing factions are hard at work trying to check the work of temperance forces- The Feb. meeting will be held at the Methodist parsonage.

The Womans Circle met at the home of Mrs Viola Owens January 17 th for the day. A lovely dinner was served at noon. At 2:30 p.m. the president called the meeting to order by reading the collect. There were 15 members and 3 guests present. Secretary's report read and approved; treasurer's report approved. Answer to roll call "what part of the newspaper do you read first". The secretary read an invitation from the woman's club of North Adams to be their guest at their annual guest day, February 4. The invitation was accepted. After business meeting the program was as follows: "Our Daily Newspaper" Mrs Etta McLaughlin; "Why read the Newspaper" Mrs Etta Collins; discussion led by Nettie Smith. Mrs Grace Williams read a number of interesting articles on why the special session of the legislature was called Dec.4 1923 and told how long the sessions were held and what they did at the regular and special sessions. Motion was made to adjourn to meet with Mrs Julia Owens February 7, 1924. Goldie Stevens, Secretary.

At last Dr. Laird, president of Albion College, has resigned, owing to so much adverse criticism among students and other enemies at the institution. It is said that Laird's administration has been one of great up-building for the college, but owing to various unfortunate circumstances his name has been considerably slandered in one way and another and he thought best to resign. He is succeeded by Prof F.A. Goodrich who is at once establishing a far stricter discipline than before. It is quite likely the offending students who have aided materially in "booing" Dr. Laird out of the chapel will not gain very much by the results of their animosity. While Goodrich is generally liked and a long time instructor at Albion yet he is a martinet and any inclination to indulge in the "sporting" proclivities as has been done will be harshly dealt with.

Organization of Naval Reserve Under Way

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 24. First steps in the organizing of a unit of the United States Naval Reserves at the University of Michigan have been taken, under the command of Ensign Russel Dodd, U. S. N. R. F. The unit will be the Third Division, Third battalion, sixth regiment of the organization.

More than 75 applicants for membership attended the first meeting for instructions. Physical examinations are being conducted, and when they are completed the final steps in organization will be taken. The members of the unit will hold regular drill sessions, will participate in rifle practice on the government range at Ypsilanti, and will make a fifteen day cruise on the Great Lakes some time during the summer.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 5th day of March, 1920, executed by Joshua Smith and Harriet E. Smith, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 6th day of March, 1920 recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 163 of Mortgages on page 424; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the said mortgagors to pay the interest and certain portions of principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable; and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Five Thousand Four Hundred Fourteen and Fifty-six Hundredths (5414 56) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 25th day of February, 1924, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county,) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale with attorney's fee provided by statute.

The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, to wit; the west one half of the southeast quarter of Section 22 in Township 7 south, Range 1 west, [illegible] eighty acres more or less.

Dated, November 23, 1923.

Highway Convention

The great road maker's convention in Chicago is over. The exhibitors have taken their machinery and materials and departed. The Coliseum, which for a week demonstrated the wonderful progress which road making has had, is empty of all that pertains to highways.

But the results of the exhibit remain. Never before was so remarkable a gathering of educational material regarding highways put beneath one roof. Never before has it been possible for anyone, within the space of a few hundred feet, to gather so comprehensive an idea of what roads are, how they are built, what they are built of, what they cost, how they should be used, how they should be financed.

It is very certain that the educators, builders, engineers, county and state officials, teachers, students, and the general public which thronged this great exposition, took away with them much information, the results of which will be apparent for many years to come. The little leaven leavens the whole lump; the educated man spreads knowledge about him. Those who have learned of roads, not as a theory but as they are, will talk; those who talk will be interested; a greater and greater degree of sentiment will be created regarding the necessity of more, many more, good roads in this country.

In its special educational field, the road exposition undoubtedly did a great deal, but its greatest achievement unquestionably is its showing forth to the Nation the state of the art of highway building and educating road makers, users and buyers alike, in its boundless possibilities.

To the newspaper association members of the National Highways Association:

We are working for good roads everywhere. Our 7593 Newspaper Association members can do more to get them built than anyone else. We believe that these good roads can only be obtained through a system of National Highways, built and maintained by the National Government. We believe this is also best for the tax payers and users of our highways as well as for those who make money out of their building. We believe "A Paved United States in our day" can only be brought about in this way.

While we advocate this, we are for all efforts towards good roads, for all methods help towards the ultimate solution of the road problem. While for National highways we are not against Federal Aid, even though we are convinced the latter will not solve the road problem.

National Highways will be financed by general National taxation, thus equitably distributing the cost. Therefore, the rich northwestern states will pay about half the cost of both building and maintenance. They will profit the most and therefore afford such cost. Nearly all the other half will be borne by the great and wealthy cities as is the case with state highways built at state expense. This is fair, as the cities gain the most. And finally, the farmers, while getting the most miles, will pay the least. This is also fair, as the Nation ultimately depends upon the well being and prosperity of the farmers..

The Old Time Debating School

It has passed away; peace to its ashes: but there is a lingering suspicion it did not die a natural death. Far too many of our young collegians and high school children enter the vicissitudes of life without adequate training along the line of expemporaneous speaking. It is to be deplored that such is the case and the only solution of the problem is more attention to this work in the day school. To such a crisis has this matter come that we have known lawyers in regular practice who could not to save their lives put forth in court a real comprehensive and staightforward plea before a jury. Ah yes! This department of the student's education is sadly neglected in these days of tense athletic urge and base ball and basket ball activities. The average student prides himself not on his ability to go before a large audience and put up a good, un embarassed talk, but rather on his score in the athletic field. The good old days of declamation and debating have gone aft agley as Burns said and most of the instuctors do not require this accomplishment in the curriculum in order to railroad a graduate through the high school and send him to the University. Apropos of this statement we note with pleasure that North Adams High School under the present estimable management is reviving these ancient customs for such they would seem to the average modern pedagog.

The drifted condition of the roads the past week has been proverbial. On Friday of last week Dr. McFarland was driving on the angling road south-west of the village when his Ford coupe became stalled in the drifts near the home of Walter Harwood. Investigation also disclosed that the differential gears were broken. The doctor was obliged to leave his rig and walk toward North Adams. Arriving at Everett Williams' farm he rode into town with the latter. North and south roads in this vicinity certainly register the worst in years.

Albert Calkins who was jailed on the charges of a 12 year old girl in Hillsdale recently pleading guilty to the chages was sentenced Monday morning by Judge Chester to 5 to 10 yearr in Jackson Prison with a recommendation of five years at hard labor. The Judge in sentencing this disreputable culprit said: "Just how a man fifty years of age who is married and has a fine family could fall in this way I am unable to determine. I can find no excuse for a man like yourself contributing to the delinquency of a little girl only 12 years old last August."

Mrs McMillan spent some months with Mrs Rock and family last summer. Mrs Rock left on Thursday for Midland where the funeral and burial will take place.

On acccuut of the inclement weather of Sunday church attendance was very small. At the Congregational church it was expected to decide on a pastor from the various candidates who have been tried out, but on account of the meager audience this important matter was postponed. Next Sunday Feb. 3 it is hoped and desired that a goodly number will be present on account of settling this matter. All members of church and society take notice.

J. M. Livermore a resident of Wheatland township died very suddenly last week Thursday. Clifford Allen was at his place unloading coal in which Mr Livermore assisted. When they had finished Mr Allen picked up the lines to drive away and upon turning perceived Mr Livermore lying on the ground. The stricken man was carried into the house and Dr McFarland summoned who pronounced the cause as heart failure and must have been instantaneous. Obituary appears elsewhere in this issue. Mr Livermore had been a subscriber to this paper for many years.

Death Of John Garlinghouse

Daniel Garlinghouse received the sad intelligence of the death of his brother John, at Napoleon some time between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Mr Garlinghouse was 85 years of age and leaves to mourn besides his widow the brother Daniel and several nephews and nieces. As we go to press notice of the funeral has been announced as today, (Friday) at the late home.

Death Of Erving Vreeland

Erving Vreeland formerly of this village but who has resided in Lansing for a few years suddenly dropped dead at that place on Monday. He had been working at the blacksmith business at an automobile plant.

Funeral services were held in North Adams at the home of Will VanAken on Wednesday afternoon and burial was in the local cemetary, Rev. W. W. Gray officiating.

Mr Vreeland was born in North Adams March 1, 1868. He was married December 24, 1896, to Minnie G. Nickerson of Litchfield and to this union were born three children, Clifford who passed away at the age of 15 months, Gernold A. and Ervin R. who with the widow are left to mourn the loss of a kind andloving father and husband, also his father, George Vreeland, one brother Charles Vreeland and one sister Mrs Anna Fowler and many more distant relatives and friends.

Commencement Programs Here

Schools desiring to procure Commencement invitations for 1924 will find here a very nice display of samples which we can print out for you at a very reasonable rate. It has become fashionable in some villages to send away to the mail order house for this class of work and to recieve mail order workmanship which in some cases proves highly unsatisfactory, But then of course you know we have different ideas about life. The mail order printer is careful to get your money first of all; then after getting that, he gets the order out as it suits him and if it don't suit you why what does it matter? He has your money; you have his promise.

She Is In Dire Distress

Mable Normand notorious screen actress, is again to reap the benefits of a real Bohemian existence which she has led for several years. The great movie picture public are beginning to believe Mabel is a real crook. For the second time her playful proclivities having led her afar from the road of virtue. It will be remembered she was once accused of murdering a director named Taylor, and had such a close call from the penalty her destinies hung by a thread as it were. To day she stands accused of another murder. Of course there are the faints and scenario effects in the witness box and so on but juries are getting quite wised up in dealing with such vampires. Throughout the picture world goes the edict banning Mabel,s pictures but its a farce, Nine tenths of the patrons of her pictures will now be still more crazy for her dope.

Jones had a terrible toothache and, happening to run across an old friend who just had returned from his honeymoon with a young and charming wife, asked him if he knew of a cure for it.

"Look here, old chap," said his friend, "I had toothache last week. When I went home my wife cured it completely. Why don't you try it?"

"That's a splendid idea," said Jones. "Is your wife at home now?"

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Socialist Government Is Installed in Britain and Has Strike to Settle.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GREAT BRITAIN is now ruled by the first Socialist government in her history. Before the great war such a condition would have been almost unthinkable. Today the British people contemplate it without fear, almost with complete equanimity. The program of change went through swiftly and smoothly. The Labor party's resolution of "no confidence" in the Tory government was adopted Monday night by a vote of 328 to 256, the Liberals flocking with the Laborites on the division and being greeted with loud cheers by the latter. In the gallery the prince of Wales and the duke of York watched the proceedings with intense interest. Next day Prime Minister Baldwin and his cabinet presented their resignations to the king. Ramsay MacDonald was summoned to Buckingham palace and asked to form a new ministry, and promptly accepted. His cabinet, as announced and approved by the king, was about as had been forecast, the only surprise being the appointment of Viscount Chelmsford, a Tory peer and former viceroy of India, as first lord of the admiralty. MacDonald, in addition to the premiership, holds the post of minister for foreign affairs; Philip Snowden is chancellor of the exchequer; Arthur Henderson is home secretary; J. H. Thomas is secretary for the colonies; Thomas Shaw is minister of labor; Viscount Haldine is lord chancellor; Sydney Webb is president of the board of trade; and J. R. Clynes is lord of the privy seal and deputy leader of the house of commons. Two of MacDonald's ministers who probably will be made peers are Sir Sydney Olivier, secretary for India, and Brig. Gen. C. B. Thompson, secretary for air.

There was little or no adverse criticism of the new prime minister's selections for government positions, even the rabid Tory press commending them. The ministers got busy with their jobs at once, and parliament was adjourned for a few weeks to permit them to familiarize themselves with their duties. The first serious matter that confronts the Labor government is the strike of railway engineers and firemen, which began at midnight Sunday, despite the efforts of the party leaders to stop it. Within a few days the strike had reduced the railway efficiency of the United Kingdom 60 per cent and industry was gravely affected. The trades union congress, whose president is Margaret Bondfield, who also is undersecretary for labor, appointed an emergency committee to intervene when the moment is considered opportune. Foodstuffs for London and the other large cities are being brought in by motor trucks, and many manufacturers organized fleets of trucks to carry their employees.

NICOLAI LENIN, creator of the Russian soviet government, died on Monday after an illness that had kept him from his official work for many months. The Red followers of the premier mourned him deeply, passed by tens of thousands before his body where it lay in state in the House of Unions in Moscow, and laid him to rest in the Kremlin. At this writing it is not known who will succeed the arch Communist who was abandoning Communist principles in his rule of Russia because, as he bluntly admitted, they would not work. Probably the new premier will be Stallin, minister of nationalities, but the place may go to Zinoviev or Kamanev. However, there is said to be a serious split in the ranks of the bolshevists, one group wishing to continue the modified policies of Lenin and the other favoring a return to the old plan of Communist propaganda abroad and efforts to bring about a world revolution. It is noted, too, that the peasants are steadily moving toward democracy as opposed to sovietism. Leon Trotzky, Lenin's confrere in establishing the Communist regime, is supposed to be in the Caucasus, either exiled by the Stallin-Krassin faction or ill, or both. Some believe he will make a fight for the control of the soviets, but the general opinion is that his political strength is gone.

SENATOR KING of Utah, who recently visited Russia, told the senate Tuesday that he believed the resumption of trade relations with that country under proper guarantees would help the Russian people in their efforts to oust the bolshevist regime. The conditions he suggested were that American claims of $767,000,000 against Russia be validated and that the United States be protected against hostile propaganda by the bolshevik government and its agents and the Third Internationale. The reality of such propaganda was further established by quantities of documents submitted by the State department last week to the senate subcommittee. According to some of these papers, the aim was an "armed uprising" in this country designed to "destroy the bourgeois government."

TEAPOT DOME was the center of great excitement all last week. The senate investigation into the lease of the naval oil reserve there by Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, to Harry Sinclair brought out sensational testimony; and the end is not yet, for President Coolidge directed the Department of Justice to watch the proceedings and to take such action as seemed desirable. Archie Roosevelt, son of the late president, started the week out well by telling the committee of the suspicious circumstances that caused him to resign from the Sinclair company. He said G. D. Wahlberg, Sinclair's private secretary, told him $68,000 had been paid to the foreman of Fall's ranch in New Mexico. Wahlberg said Roosevelt misunderstood him, but he gave other damaging testimony. The committee summoned Fall from the South and also cabled to Sinclair, now in Europe, to come back and produce his private books and papers. This the oil man said he would do when his business abroad was finished. Meanwhile Edward Doheny, another oil magnate, who is the lessee of a naval oil reserve in California, volunteered to tell the committee all he could about the transactions. He said that he was the man who loaned Fall the $100,000 which he used in enlarging and improving his ranch, that he did it because he and Fall were old friends, and that he was innocent of wrongdoing. In December Fall told the committee he had not received money from either Doheny or Sinclair.

Senator Walsh informed the senate that he would propose a resolution authorizing the President to institute suit to annul the leases and to secure an accounting of all oil taken from the reserves. He declared that he would seek to have such proceedings conducted independent of Attorney General Daugherty. He asserted that there were some features of the Teapot Dome affair "in connection with which the attorney general himself is under some degree of suspicion and criticism."

Interviewed in Paris, Harry Sinclair said the whole affair was bunk and politics, that he got the Teapot Dome lease honestly and squarely and that the government received more than its full due for it.

IN THE list of congressional investigations we now come to that conducted by the senate committee on propaganda which is trying to find out whether or not the Bok peace plan contest was designed to influence the senate to vote in favor of American participation in the League of Nations or in the world court. Edward Bok himself was the week's chief witness, and he flatly refused to disclose the amount of money he had contributed to further the contest, holding that the financing of his plan was a wholly personal matter. He did say that he alone had paid the expenses of the contest, that Elihu Root was the only member of the jury of award whom he nominated, and that he had left all the details of the affair to Miss Esther Lape. That lady also was a witness, but gave the committee little satisfaction. It is feared the American public attaches small importance to this particular investigation.

HEEDING the firm admonitions of the Washington government, the Mexican rebels decided to abandon their contemplated blockade of the port of Tampico, and also they began the removal of the floating mines they had placed in the Vera Cruz, Frontera and Puerta Mexico harbors. The revolutionists claim the occupation of numerous towns, but in the main operations it seems the federal forces are scoring successes. They have so far prevented the capture of the oil fields and they are reported to be advancing steadily on Guadalajara, whose occupation is expected soon. In an address in New York Secretary of State Hughes defended the administration's policy in the matter of the Mexican rebellion, declaring it to be "the greatest contribution directly within our power, and in accord with our established traditions and manifest interest, to the cause of world peace."

SECRETARY HUGHES and Ambassador Geddes signed on Wednesday the treaty concerning liquor search and ship liquor stores, and it will go into effect without waiting for the formal exchange of ratifications. Under the agreement suspected liquor smuggling craft flying the British flag are subject to search and seizure anywhere within one hour's sailing distance from shore. Vessels improperly detained will be compensated for loss or damage. The United States grants to British ships the right to carry sealed stores of ship liquors into American ports.

WITH the opening of the annual convention of the United Mine Workers in Indianapolis the old struggle between the conservatives led by President John L. Lewis and the radicals was renewed, and again the radicals met defeat. The test came on their proposal to reinstate the deposed district officials of Nova Scotia, which was rejected. Mr. Lewis contended that all the officers of the Nova Scotian body had given adherence to the "red internationale of Russia" rather than to the United Mine Workers of America. Again the radicals were beaten in the matter of recognition of Russia, the convention voting for recognition in accordance with the policies enunciated by Secretary of State Hughes.

IN THE wheat states of the Northwest and especially in South Dakota the financial situation is becoming so serious that government agencies are moving to the rescue. A number of banks have closed their doors. Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance Corporation, went to Minneapolis to confer with Twin Cities bankers, and the corporation prepared to open a branch immediately in Sioux Falls. Mr. Meyer said: "Fundamentally, the economic conditions in South Dakota warrant absolute confidence in the future of the state."

Passage of pending legislation embodying the so-called Coulter plan for a $50,000,000 fund for loans to assist wheat farmers to diversify their activities.

Extension of the War Finance Corporation, which under present law can make no loans after March 31, until December 31.

Creation by private capital of a substantial financing corporation to assist in the plan of reorganization.

GEN. LEE CHRISTMAS, one of the western continent's most picturesque characters, died last week in New Orleans of pernicious anemia. An engineer on a fruit company's road in Honduras, he was forced to take part in a revolution there in 1897, and liked it so well that he became a soldier of fortune and devoted his time thereafter to the frequent upheavals in Central America. He was wounded seven times and escaped assassins a score of times.

Large Garnet Quarry in Adirondack Mountains

Tucked away in the heart of the Adirondack mountains, near beautiful Thirteenth lake, and about three and a half miles to the south and west of the village of North River, Warren county, New York, are the plant and the associate properties of America's largest producer of abrasive garnet. The North River ore has the reputation of superiority owing to conditions surrounding its birth eons ago, when the earth's crust in that neighborhood underwent tremendous movements, which, combined with several different intrusions of igneous rock, thoroughly transformed the ancient sediments.

The commercial value of abrasive garnet depends upon its hardness, toughness, manner of fracturing and purity. The grains, crystals, or masses of the garnet must be large enough to yield, when crushed and screened, particles of sharply angular form and of varying sizes to meet the requirements for different grades of abrasive papers. Therefore, a laminated garnet, which will break up into relatively sharp, angular grains is most to be desired. It is the sharp cutting edges of the abrasive that do the work for which garnet papers are employed. Garnet paper as a competitor of quartz and paper was first brought out in the eighties, and has won widening recognition ever since because of qualities which distinguish the garnet abrasive from the quartz-sand abrasive.—Detroit News.

Michigan Happenings

Police Court jury recently convicted William Ellerthorpe, Clyde township farmer, of not paying his dog tax, and so far, the constitutionality of State Dog Tax law has been upheld. Mr. Ellerthorpe, however, says that he will appeal his conviction to the Circuit Court at Port Huron, and if necessary to the Supreme Court in his effort to have the law declared unconstitutional. Mr. Ellerthorpe, following his conviction by a jury of six men, was fined $10. The fine has not been paid pending his appeal.

Shortening of the open season on partridge in the upper peninsula will be one of the questions to be considered at the spring meeting of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association. Delegates from the lower peninsula to the annual meeting of the Congress of Michigan Game associations, held in Marquette reported that only a few partridge are left in the lower part of the state and that unless a closed season in southern Michigan is ordered, there is a danger of the birds becoming extinct.

A request has been received from the Traverse City state hospital by the administrative board for an increase in its $50,000 appropriation for the construction of a dining hall for women patients. It was explained that by authorizing the expenditure of a greater sum a combination building which would afford a recreation room for the patients, can be erected.

While the Rev. H. E. Walker, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, of Grand Rapids, was delivering the funeral oration at the services for Gilbert Coffey, in the church last week, Joseph C. Coade, 63, grocer and lifelong friend of Coffey, died of apoplexy. Coade was stricken as the minister began the sermon.

Despite the fact that in December, 1922, Detroit postal receipts made so large a gain over the same month in the preceding year that the city ranked second in the country, the continued heavy business done at the local postoffice once more brought it well up in the gains for December, 1923, over those of December, 1922.

Dr. Benjamin Southworth, 45 years old, of Schoolcraft, one of the most widely known physicians of southwestern Michigan, died at Kalamazoo recently. He owed his wide popularity in several counties to the fact he would drive many miles day or night, whenever called.

The new Oceana County Hospital at Hart has been opened. The capacity of the hospital is 12 beds, and it is believed that it is large enough for the needs of the county. The hospital was realized through public subscription obtained from all parts of the county.

For the first time in its history Muskegon's $1,500,000 water works system is on a self-supporting basis. The revenue from the plant for 1924 is expected to pay not only the costs of operation, water main extension, but also the bonds falling due and interest.

Southwestern Michigan fruit growers around Paw Paw have checked over the damage done to their orchards by the cold wave. Mild weather up to the recent cold wave had a tendency to make buds and wood tender.

The pulpit of Rev. Father T. J. Ryan, who died recently, after 30 years in charge of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic parish at Pontiac, will be filled by Rev. Father James B. Thornton, of St. John's church, Monroe.

Floyd C. A. Lockwood, 45 years old, for 20 years an employe of the Lansing postoffice department and for the last six years postmaster at North Lansing, died recently, following a brief illness.

The Baptist church at Charlotte was recently destroyed by fire of unknown origin causing a loss, according to trustees, of $6,000. The structure will be rebuilt.

Thirty-three members of the scientific faculties of the University of Michigan have been elected to membership in the Junior Research society.

Alvin L. Burridge, of Crystal Falls, has been appointed major of engineers in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

A recommendation that Oakland County bond itself for $450,000 for the erection of a new county infirmary, contagious disease hospital, tuberculosis hospital and juvenile detention home on the present county farm site, has been made by the committee of supervisors appointed in October to study the situation.

A proposal to sell the municipal electric light plant at Bronson was voted down at a special election held recently. The vote was 220 to 59.

The counties of the state paid out $54,923 in 1923 for chickens, rabbits, sheep and other fowls and animals killed by dogs, according to a report completed by the auditor general.

An additional 612 acres at the west end of Mackinac Island has been acquired by the State Park Commission for $75,000. The land, which now is occupied by the Wawashakana golf course, was the site of a battle between American and British forces in the war of 1812.

Bay of Fundy Tides

The proposal has been made by a Canadian engineer to turn the tides of the Bay of Fundy to use. His plan is to build a system of dams at the mouths of the Petlcodiac and Meramcook rivers, to connect these dams by a wing dam to the point of land between and thus to generate continuously from 90,000 to 200,000 horsepower. The tides in the Bay of Fundy are frequently as high as 45 feet.

Apropos of Our Article in Issue January 18

Below we publish a communication as received from G. D. Ball of Addison and as we have not the pleasure of this gentleman's acquaintance we hand him a handshake through our columns. The letter speaks for itself and we trust no one will get the wrong impression from these dissertations:

"Mr Editor, how dare you?

The idea of a country Editor criticising an ambassador of the Pope. Did you not know that editor whom you criticise was legally within his rights when executing orders from his superior? You must remember that we are living in a country where freedom of speech, press and political frauds are permissible under Demo- republico-rule therefore that weakly scribe should be exonerated from all blame for carrying out the dictum of the Pope.

Again, the recent medico-scarlio-small pox fever which was raging in the imagination of the Hudson profession might have something to do with the finances of the scribe as well as with the purse strings of the vaxine dispensers, his fear of dying with the thought of not having sufficient of this world's goods to purchase his exit from purgatory was the cause of this outburst of venom against the K. K. K. Undoubtedly he gets absolution for that article, which in these stringent times has a value in case of demise.

Another thought might have struck him. In our national halls of legislation we have about 60 per cent representatives who lean so heavy toward Catholocism that it draws many votes to prop up the system of investigations, whitewashing and exoneration. You know the above system has been substituted for Legislative Executive and Judiciary, the three principles upon which our government was founded

Do not be so severe with the gentleman, Hudson may some day remove that post and plant in its stead a new fool proof, and non-perishable one, one that when a fool buts up against it with a flivver, it will not disturb it. The K. K. K. are now working on that kind of a post, and when it has been completed and set up in Washington, these old rotten weekly junk which are saturated with Catholic holy water and the oil of incense will all go to the scrap heap and be carted away to where the worm dyeth not and the fire is not quenched.

Not long since, Addison had a K. K. K. cross burning over in the Jerico subdivision, and it so excited one of the residents of that suburb that he jumped from the top floor and lit square astride the cross when both came down with a thud, and the individual was so elated that he danced a jig right over the blazing cross, but his unwavering faith in the pope and a little holy water quenched the flames before it scorched a rag.

If you dare approach the ambassador, you might advise him, that if his master, the pope will throw open the doors of thenunneries and other religio-prison houses which curses America and is a stigma upon any civilized nation, and submit them to state and national inspection, the K. K. K's. will disband, and perhaps the post may be reinstated in the confidence of true Americans.

G. D. Ball, Addison, Mich."

Swiss Goiter Campaign Effective

Value of iodine in prevention and treatment of simple goiter, as well as some cases af hyperthyroidism, was demonstrated by experiments conducted in a recent campaign in Switzerland, according to advices received by the Michigan Department of Health. The little Alpine country has been the most goiter afflicted and it is the most void of iodine of all the nations in the world. To establish the efficacy of iodine as a goiter preventive, and to disprove the contention of certain Italian medical men who claim goiter to be an infectious disease, the campaign was carried forward.

According to Dr. R. Klinger who treated 761 children at Zurich, 90 per cent of these were goiterius before he began his work. After 15 months only 28 per cent of the number manifested signs of enlarged thyroid. Children numbering 3200 were cared for by Dr. M. Steinlein in the St. Gallent district. After 18 months, 2780, or 86 per cent of the patients, were releived of their affliction. The reports of Dr. F. Imbach, who treated 1083 children of Zug for a period dating from September 1920 to April 1922, show that 80 per cent of these responded to his efforts.

Treatment of the children consisted in having them eat one chocolate iodostarin tablet a week Over 90,000 children have been taking these tablets under medical control. The administration of small quantities of iodine once a week is preferable to giving larger doses twice a year, because the former is the natural method of keeping the thyroid gland saturated with iodine. Localities having the requisite amount in their food and water supplies, offer daily iodine to the inhabitants. Science attempts to imitate this in the artificial administration of iodine.

Jonesville May Because a Grape Center

The Business Men's Club of Jonesville recently met to consider the advisability of grape culture for the farms surrounding Jonesville where it is thought the soil is suitable for this crop. A committee of three responsible members recently visited Paw Paw, a big grape section, where they were shown to modus operandi of the business. These men thought best to bring to Jonesville a real grape farmer in Mr. M. Shepard who owns a vineyard of forty acres near Paw Paw. While Mr Shepard is not a professional speaker, yet he enlightened the meeting extensively on grape culture as to soil, management, marketing andthe last he impressed upon his hearers as the most important.

The vines are supposed to begin to return their yield the third year at which time the owner has expended $100.00 per acre or more in their care, so it will be seen that the expense is not a negligable quantity.

The meeting was held last week Monday evening and despite the inclement weather about 60 men sat down to a supper prepared by caterers.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

They Are Plowing Them Out

It is not only essential to build a hard road if highway transportation is to be possible; it is necessary to keep it open to traffic. There is no economic difference between a broken down bridge and a three foot fall of snow, as far as stopping traffic is concerned. There is no economic difference between a road blocked with a fallen boulder or tree and one which is snowed under so that neither team nor truck can travel over it.

Few communities would wait an instant to repair the bridge, or remove the boulder or tree; the idea that the hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in the good road should lie idle, and a whole section be cut off from the benefits of transport, until the bridge mended itself, the boulder rolled off, or the tree rotted away, is abhorent. But many communities regard a heavy fall of snow as a visitation of Providence, with which man need not interfere, because in time the same Providence will melt the snow and open the road!

In regions where snow blocks the roads, modern engineers are using rotary snow ploughs, attached to trucks, and opening the road as soon as it closes, exactly as the railroad right of way men keep the tracks open for trains regardless of the state of the weather.

Rotary ploughs to be applied to trucks are not expensive; push and scraper ploughs for lesser snowfalls are still less costly. Opening the road for traffic after a snowfall is as essential as mending bridges and maintaining the surface. Communities in the snow belt which do not have the benefits of their good roads all the year round, "save at the spiggot to lose at the bung hole," since the monetary value of one day's lost traffic is more than sufficidnt to buy the equipment and keep the snow bound road open all winter.

Stage Set For Big Farmers Week Meet

With exhibits in place, livestock groomed for company, and final details of speaking programs completed, the stage is all set at the Michigan Agricultural College for the annual Farmers Week and Housewives Congress, to be held this year from Feb. 4 to 8.

Featuring special horticultural, crops, and poultry ahows as major attractions, the exhibits this year are said to be more extensive and interesting than any ever prepared at the college. Practically every phase of agriculture and rural life is to be covered in some of the many exhibit booths.

More than 30 different state agriculture associations and groups will hold regularly scheduled meetings during the week, with many thousands of state farmers represented at the various conferences. In addition, afternoon and evening sessions at which all guests will gather to hear state and national figures discuss important agriculture and economic problems are listed each day.

Entertainment features are to play a prominent part in the week's program. Moving pictures dramatic productions, music, athletic contests, and other things of interest will be liberally sprinkled through the more serious side of the programs for the general sessions.

Hundreds of blue blooded animals in the extensive M. A. C. herds, including many state and national champions in beef cattle dairy cattle, sheep, horse and swine classes, will be on exhibit in the college barns. Results of important livestock feeding experiments will also be brought out during the week.

The question, "What Is The Future Of Agriculture?", forms the keynote of all addresses and meetings listed for the week. An answer to this vital question will be sought throughout the program.

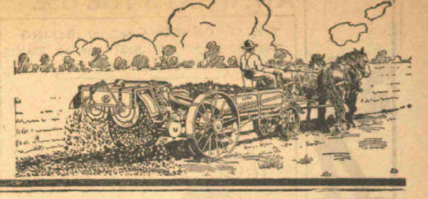
Women will have a complete program of their own in the Housewives Congress, and the slogan "Bring the Whole Family" is being used in the invitation for rural Michigan to gather for the week.

World's Record Set By M.A. C. Diary Cow

College Bravura 4th, a two year old Brown Swiss Cow owned by the Michigan Agriculture College, has just established a world's production record for her age and breed, according to announcement made at the college this week.

With a mark of 17,054.5 pounds of milk and 712.2 pounds butterfat, the new champion topped all other year records ever recorded officially in her class.

Bravura 4th comes from a long line of record holding cows in the M. A C. herds College Bravura 2nd, bred and owned ot the college, produced 19,460.6 pounds of milk and 798.16 pounds butterfat in a year,



$100,000 PEACE PLAN PRIZE AWARDED

Advocates Entering World Court and Cooperation With League Without Full Membership at Present—Suggests League Membership Be Opened to All Nations and Provides for Development of International Law.

The American Peace Award brought forth 22,165 plans and many thousands of letters. Since many of the plans were the composite work of organizations, universities, etc., a single plan often represented the views of hundreds or thousands of individuals. The content of these plans is therefore an index of the true feeling and judgment of hundreds of thousands of American citizens.

These plans come from every group in American life. Some are obviously from lifelong students of history and international law. Some are from persons who have studied little, but who have themselves seen and felt the horror of war—or who are even now living out its tragedy.

But among them all are these dominant currents: that, if war is honestly to be prevented, there must be a face-about on the part of the nations in their attitude toward it; that by some progressive agreement the manufacture and purchase of the munitions of war must be limited or stopped; that while no political mechanism alone will insure cooperation among the nations, there must be some machinery of cooperation if the will to cooperate is to be made effective; that mutual counsel among the nations is the real hope for bringing about the disavowal of war by the open avowal of its real causes and open discussion of them; and finally that there must be some means of defining, recording, interpreting and developing the law of nations.

Statement of Jury of Award

The Jury of Award realizes that there is no one approach to world peace, and that it is necessary to recognize not merely political but also psychological and economic factors. The only possible pathway to international agreement with reference to these complicated and difficult factors is through mutual counsel and cooperation which the plan selected contemplates. It is therefore the unanimous opinion of the Jury that of the 22,165 plans submitted, Plan Number 1469 is "the best practicable plan by which the United States may co-operate with other nations to achieve and preserve the peace of the world."

It is the unanimous hope of the Jury that the first fruit of the mutual counsel and cooperation among the nations which will result from the adoption of the plan selected will be a general prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all materials of war.

The Question to Be Voted Upon

The substantial provisions which constitute the plan selected by the Jury of Award, and upon which the vote of the American people is asked, are hereby submitted by the Policy Committee as follows:

I. ENTER THE PERMANENT COURT

That the United States adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice for the reasons and under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

II. COOPERATE WITH THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, WITHOUT FULL MEMBERSHIP AT PRESENT

That without becoming a member of the League of Nations as at present constituted, the United States Government should extend its present cooperation with the League and propose participation in the work of its Assembly and Council under the following conditions and reservations:

Safeguarding of Monroe Doctrine

1. The United States accepts the League of Nations as an instrument of mutual counsel, but it will assume no obligation to interfere with political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign state.

   In uniting its efforts with those of other States for the preservation of peace and the promotion of the common welfare, the United States insists upon the safeguarding of the Monroe Doctrine and does not abandon its traditional attitude concerning American independence of the Old World and does not consent to submit its long established policy concerning questions regarded by it as purely American to the recommendation or decision of other Powers.

No Military or Economic Force

2. That the only kind of compulsion which nations can freely engage to apply to each other in the name of Peace is that which arises from conference, from moral judgment, from full publicity, and from the power of public opinion.

   The United States would assume no obligations under Article X in its present form, or under Article XVI in its present form in the Covenant, or in its amended form as now proposed, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

   The United States proposes that Articles X and XVI be either dropped altogether or so amended and changed as to eliminate any suggestion of a general agreement to use coercion for obtaining conformity to the pledges of the Covenant.

No Obligations Under Versailles Treaty

3. That the United States will accept no responsibilities under the Treaty of Versailles unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

League Open to All Nations

4. The United States Government proposes that Article I of the Covenant be construed and applied, or, if necessary, redrafted, so that admission to the League shall be assured to any self-governing State that wishes to join and that receives the favorable vote of two-thirds of the Assembly.

Development of International Law

5. As a condition of its participation in the work and counsels of the League, the United States asks that the Assembly and Council consent—or obtain authority—to begin collaboration for the revision and development of international law, employing for this purpose the aid of a commission of jurists. This Commission would be directed to formulate anew existing rules of the law of nations, to reconcile divergent opinions, to consider points hitherto inadequately provided for but vital to the maintenance of international justice, and in general to define the social rights and duties of States. The recommendations of the Commission would be presented from time to time, in proper form for consideration, to the Assembly as to a recommending if not a law-making body.

Author's Name Not to Be Revealed Until After Referendum

In order that the vote may be taken solely upon the merits of the plan, the Policy Committee, with the acquiescence of Mr. Bok, has decided not to disclose the authorship of the plan until after the referendum. The identity is unknown to the members of the Jury of Award and the Policy Committee, except one delegated member.

Williams Makes Himself Heard In Congress

Our representative at Washington Arthur B. Williams of the 3rd district whom many of our townsmen and citizens have personally met, is already proving his worth to the common people commonly known as farmers. Mr. Williams announced right from the start that farmers in this district needed congressional help and if it was in his power to do something he was going to see to it they got it. From the text of the following letter we glean that Mr. Williams is on the job. Owing to the length of the bill we cannot give it entire but are endeavoring to make a rough report of the gist:

"Washington, D. C.
January 26, 1924.

Mr. Louis V. Harvey,
Editor, North Adams Advocate,
North Adams, Mich.

My dear Mr. Harvey:

I am enclosing herewith copy of a bill which I introduced in the House on Thursday of this week. This bill is in line with the speeches I made throughout the district during the summer, and carries out in detail the ideas advanced in those speeches.

Believing this is a matter that will prove of interest to your readers, I will appreciate any notice you can see your way clear to give it and in addition would like your personal reaction.

Very truly yours,
Arthur B. Williams."

The bill in question gives President Coolidge authority to appoint a committee of five members including the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington, one who shall be an expert in marketing farm products, one expert in accounts and financial affairs, one expert in transportation and one who is actually engaged in farming each of these members to receive from the government an annual salary of $10,000 plus all traveling expenses and incidentals. It shall be the duty of this board to look after the market conditions of all farm products and see that no combination or trust of buyers what ever is allowed to falsely represent the actual condition of markets to the producer. Every Co-operative Association in the land is expected and invited to register with this board subject to certain simple restrictions. Furthermore a system of standards for weighing and grading all farm products will be prescribed by law and no hap-hazard rule-o-thumb methods will be tolerated. Routing shipments will also be attended to so as to consume the shortest possible shipping time enroute. There are many other details which space will not permit us to mention but we believe Mr. Williams has the right idea for helping the farmer. So far as we know most of the representatives of the farmers became somebody else's representative all too soon after reaching Washington but having personally met Mr. Williams we believe he is not that kind of a man.

If you want to know more concerning this matter write to Congress at Washington for H.R. 6136, 68th Congress or we have a copy here which we will gladly loan any farmer who is interested.

State Editors Plan Annual Conference

Editors and publishers of Michigan's weekly newspapers will gather at East Lansing Feb. 7, 8 and 9 for the annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association, in what is expected to be the biggest and most important conference of its kind ever held in the state.

Vital questions of the weekly and rural newspaper business will be considered at the various meetings of the session. Everything from the proper way of handling "propaganda" news service to ways of lining up home and "foreign" advertising will be included on the program

Prominent among the speakers will be Emmett C. Finley, of New York City, general manager of the American Press Association, who will discuss "Foreign Advertising and the Country Newspaper."

A feature of the conference this year will be a special contest for best community service furnished by a weekly newspaper during the past year. Many papers of the state which have taken leadership in matters of civic or economic importance in their communities are entering this contest, which is unique in the history of newspaper awards.

Two evening banquets and a number of special entertainment features are included on the conference program. The business sessions, which will be held at the Michigan Agricultural College, start early in the afternoon of Thursday, February 7, and continue through Saturday morning. Banquets are listed for Thursday and Friday evenings, the first at the college and the second at Lansing.

Coming on the last days of the annual Farmers Week at M. A. C. the press conference will afford its delegates an opportunity to view the various exhibits and features prepared at the college for the week

Russia mourns the death of Nicolai Lenine the red mouthed arch-anarchist Soviet who for a number of years has had his own way in spite of everything in the land of the big bear. Owing to the extreme ignorance of the peasantry of Russia, Lenine has been able to mislead them into terrible murders in the name of Liberty. While it is certain the aristocracy of Russia were morally rotten and religiously corrupt yet the awful work of the ignorant fanatical peasantry led by Trotsky & Lenine has horrified the civilized world. So long as such dissenters manage the government no settled condition can ever be expected They are not capable of sane government. Lenine was really a half insane red whose father had been executed by the government for anarchy, an act which caused the son to swear away the life of the Czar and his family in the cruelist possible manner.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Why Drinking is an Out of Date Custom

The invention of machinery has absolutely revolutionized the industrial world. Never before were clear eyes, steady nerves and sober brains so essential as today.

Half a century ago it was not unusual for newspapers to ascribe many of the numerous freight and passenger wrecks on American railroads to "drunken engineers." During the half century, railroad mileage in the United States has increased from 53,000 miles to 264,000 miles, 2,000,000 men are now employed. These railroads carry each year more than two thousand million tons of freight and more than one thousand million passengers. Yet with 60,000 engineers driving locomotives day after day, how many wrecks are now charged to "drunken engineers" or drunken train dispatchers or drunken telegraph operators? Even the most ardent advocates of the liquor traffic in America have long since ceased to defend the personal liberty of railroad engineers to drink intoxicants.

Giant ore freighters are unloaded at the American ports of the Great Lakes or transported by trains to the numerous smelting furnaces for the manufacture of iron and steel. Forty years ago such vessels were unloaded by laborers with shovels and wheel-barrows. Taking into account all the gangs that could work to advantage on a single ship the unloading capacity for any vessel under the old system was about 100 tons of ore a day. Today four powerful electric machines unload an ore ship at the docks at the rate of 3,500 tons an hour.

In the old days, a large number of laborers might be under the influence of liquor and still manage to muddle through, since it was entirely possible for an unskilled employee with a fairly well soaked brain to handle a shovel and a wheelbarrow Today employment would not last long for any man who attempted to operate one of those great electric unloading machines if he were an habitual user of alcoholic liquors The same rule would apply with even greater force to the vast electrical equipment now operating in the iron and steel mills.

During the nine years preceding 1922, the tonnage of American ships clearing American ports increased from 4,793,523 net tons to 30,180,809 net tons, an increase of more than 500 per cent in less than ten years. Wonderful electric devices for handling ship cargoes, both on board ships and at the docks, have not only greatly decreased the old demand for the proverbial "drunken sailor," but have greatly increased the imperative requirements for carefully trained, skilled men, with clear brains and full control of all their faculties. The old drunken sailor can not meet the acid test required by the vast change which has taken place.

As a result of the passage of Workmen's Compensation laws millions of dollars have been invested in safety devises to protect the health, limbs, and lives of the 10,000,000 employees in our manufacturing industries. Safety to workers in the manufacturing interests, are such as to preclude the possibility of the great interests involved taking the risk which would be inevitable with the return of the beverage liquor traffic in America.

When we consider this life as a whole the sum and total of existence is after all nothing more or less than real confidence and forgetfulness of self in the lines of business or public endeavor.

We hope Jonesville and surrounding country will profit by this investigation, and we also long for the day when this part of Hillsdale county may point with pride to her vineyards as well as her pure blooded registered live stock. If we may be so pointed we hope we may become as Belgium and France in these respects without the sting of the wine press or the bite of the malt.

The Big Dirigible is Ready

The hair-brained scheme which has so long agitated the aerial division at Washington is now about ripe and according to reports the Shenandoah has been definitely picked for a voyage to the North Pole. We suppose that volunteers will in all probability be called for to man this expedition. They keep on building these clumsy air craft notwithstanding bitter experience has demonstrated that nothing but disaster ever comes of it. The loss of the Dixmude one of the best of these dirigibles ever built seems to have no weight with the officials of the air division.

Notwithftanding time and time again these great gas bags have met disaster and it is certain no dirigible can live long enough to reach half-way to the goal yet there seems to hover around Washington the idea the trip ought to be made. It is too much to ask of these brave but fanatical men that they risk their valuable lives on such a fruitless errand. Sure death is the only result and they must know it.

Simply because these brave men are willing to sacrifice themselves upon the altar of science is no legitimate reason, further than that the naval board would hardly care to pose as executioners. Let these baubles be disseminated and common sense get behind the guns.

The aerial division should be held accountable for the wanton loss of lives and the American people will rise as one person to protest such sacrilege. As a matter of fact it makes little difference to the world where that imaginary point called "the pole" happens to be, for while Cook and Peary have both claimed the honor of its discovery—it still remains as much of a mystery as ever and no huge gas bags will ever unravel the puzzle. It may be possible that at some remote time a lighter than air plane may survive the ordeal of flying across the pole, but methods and mileage must be greatly enlarged. Until such time this Government should be satisfied to "let sleeping dogs lie" and not murder its finest personnel by such stunts.

Crook Uses Names Of Dr. Will

Supt Detectives Charles Phelps has in his possession two checks drawn on a local bank, one made payable to the Goodyear Raincoat company, 2025 Woodward avenue, Detroit, for $42.50, and one to S. L. Bird and Sons, Detroit, for $75. Both checks are forgeries.

The checks in both cases are signed "Dr. J. P. Will." Dr. Will resides at 448 Steward avenue, and is spending the winter in Florida. Phelps states that on Wednesday a suit of clothes with two pairs of trousers came to Dr. Will's address from S. L. Bird & Sons and the sales slip showed that a check for $75 had been tendered in payment and the amount of the clothes were $41.25. The suit had several alterations made. On Thursday afternoon an overcoat came from the Goodyear Raincoat Company, Detroit, and was paid for with a forged check to the amount of 42.50. The same day a bill arrived from the Wolverine hotel in Detroit for $32.55, showing that "Dr. Will" had been a guest there from January 15 to 22. The case is being investigated by the detective bureau.

The village of Reading recently experienced a rather disasterous fire in her opera house block, a calamity which we hope wont come to North Adams but might if better precautions are not used in our opera house. Stoves should be set up on legs, the floors over furnaces kept free from cobwebs and sufficiently protected by sheet iron or asbestos. We understand our opera house is a little open to criticism on this point. Better be careful boys, remember we have absolutely no fire protection in the village and likely never will havesince we are about swamped with road debts. The Reading fire was the result of building a hot fire and leaving it. About $5,000 insurance was carried on the building which is only about half the loss in goods etc. belonging to L. J. Orr whose store occupied half of the block.

As the latest-coming visitors moved forward, they heard the schoolmaster finishing his passage at arms with the salesman.

"You should not feel exasperated at us, Mr. Carmichael," said he in tones of the most complete respect, "for what our figures show. You are unfortunate in the business proposition you offer this community. That is all. Even these children have the facts to prove that the creamery outfit you offer is not worth within two thousand dollars of what you ask for it, and that it is very doubtful if it is the sort of outfit we should need."

"I'll bet you a thousand dollars—" began Carmichael hotly, when Jim waved him down.

"Not with me," said Jim. "Your friend, Mr. Bonner, there, knows what chance there is for you to bet even a thousand cents with me. Besides, we know our facts, in this school. We've been working on them for a long time."

"Bet your life we have!" interpolated Newton Bronson.

"Before we finish," said Jim, "I want to thank you gentlemen for bringing in Mr. Carmichael. We have been reading up on the literature of the creamery promoter, and it is a very fine thing to have one in the flesh with whom to—to—demonstrate, if Mr. Carmichael will allow me to say so."

Carmichael looked at Bonner, made an expressive motion with his head toward the door, and turned as if to leave.

"Well," said he, "I can do plenty of business with real men. If you want to make the deal I offer you, and I can show you from the statistics I've got at the hotel that it's a special deal just to get started in this part of the state, and carries a thousand dollars of cut in price to you—let's leave these children and this he schoolma'am and get something done."

"I can't allow you to depart," said Jim more gently than before, "without thanking you for the very excellent talk you gave us on the advantage of the co-operative creamery over the centralizer. We in this school believe in the co-operative creamery, and if we can get rid of you, Mr. Carmichael, without buying your equipment, I think your work here may be productive of good."

"He's off three or four points on the average overrun in the Wisconsin co-ops," said Newton.

"And we thought," said Mary Smith, "that we'd need more cows than he said to keep up a creamery of our own."

"Oh," replied Jim, "but we mustn't expect Mr. Carmichael to know the subject as well as we do, children. He makes a practice of talking mostly to people who know nothing about it—and he talks very well. All in favor of thanking Mr. Carmichael please say 'Aye.'"

CHAPTER XXI

A New Era Dawns.

There was a rousing chorus of "Aye!" in which Mr. Carmichael, followed closely by Mr. Bonner, made his exit. B. B. Hamm went forward and shook Jim's hand slowly and contemplatively, as if trying to remember just what he should say.

"James E. Irwin," said he, "you've saved us from being skinned by the smoothest grafter that I ever seen."

"Not I," said Jim; "the kind of school I stand for, Mr. Hamm, will save you more than that—and give you the broadest culture any school ever gave. A culture based on life. We've been studying life, in this school—the life we all live here in this district."

"He had a smooth partner, too," said Columbus Brown. Jim looked at Bonner's little boy in one of the front seats and shook his head at Columbus warningly.

"If I hadn't herded 'em in here to ask you a few questions about co-operative creameries," said Mr. Talcott, "we'd have been stuck—they pretty near had our names. And then the whole neighborhood would have been sucked in for about fifty dollars a name."

"I'd have gone in for two hundred," said B. B. Hamm.

"May I call a little meeting here for a minute, Jim?" asked Ezra Bronson. "Why, where's he gone?"

"They's some other visitors come in," said a little girl, pulling her apron in embarrassment at the teacher's absence.

Jim had, after what seemed to Jennie an interminable while, seen the county superintendent and her distinguished party, and was now engaged in welcoming them and endeavoring to find them seats—quite an impossible thing at that particular moment, by the way.

"Don't mind us, Mr. Irwin," said Doctor Brathwayt. "This is the best thing we've seen on our journeyings. Please go on with the proceedin's. That gentleman seems to have in mind the perfectin' of some so't of organization. I'm intensely interested."

"I'd like to call a little meetin' here," said Ezra to the teacher. "Seein' we've busted up your program so far, may we take a little while longer?"

"Certainly," said Jim. "The school will please come to order."

The pupils took their seats, straightened their books and papers and were at attention. Doctor Brathwayt nodded approvingly as if at the answer to some question in his mind.

"Children," said Mr. Irwin, "you may or may not be interested in what these gentlemen are about to do—but I hope you are. Those who wish may be members of Mr. Bronson's meeting. Those who do not prefer to do so may take up their regular work."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Bronson to the remains of Mr. Carmichael's creamery party, "we've been cutting bait in this neighborhood about long enough. I'm in favor of fishing, now. How many here favor building a co-operative creamery if we can get the farmers in with cows enough to make it profitable, and the equipment at the right price?"

Each man held up a hand.

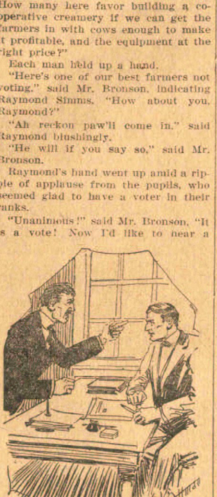
"Here's one of our best farmers not voting," said Mr. Bronson, indicating Raymond Simms. "How about you, Raymond?"

"Ah reckon paw'll come in," said Raymond blushingly.

"He will if you say so," said Mr. Bronson.

Raymond's hand went up amid a ripple of applause from the pupils, who seemed glad to have a voter in their ranks.

"Unanimous!" said Mr. Bronson. "It is a vote! Now I'd like to hear a motion to perfect a permanent organization to build a creamery. Mr. Irwin will you please act as secretary."



"I'll Bet You a Thousand Dollars," Cried Carmichael Hotly.

Jim sat down at the desk and began making notes. The meeting appointed committees, fixed upon a time for a future meeting, threw a collection of half-dollars on the desk to start a petty cash fund, made the usual joke about putting the secretary under bond, adjourned and dispersed.

"It's a go this time!" said Newton to Jim.

"I think so," said Jim, "with those men interested. Well, our study of creameries has given a great deal of language work, a good deal of arithmetic, some geography, and finally saved the people from a swindle. Rather good work, Raymond!"

"My mother has a delayed luncheon ready for the party," said Jennie to Jim. "Please come with us—please!"

But Jim demurred. Getting off at this time of day was really out of the question if he was to be ready to show the real work of the school in the afternoon session.

"This has been rather extraordinary," said Jim, "but I am very glad you were here. It shows the utility of the right sort of work in letter-writing, language, geography and arithmetic—in learning things about farming."

"It certainly does," said Doctor Brathwayt. "I wouldn't have missed it under any consideration; but I'm certainly sorry for that creamery shark and his accomplice—to be routed by the Fifth Reader grade in farming!"

The luncheon was rather a wonderful affair—and its success was unqualified after everybody discovered that the majority of those in attendance felt much more at home when calling it dinner.

"What d'ye think of our schools?" asked the colonel.

"Well," said Professor Gray, "it's not fair to judge, Colonel, on what must have been rather an extraordinary moment in the school's history. I take it that you don't put on a representation of 'The Knave Unmasked' every morning."

"It was more like a caucus than I've ever seen it, daddy," said Jennie, "and less like a school."

"Don't you think," said Doctor Brathwayt, "that it was less like a school because it was more like life? It was life. If I am not mistaken, history of this community was making in that schoolroom as we entered."

"You're perfectly right, Doctor," said the colonel. "Jim's got too big for the district, and so we're going to enlarge the district, and the schoolhouse, and the teaching force, and the means of educational grace generally. That's as sure as can be—after what took place this morning."

"He's rather a wonderful person, to be found in such a position," said Professor Gray, "or would be in any region I have visited."

"He's a native product," said the colonel, "but a wonder all the same. He's a Brown Mouse, you know."

"A—a—?" Doctor Brathwayt was plainly astonished. And so the colonel was allowed to tell again the story of the Darbishire brown mice, and why he called Jim Irwin one. Doctor Brathwayt said it was an interesting Mendelian explanation of the appearance of such a character as Jim. "And if you are right, Colonel, you'll lose him one of these days. You can't expect to retain a Caesar, a Napoleon, or a Lincoln in a rural school, can you?"

"I don't know about that," said the colonel. "The great opportunity for such a Brown Mouse may be in this very school, right now. He'd have as big an army right here as Socrates ever had. The Brown Mouse is the only judge of his own proper place."

"I think," said Mrs. Brathwayt, as they motored back to the school, "that your country schoolmaster is rather terrible. The way he crushed that Mr. Carmichael was positively merciless. Did he know how cruel he was?"

"I think not," said Jennie. "It was the truth that crushed Mr. Carmichael."

"But that vote of thanks," said Mrs. Brathwayt. "Surely that was the bitterest irony."

"I wonder if it was," said Jennie. "No, I am sure it wasn't. He wanted to leave the children thinking as well as possible of their victim, and especially of Mr. Bonner; and there was really something in Mr. Carmichael's talk which could be praised. I have known Jim Irwin since we were both children, and I feel sure that if he had had any idea that his treatment of this man had been unnecessarily cruel, it would have given him a lot of pain."

"My dear," said Mrs. Brathwayt, "I think you are to be congratulated for having known for a long time a genius."

"Thank you," said Jennie. And Mrs. Brathwayt gave her a glance which brought to her cheek another blush; but of a different sort from the one provoked by the uproar in the Woodruff school.

There could be no doubt now that Jim was thoroughly wonderful—nor that she, the county superintendent, was quite as thoroughly a little fool. She to be put in authority over him! It was too absurd for laughter. Fortunately, she hadn't hindered him much—but who was to be thanked for that? Was it owing to any wisdom of hers? Well, she had decided in his favor, in those first proceedings to revoke his certificate. Perhaps that was as good a thing to remember as was to be found in the record.

CHAPTER XXII

And So They Lived—

And so it turned out quite as if it were in the old ballad, that "all in the merry month of May," and also "all in the merry green wood," there were great doings about the bold little promontory where once stood the cabin on the old wood-lot where the Simms family had dwelt.

The brook ran about the promontory, and laid at its feet on three sides a carpet of blue-grass, amid clumps of trees and wild bushes. Not far afield on either hand came the black corn-land, but up and down the bluffy sides of the brook for some distance on both sides of the King-dragged highway, ran the old wood-lot, now regaining much of the unkempt appearance which characterized it when Jim Irwin had drawn upon himself the gentle rebuke of Old Man Simms for not giving a whoop from the big road before coming into the yard.

The cabin was gone, and in its place stood a pretty little bungalow, about which blossomed lilacs and peonies and roses and other old-fashioned flowers furnished by Mrs. Irwin. For this was the teacher's house or schoolmanse for the new consolidated Woodruff district, and the old Simms wood-lot was henceforth to be the glebe-land of the schoolmanse.

CATCHING MICE WITH MELODY

Strains of Classical Pieces on Gramophones Said to Attract Unsuspecting Rodents Into Traps.

The use of music with animals is well understood in the East, where the snake-charmer makes the deadly cobra dance to his piping.

Now it is suggested that gramophones should be installed in every cowhouse and henhut; for it is said that the sweet strains of a Guards' band, the trills of a Melba, or the top notes of a Caruso have a magical effect upon both milk and egg production, and that the hen who comes to listen remains to lay.

But even pleasure has its drawbacks, and what is meat to the cow and the Buff Orpington is death and destruction to the rat and the mouse.

For instance, it is reported that the musical mouse-trap is extremely deadly, and that anyone bent on clearing his house or barns of these destructive rodents should not set a trap which can do nothing but wait for the coming of its prey, but one which can play, say, a Bach fugue or a Beethoven symphony.

It has been found that the tinkling strains of music attract mice irresistibly, so that they wander gayly into the trap, thinking, evidently, that it is a concert arranged on their behalf. There are cases recorded of half-a-dozen being caught at once.

Vinegar for Long Life.

Now some English firm comes forth with the declaration that to live long you want to become a vinegar maker. In several instances workmen engaged in the distilling of vinegar have been in the service of the firm for from 60 to 70 years. The average age of the heads of departments is 70, and to have three or four generations of a family at work in the vinegar distillery at the same time is quite common. At a recent birthday dinner of the firm, the combined ages of four of the guests totaled 335 years. The oldest was nearly 90 and the youngest nearly 70.

Some Job

Being shy and self-conscious, he was lacking in histrionic ability. However, at an amateur theatrical he was persuaded to play understudy the first night, taking the part of a hungry tramp who had only a few words to speak.

It was late in the dead of winter. He knocked at the door of a lonely cabin in the woods. A woman's head protruded from the window.

She—What do you want?

He (trembling more with fright than the cold)—Work, kind lady.

She—Go away, I have nothing for you.

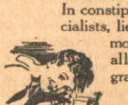
Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, are carried throughout the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, sleepless nights, lack of energy, all result from constipation. Each of these takes away piecemeal something of your health and strength. In time, intestinal poisoning due to lack of internal cleanliness may cause the breakdown of some vital organ.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.



More Important Than Soap and Water

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Health and Happiness Reward Internal Cleanliness

Physicians Favor Lubrication

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

The Land Of Tutenkhaman has contributed the newest addition to the diplomatic corps in Washington. The Egyptian envoy and his staff, confronted with the Capital's chronic housing problem, are quartered temporarily in the suite of rooms which President Coolidge used before he took up his residence in the White House. Claude Sharp had a rather disconcerting experience last week while running his DeLaval cream separator in the pantry of his home. As the machine gained a high speed the revolving bowl suddenly let go and sent discs, cream and reservoir flying around the room. Mr Sharp says the air was filled with a milky way and it was impossible to see in any direction. When the separator was finally stopped it was found that cream and milk had penetrated to almost every nook and corner requiring a long disagreeable process of cleaning up. Claude thinks it was mighty lucky he was not injured by flying fragments. The DeLaval has been repaired so as to be usable.

Report says there are 60,000 motorists in the city of Detroit alone who have put off applying for their linceses so long they won't be able to get them before the 31st of January which is the time limit set by state authorities It means says Deland, Secretary of State, they will have to put away their cars until such time as they can be attended to at Lansing. No doubt there will be cursing and gnashing of teeth but Deland holds no one responsible except the autoist himself who delays application until the last minute. Likewise many thousands have failed to apply for their certificates of title also and these chaps are among the number of subjects on the mourner's bench for 1924 licenses. Police all over the city and state have been instructed to go out and "pinch" every autoist without 1924 plates. The other day a man traveling from Allen to Hillsdale noted 17 cars along the route with 1923 plates. This looks as if Detroit people were not the only ones who are delinquent.

Obituary

He was born Aug. 20, 1848 and was the seventh of the eleven children of John Livermore, a pioneer who came from New York state to Wheatland in 1840 and settled on the farm on which John Martin lived at the time of his death.

In 1888 he was married to Lucinda Gelder and to this union were born three children, two sons, Harrison who resides in North Adams, Floyd of Detroit, and one daughter, Mrs. Mary Thompson who lives but a mile from her father's home.

He was a true and faithful member of the Freewill Baptist church of Wheatland having joined the church in 1890

Dec. 27, 1898 his loving wife was called to her home beyond, since that time his home and children have been tenderly and lovingly cared for by his sister, Mrs. Martha Brisban.

He was a carpenter by trade and in this capacity entered the homes of one and all of his neighbors for miles around, thus endearing him to one and all.

He was a kind and loving father with always a kind word and gentle smile for the many other children in the vicinity.

Besides his three children he leaves to mourn their loss, three grandchildren, four sisters, one brother and a host of friends who will miss him sorely.

Funeral services were held Sunday at 1:00 p. m. at the Congregational church at Churches Corners, Rev. McLouth officiating and burial at Churches Corners.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 5th day of March, 1920, executed by Joshua Smith and Harriet E. Smith, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 6th day of March, 1920 recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 163 of Mortgages on page 424; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the said mortgagors to pay the interest and certain portions of principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable; and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Five Thousand Four Hundred Fourteen and Fifty-six Hundredths (5414 56) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 25th day of February, 1924, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county,) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale with attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as followg; all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, to wit; the west one-half of the southeast quarter of Section 22 in Township 7 south, Range 1 west, and containing eighty acres more or less.

A Marvel of Human Intelligence

A man named Sidis who is now employed by bankers in New York City is said to have been the most wonderful infant prodigy ever known in this country. He was born of middle class parents and at the age of two years he could read and write, and at 16 he graduated from Harvard college. However it is more than likely he was abnormal since now in his thirty-sixth year while he is employed in a counting room yet his brain is practically a junk heap and he uses an adding machine trusting his head for nothing. It seems after graduating from college and obtaining a responsible posible position he began to show signs of aberration. Shortly afterward he was arrested for some crime. As soon as he got clear he left the place where he was staying and dropped out of sight for a number of years. To-day he is a wreck, but nothing disturbs his assinine repose. It is said his father's death did not appeal to him sufficient to bring him to the funeral.

Acrobats in figures are also quite common in fact one was on exhibition in Chicago not many years ago who had a wonderful memory for mathematical problems. This young man was at the time about 19 years of age and could reckon additions in his head of sums of eight or nine denominations quicker than it could be done with a pencil. In passing sky-scraper buildings in Chicago it was common for him to at once state the correct number of windows on each side and other stunts equally as marvelous. Was he bright? He was a moron in almost every other particular. And it is our personal opinion this young fellow did not have sufficient intelligence to safely travel around the cities where he went as a show, but was accompanied by an older relative who guided his destinies. From all appearances to us it was merely a state of trance in which he was plunged and so remained while doing the commuting.

College Bravura

Michigan Agricultural College owns some of the highest graded thoroughbred butter cows in the world. For instance there is

Later College Bravura 3rd, a direct descendent, held the world's record for her age for some time; and finally the youngest Bravura has set a third world title for the family.

The new champion will be on exhibit at the M.A.C. during the annual Farmers Week, Feb. 4 to 8, along with many other outstanding individuals in dairy cattle, beef cattle, horse, sheep, and swine herds.

Many blue ribbon winners at state and national livestock shows are included in the present college herds, and all will be "dressed up" for company during the big farm conference.

The prize livestock will also form the main feature of a big parade or pageant, which is being staged on Thursday February 7.

WAR PRESIDENT IS NO MORE

Sunday, Feb. 3, at 11:15 a. m. Ex-President Woodrow Wilson expired at his Washington home in the midst of his sorrowing relatives. He was born December 28, 1856 at Staunton, Virginia, a state that has furnished the Nation so many illustrious sons. In 1913 he was proclaimed president of the United States; thenceforth his life was a continual panorama of exciting history.

His name will be hallowed down the ages as one who established an era of "peace on earth. good-will to men." Woodrow Wilson and Abraham Lincoln stand forth as original characters—there never was and there never will be their like on this earth: men destined by Over-ruling Providence for a great work—Lincoln struck the shackles from a million slaves; Wilson struck the shackles of war from countless millions of this world and annihilated the God of Mars.

Lincoln's tragic end was a sacrifice to southern hatred; Wilson was an offering to the principles of Democracy. Disappointment more bitter than gaul shrouded Wilson's last days. He lost the "League of Nations" but gained a crown.

Death Of Mrs Erving Williams

Mrs Erving Williams who resided south of Wheatland Centre committed suicide at her home about 6:30 Wednesday morning by shooting herself with a shotgun Dr McFarland was called but death was almost instantaneous. Mrs Williams had been in poor health for some time and had become despondent. She was about 60 years of age. Her husband had gone to the barn to do the morning work and while alone in the house Mrs Williams secured the shotgun, slipped a shell into the barrel and placing the gun muzzle under her chin discharged the weapon. Her head was almost completely blown off. She leaves beside the husband one sister Mrs Ann Voorhees of this village.

"Concrete Around the Home"

Everyone who wants to improve his place or save money around his farm, needs the new Portland Cement Association booklet "Concrete Around the Home."

It tells in everyday language the easiest, simplest and most economical way to use Concrete for making drives, walks, septic tanks, garages and other permanent improvements. Easily followed instructions give you all the details necessary for estimating materials, mixing, placing and finishing the Concrete.

"Concrete Around the Home" is only one of our many booklets available without charge to those interested in using Concrete.

If you are planning any of the money-saving concrete improvements seen everywhere nowadays, such as a permanent floor, basement, or foundation for your buildings, a manure pit, feeding floor, corncrib or silo, we have a booklet on the subject with complete instructions for building it of Concrete.

Remember this service is free. The Portland Cement Association has 28 offices, listed below, and one of them is your office—the one nearest you.

Find which one it is, and write today about the concrete improvements you are planning.

There are people in that office whose business it is to help you save money by making it easy for you to use concrete. Let them show you how they can help you.

Edible Birds' Nests Found in Great Caves

Far up in the great limestone caves of North Borneo are found, glued to the sides in hundreds of thousands, the edible birds' nests so loved by Chinese epicures for making soup.

The nests are built by a species of cave-haunting swifts which breeds in colonies. They are formed not, as the natives believe, from sea foam, but from a glutinous substance produced from the large salivary glands of the birds themselves.

There are two kinds of nests, the white and the black. The white nests are clean and semi-transparent, the fine threads of which they are interwoven being not unlike those of a shredded wheat cake.

The black nests are discolored and have grass and feathers mixed with them. The black nests predominate, but the white, from which the best soup is made, fetch from ten to fifteen times as much as the others.

Accuracy of Weights Is Revealed by Test

An instance of sustained accuracy in the weights which are now being submitted to the bureau of standards for test was noted. In a shipment of nine sets, containing a total of 216 weights, all were within the required accuracy. Only once before has a larger number of sets been submitted without some of the weights having errors greater than the prescribed tolerances. The fact that such shipments are now received, even if only occasionally, is an encouraging indication of the good work done by some American makers. It need not be said that such sustained accuracy would have been entirely out of the question as recently as ten years ago.—Scientific American.

Many "entertainments" are well attended because those who attend think staying at home is a bore.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

YOUR doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your mealtime drink.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

Michigan Happenings

The state administrative board has requested the public utilities commission to submit a report on the condition of the Detroit, Bay City & Western railway. The company recently asked the state to remit taxes amounting to about $90,000. The attorney general's department investigated and found, it was reported, that there was no assurance that the road would continue in operation even if the taxes were cancelled. A petition therefore was filed in federal court seeking to require payment of the taxes.

Abandonment of the east and west side power canals, construction of a sluice 200 feet wide to carry off water dammed by the high retaining wall, providing power facilities, and paving of that portion of the river bed vacated by the improvement to provide automobile parking space, has been suggested at a conference of Grand Rapids officials, representatives of the Consumers Power Co., and the owners of the East Side Power Canal Co. A movement has been inaugurated to eliminate the canals.

A telephone call from Coroner E. B. Minor, that a man was afloat on a cake of ice in Grand Traverse bay, near Traverse City, sent Officer Harry McGarry and Captain Harry Copeland of the fire department on a dangerous trip through floating ice. The two men saw the victim and set out in a frail boat. Occasionally they could see an arm wave from the ice cake. Just a few minutes before they reached their goal the "man" flew away. He was only a pair of bald eagles.

Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck has announced that the so-called "Segregation Plan" has been adopted as an active principle of prison administration in Michigan, and that by way of the first step in instituting it, he will order the transfer of "unfit" inmates of Ionia and Jackson to the State Branch Prison at Marquette. The transfer will take place, he said as soon as heating equipment has been installed in the Marquette cell block.

Fire recently destroyed one section of the new Casnovia Farm Products Co-operative association's warehouse and damaged apples and onions stored in the other two sections. The cold storage plant, containing 30,000 bushels of apples, was saved. The other section, containing 14,000 bushels of onions, was damaged slightly and about 300 bushels of onions ruined. The total loss is estimated at $20,000.

A reduction of about one-third in fire insurance rates on semi-fireproof structures has been ordered by L. T. Hands, state insurance commissioner. Semi-fireproof buildings are designated as those built a number of years ago, as fireproof, but which do not meet the exact requirements of the comparatively new Dean rate schedule, which specifies building only as fireproof or non-fireproof.

The state administrative board sent a request for $55,000 to remodel the industrial building and construct a chapel at the industrial school for boys, to the industrial committee. It has approved a plan submitted by Mayor Dougherty, of Lansing, to open Saginaw street through the industrial school grounds to make a more direct route for M-16, the Detroit-Grand Rapids trunk line highway.

A resolution has been forwarded to Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and to Michigan members of congress by the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce, asking that the government breakwater be repaired. It is feared that it will not withstand, in its present condition, the breaking up of the ice next spring.

The schools of Marcellus, in Cass County, have been closed owing to an epidemic of smallpox. Among the victims are John D. Bent, who lost an eye a few days ago when a chip flew up and struck him in the face while he was chopping wood.

Twenty-one tuberculosis workers from all parts of Michigan have registered for the three weeks' course of training, the first ever attempted in this state, given by the Michigan Tuberculosis association at its office in Lansing.

The state administrative board has authorized discontinuance of the lease of the 120-acre Maybee farm, used as an institutional farm by the Ionia reformatory, and approved a lease for a 170-acre tract adjoining the reformatory grounds on the north.

Allen D. Hart, former municipal judge, died at Battle Creek recently after several years' illness. For many years he was a passenger conductor on the Grand Trunk and later was yard master. He served two terms as judge and was re-elected, though a Democrat, in a Republican city.

Mrs. Mildred C. Driesbach has resigned from the office of city clerk, Kalamazoo, after having been in the employ of the city for more than 18 years.

Louis Reeverts, of Holland, has been named managing editor of the Hope College publication, the Anchor. The report showed that the publication for the first time in several years was on a good financial basis.

Alpena ministers have formed a ministerial organization under the name of the Alpena Ministers' Association, with the Rev. G. G. Hicks as president, the Rev. H. A. Webster as vice-president, and the Rev. Robert Bryce as secretary-treasurer.

HAD TO LET HOUSEWORK GO

So Ill Husband had to do the Work. Completely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

South Bend, Indiana.—"I was all run-down, tired out, and had pains in my back and bearing-down pains. I was so sore I could hardly drag myself around and was not able to do a bit of housework. My husband worked all day in the shop, and then came home and helped me at night. The doctors said I had female weakness, and there was no help but to be operated upon, and of course that would cost us a great deal. My husband heard about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the factory and one night he stopped at the drug store and bought me a bottle of it. I had begun to think there was no help for me, but I took three bottles of it and now I feel like myself once more. The price for three bottles wasn't so much as the doctor had charged. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough."—Mrs. DORA OSBORNE, 430 Sherman Avenue, South Bend, Ind.

Women troubled with female weakness should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial—now. For sale by druggists everywhere.

POULTRY

Green Feed for Layers Needed During Winter

Green feed for hens in the winter will make them lay better, besides being one of the cheapest foods for the poultryman to use.

If possible, get some mangel beets. Cut them into pieces and put on a stick which is driven in the ground, or set up on the floor of the poultry house. This will give the chickens a chance to pick off the beet. One or two mangels, depending on the size, should be allowed every 25 birds. Mangels can be stored easily, so that they will keep throughout the entire winter.

Sprouted oats also supply green food which is very satisfactory. The one thing to remember is not to let the oats sprout too long. Best results have been found with young sprouts that are green and tender. Care must be taken not to let it become moldy, as this poisons chickens. If mold persists it can be overcome by sprinkling with the sprouting water ten drops of formaldehyde. Formaldehyde is not injurious to the chickens in this quantity.

Soaked oats will help out if the trouble of sprouting is too great. Alfalfa leaves which have been dried and then covered with boiling water to "green" them, are also good and palatable.

The use of these succulent feeds will increase the egg production and will reduce the feeding costs.

Sour Skim Milk Given as Cause of High Production

Some time ago the Missouri College of Agriculture through the department of poultry husbandry started an experiment to determine the cause of the high production secured from laying hens that were given an abundance of sour skim milk. A study of the analysis of sour skim milk showed it to contain 90.77 per cent water, 0.10 per cent fat, 3.93 per cent milk sugar (lactose), 0.56 per cent lactic acid, 3.65 per cent protein and 0.79 per cent milk ash or salts. It was assumed that water alone was not the stimulating factor. The fat content seemed too low, and the distribution of carbohydrates did not point to milk sugar as a possible source of the problem. A comparison was made of rations containing lactic acid, milk salts, protein—free sour skim milk and sour skim milk. The results showed conclusively that that lactic acid in the same solution as in sour skim milk is valueless for egg production. Besides both milk salts and ash entirely failed to stimulate increased egg production. The results all seem to indicate that it is the proteins or milk curd that is the valuable part of sour skim milk. For two years the protein-free sour skim milk has not given as satisfactory production as the sour skim milk.

Guinea Quite Valuable Fowl to Have on Farm

So far, guineas occupy a back place in the poultry industry. Yet they are a valuable fowl.

When they are known they will come into their own with honor.

They are among the very best "bug rustlers" we have, living almost entirely on insects, doing very little damage to growing crops.

As for eating purposes, the guineas are claimed by some people to surpass the chicken in flavor and juiciness. Although having dark flesh, the young fowls are tender. The meat of the grown fowls is not as dry, when baked, as that of chicken or turkey.

The guinea hens are always known by their plaintive "potrack, potrack, potrack," while the rooster, when disturbed by a hawk or strange dog, lets forth such a shrill chatter that it puts one's nerves on edge.

Guineas begin laying the first of May and lay all through the summer, the eggs selling on the market for as much as hen eggs.

POULTRY NOTES

Do not feed the goslings until 48 hours old, but give them tender, finely cut grass and water.

* * *

Turkeys for breeding should be in good breeding condition; if fat the eggs are largely infertile.

Some geese will hatch two broods of goslings in a season if well managed. Goose eggs require 28 to 31 days to hatch.

* * *

The young are chicks until their sex can be distinguished or possibly even a little longer. A brood is a collection of chicks cared for by one hen or in a single brooder.

* * *

* * *

A constitutionally strong bird, one that passes through the molt quickly and easily, is a better layer than one that develops all kinds of ailments during this period.

* * *

Individual hens with pale-colored shanks, in such breeds as the Rock, Wyandottes, Reds and Leghorns, are considered better layers than those with bright-yellow shanks.

* * *

One male and two females constitute a trio. A breeding pen consists of a male and five to fifteen females.

* * *

If two toms that do not agree are to be used in the same mating, one should be confined while the other is at liberty.

* * *

Goslings should be fed a mash of two parts shorts and one part cornmeal by weight, changing at the end of three weeks to equal parts shorts and cornmeal, with 5 per cent each of beef-scrap and grit.

GIRLS! HAIR GROWS THICK AND BEAUTIFUL

A gleamy mass of luxuriant hair full of gloss, luster and life shortly follows a genuine toning up of neglected scalps with dependable "Danderine."

Falling hair, itching scalp and the dandruff is corrected immediately. Thin, dry, wispy or fading hair is quickly invigorated, taking on new strength, color and youthful beauty. "Danderine" is delightful on the hair; a refreshing, stimulating tonic—not sticky or greasy! Any drug store.—Advertisement.

Bloviate, a New Word

There is a word which, so far as I know, is local to Washington, and largely to its newspaper and political fraternity. The word is "bloviate." It is not in the dictionary. (I have just looked and found there is no word of which the first four letters are "blov." You pass from "blousing" immediately to "blow.") But although the word is not in the dictionary, those whose ears have quick apprehension of the meaning inherent in sounds, will already have guessed its significance. When a public man, especially one rather given to speechmaking, is invited to adorn and address the annual dinner of this or that, we say he has gone out of town to bloviate. The word carries an implication of ornate, rotund speech and partly of expansion of the ego.—Mark Sullivan in McNaught's Monthly.

Caspian Sea Tideless

The Caspian sea is a tideless inland sea which is becoming saltier through evaporation. It is the largest inland body of water in the world. It is 700 miles long in north to south direction, and has a width varying from more than 100 to nearly 300 miles. Lake Superior is the largest fresh water body in the world. The extreme length of Lake Superior from east to west is 412 miles. Its extreme breadth is 167 miles.

A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Not for many years has Washington been treated to so many thrills as during the past few days when the national scandal over the leasing of naval oil lands to private interests threatened to disrupt the Cabinet, in addition to casting an ominous shadow over the presidential campaign. There is nothing spectacular about the way President Coolidge has gone about the task of getin the great oil deposits in California and Wyoming back in the possession of the Government, but he is no less determined to go through with it in his usual quiet and determined manner, even if some of his friends or the friends of the former Administration have to go to jail.

Despite the fact that Albert Fall, former Senator and Secretary of the Interior, received more than a hundred thousand dollars from the oil magnates who got the land from the Government, his old friends declare that after all the investigations are followed through to the end and the political tempest has calmed somewhat, it will be found that neither Fall, nor those associated with him in the oil deals, committed any criminal offense. Some body, however, will have to be the goat, for the Democrats are running wild and the Republicans are just as eager to purge the party of all possible suspicion of downright malevolence.

These farmers labor congress men are a puzzle to leaders of both major parties. It is always impossible to tell where they are going to strike next or with whom they are going to ally them selves. Among those who have vented their ire on both sides irrespectively is Knud Wefald of Hawley, Minn, who has served warning on the House that more of his kind will be coming to Washington before long. Wefald is a Norwegian and like many of his countrymen in the United States has never acquired the trick of English pronounciation.

And the wives of the "progressives" are just as independent. Mrs Coolidge found it out when she ordered out a White House automobile to take Mrs Magnus Johnson to a tea given for the Senatorial ladies. Mrs Johnson declined the invitation of the First Lady, explaining that she had promised to stay with a neighbor who was ill and that she couldn't go to the party.

Legislation will be brought out shortly in Congress to make it possible for Cabinet members to come before the Senate or House to answer direct questions with respect to their administrative activities and policies. When the Constitution was written, it was thought advisable to keep the legislative and executive branches of the Government separated as much as possible, but this does not always appear to be in the public interest under more modern conditions. Under the new system, instead of writing letters to Congress, the Cabinet members would be subjected to interpellations just as officials of the British Government are questioned in the House of Commons.

All the charges of fraud and corruption which the Democrats of the Senate hurled at Truman Newberry of Michigan a year ago is being turned back at them now as the fight gets underway to underseat Senator Earl Mayfield of Texas. Among Mayfield's chief supporters is Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama, who was in the front rank in the Democratic onslaught which led to the resignation of Newberry, although the Republicans finally succeeded in having him accorded his seat by the Senate.

Two members of the Senate formerly owed allegiance to the royal family of Britian. They are Frank Gooding of Idaho, and James Couzens, who first saw the light of day in Ontario, Canada, but amassed his great fortune in the automobile business in Michigan.

Trichinosis, a painful and often fatal disease, is caused by a small parasite that is sometimes present in pork. The trichina parasite is so small that it can only be seen with a microscope and hogs harboring it show no symptoms nor does the diseased pork appear different from pork not diseased. All pork should be thoroughly cooked before eating as that is the only sure way of ridding the meat of the disease.

Full Speed Ahead

There is every reason to believe that business generally will prosper in 1924, particularly in the states of the Middle West, according to Williams A. Baeha, of Chicago, vice president and general manager of the Illinois Power and Light Corporation.

"In spite of this being presidential year. I believe it will be a good one for the public utility companies and industry in general. "The banking situation is sound and prospects now appear exceptionally bright. "I look for a great year in building and improvement in the public utility business, which means not only steady employment for wage earners, but also earning power for the savings of the thrifty communities invested in the properties that are serving the territory."

Why Drinking Is an Out of Date Gustom

Only a few years ago grain and other agricultural products as well as the tonnage of industrial and commercial enterprise in America, were moved on short hauls by wagons with horses or mules in charge of teamsters. Today, a great portion of that tonnage is moved by auto trucks in charge of automobile drivers.

One large truck, in charge of a competent operator, will move upon the average, more tonnage than could be moved under the old system by ten wagons with twenty mules and ten drivers. There are more than a million auto trucks in operation in the United States today They move more than ten times as much tonnage as was moved by the same number of men as teamsters, a few decades ago.

It was entirely possible in the old days for half-drunken drivers to throw the lines around the dash board and depend upon the dumb animals drawing the load to avoid collisions and the ditch. But the millions of value in the auto trucks of today, to say nothing of the value of the tonnage itself, can not be trusted to half-drunken drivers.

The United States has in operation a total of 10,000,000 automobiles. The great development of its automobile industry has taken place in the last decade, during which prohibition by state legislation was rapidly covering the United States. Much of this development has taken place since the United States of America as a whole went under national prohibition. The old beverage liquor system in operation, in this automobile age in America is unthinkable. What would happen, on every American highway today, if the American liquor traffic were to be restored? What degree of safety, under such a condition, could be vouchsafed to any traveler upon the highway or any pedestrian on the sidewalk?

The liquor traffic may have been possible in the agricultural world, in the age of the horse-plow and the mule teamster. It is not possible in the age of the tractor and the auto truck. The liquor traffic may have been possible in the days when the woodchopper with an ax was the only means of felling trees in the great forests of the Northwest; it is not possible in the age when electrical operatians and and operators are essential to the rapidly increasing lumbering industries where great forests still exist. The liquor traffic may have been possible in the age of the ox-cart and the water-mill; it is not possible in the age of the electric dynamo. The liquor traffic may have been possible in the age of the stage coach; it is not possible in the age of the flying machine. The liquor traffic may have been possible in America in the age of the drunken sailor and the drunken engineer, and the age when manufacturing concerns were not held responsible for the health and safety of employees; but it is not possible in the age of the industrial development which has revolutionized railroad operations, the mining industry, the vast manufacturing interests, extensive international commerce and trade activities and other great industries and enterprises figured in the economic progress of America.—From America and the World Liquor Problem

No secret is made now of the fact that the United States is wholeheartedly on the side of Alvaro Obregon in his effort to put down the revolution that threatens to destroy his government. Agents of the revolutionist are being jailed along the border on charges of violating the neutrality laws of the United States, while American arms and ammunition and American warships have been thrown into the balance against the rebels. The interest of this country in Mexico lies largely in oil holdings of Americans in the Tampico regions, but deeper than that is the policy of the Coolidge Government to frown upon any revolutionary activities anywhere in this hemisphere.

Blazing a Trail Across Florida

In the southern end of the Florida peninsula—first to be discovered and among the last of the states to be developed—is an area approximately one hundred miles in length and 50 to 100 miles in width extending south to Cape Sable, which has been appropriately designated as 'the last remaining frontier'.

Wild as in the days when the aborigines roamed the entire American continent; bordered on the west by a bewildering maze known as the Ten Thousand Islands which harbor wild bird rookeries and were once the rendezyous of pirates; penetrated on the north and east by the almost impassable muck lands of the Everglades; known only to the Indians and a few native hunters, and never completely traversed except by several adventurous explorers who made the journey afoot; little wonder is it that wild and exaggerated stories have found their way into print from time to time concerning this fertile and much misrepresented section.

Law and order are practically unknown in this "no man's land" which until very recently was some eighty to ninety miles remote from the nearest county seat. Here roam the only American Indians that have never been conquered and subdued by Uncle Sam, being the remnant of the Seminoles who fled to the fastnesses of the Everglades during the Seminole War. They are peaceful and harmless, however, except when under the baneful influence of "wyomee" (whisky). The innumerable islands of the western coast with their many ramifying waterways afford an excellent retreat for moonshiners and bootleggers who industriously ply their calling, unmolested, according to reports from the correspondent to Lee County papers from the little island settlement of Chokoloskee. Excerpts from his recent correspondence are given herewith:

"We expect a lot of moonshine among us soon. One of the teams went up the river last Monday with a load of barrels and sirup, so we think prospects are fairly good."

"We have lots of booze, moonshine and red liquor. Some of the team drunk every day. Yesterday they had a racket and one of our best moonshiners and bootleggers got cut up some and blood flowed very freely, and the ones that were able took him up to Everglade to get his hide patched up so it would not leak so bad".

"We are getting along fine; have plenty of booze and everything. We don't want any sheiffs nor anything If we need anything it is more booze and more of the devil's disciples to drink it, and bigger knives and more pistols and guns."

So much for the "wild and woolly" nature of the country and the scattering inhabitants along its borders. Now let us call attention to the Tamiami Trail—what it is, the route traversed and what it will mean for the development of extreme South Florida from Tampa on the West Coast, through Bradentown, Sarasota, Punta Gorda, Fort Myers, Estero, Bonita Springs and Naples, to Miami on the eastern shore.

Who Opposes Tax Reduction?

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon seems to be a porcupine for accuracy when it comes to defending his tax reduction figures. He leaves no point of attack. He answers his critics at every turn, not with abuse, hot air or evasion, but with plain statements and figures which even a school boy can understand.

The opposition to Mr Mellon's tax reduction program comes not from the people, but from the professional politicians who continue to harp along the old demagogic lines of taxing wealth. Mellon camly shows that after you have taxed wealth out of existence, the burden of government falls with double force upon the small taxpayer who has to make up losses which the investor who refuses to utilize his money in productive industry, would under a lower tax system be paying.

If the politicians block the tax reduction measure, they will have robbed the people of over $300,000,000 for 1924

University Dean Urges Care In Selecting Surgeons

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 31. More care is taken by the average man or woman in selecting the automobile in which he or she shall ride than is given the choice of the surgeon upon whose skill his or her life depends, according to Dean Hugh Cabot, of the University of Michigan Medical School.

Dean Cabot, in expressing his views on the relations of surgeons to the public said, "There is a tendency on the part of the average man to assume that a surgeon is a surgeon, the same as a cat is a cat. I am constantly impressed by the fact that the patient doesn't use his mind to as great an extent in choosing a surgeon as he does in deciding upon the purchase of an automobile."

Continuing with a warning to patients contemplating surgical work, Dean Cabot said, "The patient should have a careful inventory taken of his condition before an operation. To plunge hurriedly into an operation as the sort of a thing to have done over the week end is exactly the thing that should not be done. Nowdays a man expects to drop into the hospital the night before the operation for a short examination, assuming that he is doing the right thing. In reality he is taking needless chances.

"Time necessary to a careful study of a case is often begrudged by the patient. As a rule the time taken in studying a case is the cheapest part of the operation."

"So let me suggest to the average man and woman," said Dean Cabot in his concluding remarks, "that when you submit yourself to the mercies of a surgeon you select a practitioner yourself and put at least half as much thought on the matter as you do when buying a motor car."

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 25th day of October 1921 executed by Harvey Kelley and Bessie Kelley, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 29th day of October, 1921 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in liber 163 of mortgages on page 494; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagor to pay the interest and portions of the principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the options contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Seven Thousand, Nine Hundred Seventy-Seven and seventeen hundredths ($7977.17) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute; and no suit or proceedings at law or equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof. Now, therefore Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the the power of sale in said mortgage contained and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 18th day of February, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan (said courthouse being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows: all those certain lands and premises situated in the township of Wheatland in the county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, described as follows; to wit: the southeast one quarter of the southwest one quarter of Section 23, also the west one-half of the southwest one quarter of the said section 23, also the northeast one quarter of the southeast one quarter of section 22, all in township 6 south, range 1 west, containing one hundred sixty acres of land more or less.

He Has Crossed The Rubicon

Woodrow Wilson, man of destinies, scholar, statesman, diplomat historian, politician, has entered his long rest. The shades of eternal night have closed upon his earthly vigils, he has left this vale of tears, for the Great Beyond from which there is no return.

It is doubtful if since the days of Abraham Lincoln has a man come upon his country's stadium with as many admirers and as many enemies as Woodrow Wilson. His has been a stormy well fought life, notwithstanding demagogues have tried to belittle his motives and dwarf his plans. From the day Woodrow Wilson first assumed the dignities and responsibilities of the Nation's Chief, March 4 1913, to the day of his triumphant withdrawal from the World War his life has been one complete whirlwind of thrilling episodes. Friend and foe alike at times assailed his policies but not for one moment did Mr Wilson falter from the beaten path which he had mapped out notwithstanding his mortal body came almost to the grave more than once. The last days of his administration as president were marked with weakness and agony but his head was erect, and life seemed to be as sweet to him as the day he entered upon the job of making the "world safe for Democracy." As Commander-in-chief of the army and navy it became his painful duty to visit the battlefields of France and view the graves of thousands of our best personnel who had offered the Supreme sacrifice. Wilson saw with his own eyes and realized in his own mind the awful cost to America and old world nations of liberty; he trod the halls of the Hague as a man ready and willing to offer his own health and welfare if need be to settle for all time as he hoped the warring of countries, but Alas! How fruitless. He would as well have remained at home. His favorite child The League of Nations was ruthlessly assaulted by statesmen and yellow journalists at Washington, who practically murdered it. Mr Wilson was given to understand right from the offset that the Congress of the United States did not consider itself aligned for Democracy of Nations nor did it wish to respect the wishes of the first executive of the land. What might have permanently quelled smaller souls only served to anger this tall grey man of the ages. But broken health intervened against him and without doubt he went to his grave a sadly disappointed and broken man.

This paper has always been entirely independent in the political field; further it has even thought poorly of some of his policies, yet after all is closed; after the last solemn rites are performed and taps is sounded over Woodrow Wilson's ashes, it is with a feeling of real loss we chronicle his demise, and we believe there is something coming to this nestor of the League of Nations more than empty pomp and stereotyped regrets. They talk of memorials for Warren Harding, however his monument can wait, but this man Wilson, steered the ship of state through troublous seas and we really apprehend something in Lincoln's class for him.

Repeat Warning on Foreign Clover Seed

Pointing out that the germination quality of imported clover seed is not the issue involved in warnings which have been sent out over Michigan calling attention of state farmers to the danger of planting foreign seed. Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the Michigan Agricultural College, this week repeated his suggestion that growers make sure of their seed supply in view of the great volume of imported seed reaching the country this year.

"The market report of the Toledo Produce Exchange for Jan. 23, and quoted articles appearing in print in Michigan, state that a large amount of foreign clover seed has been imported and shipped to the Toledo market, and delivered on contract", says Professor Cox. "This report further states that much has recently been printed and talked relative to the poor germinating qualities of this seed, and printed results are offered of germination tests which show the germination qualities of the imported seed are excellent.

"As a matter of fact, it is not the germination of imported seed which is questioned by experiment stations and clover growers, but the ability of imported seed from Italy to produce a crop under Michigan and 'corn belt' state conditions.

"Imported seed from England, northern Europe, and France is adapted to growing in Michigan if native seed is not available, but as a class imported seed is not dependable, because cheap and unadapted seed from Italy loses its identity on our market. It has been reported by the United States department of agriculture that at least 200,000 pounds of this imported seed from 'other' countries is apparently Italian seed, shipped to France or other countries, and reshipped.

"In tests at the Michigan experiment station, native grown, Michigan seed is shown to be best for Michigan. Next to our own seed, red clover seed from other northern states and the corn-belt gives best results. Michigan farmers will do well to deal with dependable Michigan clover seed dealers, who handle Michigan grown or northern grown domestic red clover. If this is not available in sufficient quantity, attention is directed to the fact that there is a good supply of alsike, at relatively cheap prices, and also a large supply of domestic alfalfa seed from the northwest, selling cheaper than red clover.

"Sweet clover is available in quantity at very reasonable rates and takes the same place in the rotation as red clover. These crops are much more dependable than red clover seed of unknown origin. Soybeans, field peas, and winter vetch are also crops which can be used in furnishing large yields of leguminous forage, in case of clover failures or a shortage of good seed.

"The competition of cheap and often unadapted and inferior imported clover seed has retarded production of more dependable red clover in the producing areas of the United States. With this undesirable competition removed we could easily supply home demands with domestic seed in a very short time—much to the benefit of the clover growers and of the clover seed trade."

Pick Michigan Corn King for Past Year

Charles Laughlin, of Dansville, Ingham county, is Michigan's corn king for 1923, according to announcement made here this week in connection with the crops program of the annual M. A. C. Farmers Week.

With a record of 83 bushels per acre, or about 175 "baskets" Laughlin led his nearest competitor by more than ten bushels to the acre. Seven other state growers turned in very creditable records and were listed as finishing the year's contest.

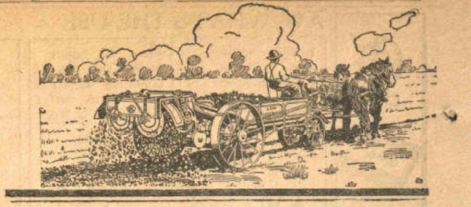
The Michigan Crop Improvement Association and the farm crops department at M. A. C., working together, decided a year ago to establish a "Michigan Corn Growing Contest," nominating contenders from among the best known corn men of the state. Sixteen started the contest and eight finished, the whole affair being conducted quietly as a trial and starter to determine the possibilities of such events

That the "Corn King" contest will be continued as an annual competition, with a widened entry list, was assured at the meetings here this week, according to G. W. Putnam, of the M. A. C. crops department, who is supervising contest work. Gold, silver and bronze medals are offered for those who reach certain production standards in the contest. Profit per acre, after figuring out cost of production was taken as the basis for award in last year's contest.

The order in which entries finished the 1923 affair is as follows: Chas. Laughlin, Dansville, Ingham county, 83 bushels per acre; Paul Clement, Britton, Monroe county, 72.5 bu.; Milo Robinson, Union City Branch county, 70.77 bu.; D. V. Bow, Saginaw, 70.72 bu.; D. A. Geddes, Swan Creek, Saginaw county, 67 bu.; P. A. Smith, Mulliken, Eaton county, 69bu.; Alf. Vincent, Durand, Shiawassee county, 64 bu.; and Rossman Bros., Lakeview, Montcalm county, 53 bu.

A North Adams man convalescing in a Jackson hospital, wrote here to the Advocate describing his room and his experiences. In speaking of his cheerful surroundings he said "there are six windows in my room" and the lakadaisacal typesetter left out the "n" which made it say "there are six widows in my room" and we are up in the air facing a damage suit and the patient though a very sick man, bids fair to be sicker trying to explain away the situation to his wife.

"If all the public reports of investigations of coal were placed in a single Carnegie library of standard size the sides of the building would undoubtedly buldge in order to accommodate the full stock of volumes. The record of coal mining is full of black tricks, and the Government has the Bertillon measurements, the thumb prints, and the color of the eyes and hair of most of the profiteering artists who deal in black coal and bituminous and anthracite magic. The last "fifth series" of Federal Trade reports show that the so-called "railroad" coal companies are charging from $8.75 to $9.25 for anthracite and that the so-called "Independents" are charging from $9.80 to $12.50 a ton for the same coal. In order to cover their tracks the Independents follow the "practice of passing anthracite through the hands of wholesalers", to each of whom is paid a high premium, for their part in the little game of holding up the consumers". — Jonesville Independent.



STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HOW NOT TO GET RICH

"Oh, Aunt Emmy," cried Helen, rushing in and kissing Aunt Emmy, "I've got a wonderful chance to get rich. The nicest man told me about a patent bee-hive that will double my money in a year! With it bees will make two or three times as much honey. If I buy it right away I can make ever so much money, for the stock is selling at fifty cents and it's going to par soon, whatever that is, so I'll have oodles of money. Oh, Aunty, won't it be lovely? You and I can go to Europe and—"

"Hold on a minute, Helen," begged Aunt Emmy; "would you really let this man have your money for a fool thing like that?"

"Why, Aunty, I'm sure it is all right! He gave me the loveliest booklet—I brought it along. You are so suspicious, Aunty," she reproached.

"Suspicious, am I! That $5,000 is the only money you ever had or ever expect to have except what you earn as a teacher. You can't afford to throw it away. Sit right down and write to your bank for information about that bee-hive. Tell them you are thinking of investing your $5,000, and send them the booklet."

"But, Aunty, that would take several days, and the man said not to wait," Helen protested.

"If people would wait a while before investing, there would be far less failures in the world. You will hear from the bank soon enough. Promise."

"I suppose I'll have to," agreed Helen, crestfallen, "but I'm sure the old bank doesn't want to be bothered with poor little me."

When Helen came to see Aunt Emmy again she looked serious. Aunt Emmy guessed that her get-rich-quick bubble had burst.

"Look, Aunty," she said, handing over a letter from the bank that gave a report on the patent bee-hive. The letter said that the men engaged in the enterprise were not trustworthy. It invited Helen to consult with the bank about her investment.

"You were right, Aunty," said Helen. "I saw Mr. Hitchcock there. He told me a lot about investments and suggested some safe ones. I never understood the bank's value before. If it had not been for you and the bank I should not have a cent today. I'll never do a thing with money unless I ask the bank first. I felt I was with friends, Aunty."

"You were, my dear," said Aunt Emmy, smiling.—ANNE B. AYMES.

A Chance to Shine

THE young man of today need not leave the farm for a career. True, present conditions are not conducive to large financial returns, but these conditions will undoubtedly change Those who are in position to know think that we have reached the low ebb and now farm products are on the upgrade.

We have only begun to solve our agricultural problems. There is a large unexplored field ahead of us. The young man with brains and a sympathetic heart can find ample opportunities for making a name for himself on the farm.

In addressing a national group of young people recently, President Head, of the American Bankers Association, said he believes the opportunities for making a name as a leader in agriculture are greater than making a name in the position of a Congressman. He thinks the day is coming when a man shall take pride in saying, "I am an American farmer."

Any young man who has a liking for things rural can well afford to consider preparing himself to become a good farmer, for after he has made a success of his farm, he will find abundant opportunity for leadership in his community.—Banker-Farmer.

AMERICA NOT INDIFFERENT

By FRANCIS H. SISSON,
Chairman, Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association.

While the facts justify the belief that the financial and general economic strength of the United States is so great that it creates a stability here which cannot be seriously shaken by the adverse conditions in Europe, it still remains true that an attitude of indifference to these distressing conditions is unworthy of the American people. In fact, I believe that such indifference does not exist. The nation is observing with deep interest the progress of events abroad and has given many evidences of a readiness to aid in restoring normal conditions there whenever it is seen that a suitable opportunity is afforded.

© U. & U.
Francis H. Sisson

Our people have naturally been reluctant to act while the European nations still fail to display the will to accept the only terms on which rehabilitation is possible, and to abandon their mutual hatreds and distrusts, their persistence in preparation for further warfare, and their destructive political and financial policies. Such policies have so weakened the credit of some of the continental nations that the task of aiding them seems futile until it is clear that these policies are discredited and disowned by them.

Although it seems clear from the record of recent years that America, more perhaps than any other country, has been and will continue to be able to adjust itself without serious disaster to the conditions created by European depression, and has in its own vast domestic market and in other non-European markets an outlet for its products adequate to maintain a fair degree of national prosperity, the fact remains that it is very definitely to the selfish interests of the United States to have Great Britain and the European continental countries regain their normal prosperity at the earliest possible date. They normally absorbed between 60 and 70 per cent of American exports, but recently have been taking less than 50 per cent.

Moreover, the rich contribution which Europe has made in the past to the upbuilding of other parts of the world, including the United States, would seem to create a genuine obligation upon other countries to come to its aid in the present period of difficulty. General well-being throughout the entire world will be diminished to a degree as long as Europe is unable to play its part in production and consumption of valuable products. It possesses vast resources of skill and equipment for the production of useful commodities in demand by all nations, and loss continues while these resources are limited in their use by poverty and by adverse political and social conditions.

That the share of the United States in this loss is relatively small should not preclude an active interest in every promising effort that may be made to restore the European nations to economic and financial health.

For Community Betterment

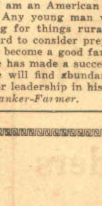
The Committee on Agriculture of the Missouri State Bankers Association has sent out a questionnaire to all members to secure a frank opinion as to what are the most important community problems to be solved in the state. The questionnaire covers bank deposits, crops, schools, manufacturing, roads, junior club work, agricultural agencies, co-operative agencies, farm abandonment, land values, finances, dairying, and social life, with a view in determining what work should be undertaken for the year.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON IV

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

Formerly the saver paid to have his money kept in a safe place. Today he is paid interest by banks which keep his savings safe. Is this interest on money, saved and deposited in the bank, the only gain to the depositor from saving?



J. H. Puelicher

MONEY SAVED AND DEPOSITED IN BANK = funds for the banker to loan out on farm mortgages, land bank or other farm bonds; railroad, municipal or government bonds; or notes of farmers, merchants and manufacturers. Therefore SAVING = assisting the farmer to raise crops; the railroads to run trains; the town, city, state or nation to build schools for the children of the depositor and his fellow citizens; or construct water works or other public enterprises.

Saving also equals helping the butcher, baker and grocer to do business so that food is brought within reach of the home; and the manufacturer to make shoes, clothing and the many things people need to live.

Every saver, therefore, is not only putting away money against a rainy day and earning interest on it meanwhile, but he is also making it possible for himself and others to have the luxuries, comforts and necessaries of life,—to enjoy all the advantages of a greater and better civilization. Thus through banks every saver gains a great deal more than merely interest on his money.

Jim turned over and over in his mind these new applications of old, historic, significant words, dear to every reader of history—"glebe-land," "schoolmanse"—and it seemed to him that they signified the return of many old things lost in Merrie England, lost in New England, lost all over the English-speaking world, when the old publicly-paid clergyman ceased to be so far the servant of all the people that they refused to be taxed for his support. Was not the new kind of rural teacher to be a publicly-paid leader of thought, of culture, of progress, and was he not to have his manse, his glebe-land, and his "living?" And all because, like the old clergyman, he was doing a work in which everybody was interested and for which they were willing to be taxed. Perhaps it was not so high a status as the old; but who was to say that? Certainly not Jim Irwin, the possessor of the new kind of "living," with its "glebe-land" and its "schoolmanse." He would have rated the new as at least quite as high as the old.

From the brow of the promontory, a light concrete bridge took the pretty little gorge in the leap of a single arch, and landed the eve at the bottom of the front yard of the schoolhouse. Thus the new institution of life was in full view of the schoolmanse veranda, and yet shut off from it by the dry moat of the brook and its tiny meadow of blue-grass.

Across the road was the creamery, with its businesslike unloading platform, and its addition in process of construction for the reception of the machinery for the co-operative laundry. Not far from the creamery, and also across the road, stood the blacksmith and wheelwright shop. Still farther down the street were the barn, poultry house, pens, hutches and yards of the little farm—small, as were all the buildings save the schoolhouse itself, which was builded, as it should have been, for the future.

And even the schoolhouse, when one thinks of the uses to which it was to be put—kitchen, nursery, kindergarten, banquet hall, theater, moving picture hall, classrooms, manual training rooms, laboratory and counting room and what not, was wonderfully small—Colonel Woodruff said far too small—though it was necessarily so large as to be rather astonishing to the unexpectant passer-by.

The unexpectant passer-by this May day, however, would have been especially struck by the number of motor cars, buggies and surreys parked in the yard back of the creamery, along the roadside, and by the driveway running to the schoolhouse. People in numbers had arrived by five o'clock in the afternoon, and were still coming. They strolled about the place, examining the buildings and grounds, and talking with the blacksmith and the butter-maker.

Gradually they drew into the schoolhouse like a swarm of bees into a hive selected by the queen. None of them, however, went across the concrete bridge to the schoolmanse, save Mrs. Simms, who crossed, consulted with Mrs. Irwin about the shrubbery and flowers, and went back to Buddie and Jinnie, who were good children but natchally couldn't be trusted with so many other young ones withouten some watchin'.

This was the cry borne to the people in and about the schoolhouse by that Hans Hansen who would be called Hans Nilsen. Hans had been to the top of the little hill and had a look toward town.

Like a crew manning a rigging, or a crowd having its picture taken, the assemblage crystallized into forms determined by the chances of getting a glimpse of the bungalow across the ravine—on posts, fences, trees and hillocks.

A motor car came over the hillock, ran down the road to the driveway to the schoolmanse and drew up at the door. Out of it stepped Mrs. Woodruff and the colonel, their daughter, the county superintendent of schools, and Mr. Jim Irwin. Jennie was dressed in a very well-tailored traveling costume, and Jim in a moderately well-tailored business suit. The fact that when they reached the threshold Jim picked Jennie up in his arms and carried her in, will enable any good detective to put one and one together and make a pair—which comes pretty near telling the whole story.

By this time it was nearly seven, and Calista Simms came across the charmed bridge as a dispatch-bearer, saying that if Mr. Jim and Miss Jennie didn't mind, dinner would be suhved right soon. It was cooked about right, and the folks was gettin' right hungry—an' such a crowd! There were fifteen in the babies' room, and for a while they thought the youngest Hamm young one had swallowed a marble. She would tell 'em they would be right over; good-by.

There was another cheer as the three elderly and the two younger people emerged from the schoolmanse and took their way over the bridge to the school side of the velvet-bottomed moat, but it was shut off like the vibration of a bell dipped in water by the sudden rush of the shouters into the big assembly room, now filled with tables for the banquet. And here the domestic economy classes, with their mothers, sisters, female cousins and aunts, met them, as waiters, hat snatchers, hostesses, floor managers and cooks, scoring the greatest triumph of history in the Woodruff district. For everything went off like clockwork, especially the victuals—and such victuals!

There was quantity in meats, breads, vegetables—and there was also savor. There was plenty, and there was style. Ask Mrs. Haakon Peterson, who yearned for culture, and had been afraid her children wouldn't get it if Yim Irwin taught them nothing but farming. She will tell you that the dinner—which so many thought of all the time as supper—was yust as well served as if it had been in the Chamberlain Hotel in Des Moines, where she had stayed when she went with Haakon to the state convention.

Why shouldn't it have been even better served? It was planned, cooked, served and eaten by people of intelligence and brains, in their own house, as a community affair, and in a community where, if any one should ask you, you are authorized to state that there's as much wealth to the acre as in any strictly farming spot between the two oceans, and where you are perfectly safe—financially—in dropping from a balloon in the dark of the moon, and paying a hundred and fifty dollars an acre for any farm you happen to land on. Why shouldn't things have been well done, when every one worked, not for money, but for the love of the doing, and the love of learning to do in the best way?

Some of these things came out in the speeches following the repast—and some other things, too. It was probably not quite fair for B. B. Hamm to incorporate in his wishes for the welfare and prosperity and so forth of Jim and Jennie that stale one about the troubles of life, but he wanted to see Jennie blush—which as a matter of fact he did; but she failed to grow quite so fiery red as did Jim. But B. B. was a good fellow, and a Trojan in his work for the cause, and the schoolmaster and superintendent of schools forgave him. A remark may be a little broad, and still clean, and B. B. made a clean speech, mainly devoted to the increased value of that farm he at one memorable time was going to sell before Jim's fool notions could be carried out.

Colonel Woodruff made most of the above points which I have filched from him. He had begun as a reformer late in life, he said, but he would leave it to them if he hadn't worked at the trade steadily after enlistment. He had become a follower of Jim Irwin, because Jim's reform was like dragging the road in front of your own farm—it was reform right at home, and not at the county seat, or Des Moines, or Washington. He had followed Jim Irwin as he had followed Lincoln, and Grant, and Blaine, and McKinley—because Jim Irwin stood for more upward growth for the average American citizen than the colonel could see any prospect of getting from any other choice. And he was proud to live in a country like this, saved and promoted by the great men he had followed, and in a neighborhood served and promoted, if not quite saved, by Jim Irwin. And he was not so sure about it not being saved. Every man and nation had to be saved anew every so often, and the colonel believed that Jim Irwin's new kind of rural school is just as necessary to the salvation of this country. "I am about to close my speech," said the colonel, "and the small service I have been able to give to this nation. I went through the war, neighbors—and am proud of it; but I've done more good in the peaceful service of the last three years than I did in four of fighting and campaigning. That's the way I feel about what we've done in Consolidated District Number One." (Vociferous and long-continued applause.)

"Oh, Colonel!" The voice of Angie Talcott rose from away back near the kitchen. "Can Jennie keep on bein' county superintendent, now she's married?"

A great guffaw of laughter reduced poor Angie to tears; and Jennie had to go over and comfort her. It was all right for her to ask that and they ought not to laugh at Angie, so there! Now, you're all right, and let's talk about the new schoolhouse, and so forth. Jennie brought the smiles back to Angie's face, just in time to hear Jim tell the people amid louder cheers that he had been asked to go into the rural school extension work in two states, and had been offered a fine salary in either place, but that he wasn't even considering these offers. And about that time, the children began to get sleepy and cross and naughty, and the women set in motion agencies which moved the crowd homeward.

* * * * * * *

Before a bright wood fire—which they really didn't need, but how else was Jim's mother to show off the little fireplace?—sat Jim and Jennie. They had been together for a week now—this being their homecoming—and had only begun to get really happy.

Jim sat looking into the fire, oblivious of it. When Jennie spoke, her voice seemed to emanate from Jim's shirt front.

"Did you hear," said she, "what Angie Talcott asked?"

"M'h'm," said Jim.

"Well," said Jennie, "now that I'm married can I go on being county superintendent?"

There was a long silence.

"Would you like to?" asked Jim.

"Kind of," said Jennie; "if I knew enough about things to do anything worth while; but I'm afraid that by rising to my full height I shall always just fail to be able to see over anything."

"You've done more for the schools of the county," said Jim, "in the last year than any other county superintendent has ever done."

"And we shall need the money so like—so like the dickens," was Jennie's rejoinder.

"Oh, not so badly," laughed Jim, "except for the first year. I'll have this little farm paying as much as some quarter sections when we get squared about. Why, we can make a living on this school farm, Jennie—or I'm not fit to be the head of the school."

There was another silence, during which Jennie took down her hair, and wound it around Jim's neck.

"It will settle itself one of these days anyhow," said he at last. "There's enough to do for both of us right here."

"But they won't pay me," she protested.

"They don't pay the ministers' wives," said Jim, "and yet, the ministers with the right sort of wives are always the best paid. I guess you'll be in the bill, Jennie."

Jim walked to the open window and looked out over the still landscape. Down in the little meadow grew the dreaming trees, their round crowns rising as from a sea not quite to the level of the bungalow, their thrifty leaves glistening in the moonlight. Across the pretty bridge lay the silent little campus with its Twentieth century temple facing its chief priest. It was all good, without and within.

He went across the hall to bid his mother good night. She clung to him convulsively, and they had their own five minutes which arranged matters for these two silent natures on the new basis forever. Jennie was in white before the mantel when he returned, smiling at the inscription thereon:

"Let Us Cease Thinking So Much of Agricultural Education, and Devote Ourselves to Educational Agriculture So Will the Nation Be Made Strong."

"Why didn't you put it in Latin?" she inquired. "It would have had so much more distinction."

"I wanted it to have meaning instead," said Jim. "And besides, nobody who was at hand was quite sure how to turn the Latin phrase. Are you?"

"I believe I could," said she, "without any pony. But after all, I like it better as it is. I like everything, Jim—everything!"

[THE END.]

ARE PERSISTENT LAND CLAIMANTS

Anneke Jans' Heirs Still Confident They Are Entitled to Trinity Church Property.

Though the New York State Court of Appeals outlawed the Anneke Jans heirs' claim to the Trinity church tract in New York city as long ago as 1856, and again in 1881, the claim still persists in the minds of some of Mrs. Jans' thousands of descendants.

The various litigations attacking the Trinity church title were all based on technical irregularities in grants of conveyances, such as the absence of a seal or signature, or on allegations that the grantors themselves had no title. The defense has been adverse possession and the statute of limitation.

The streets laid out by Trinity Church corporation in the Jans tract were named after leading men in the church—Vesey, after Rev. William Vesey, the rector; Barclay, after Rev. Mr. Barclay, who succeeded Vesey as rector; Murray, after a distinguished lawyer and officer of the church; Warren, after Sir Peter Warren, commander of the British naval forces at the station, who married Miss Delancey of New York city; Chambers, after John Chambers, a lawyer, born in New York city, and a leader in civil and church affairs.

Lettuce Has High Place in Diet.

Lettuce is one of the most important of all the succulent vegetables. There is only slight food value in lettuce, while its mineral salts are of use in the process of metabolism. It is a wholesome, digestible, cooling and agreeable vegetable. The principal salts are the oxalate, malate, nitrate and sulphate of potash, chloride of potash and phosphates of lime and magnesia. Lettuce is also classed among the chief iron-giving vegetables. Iron helps to build red corpuscles. It also contains potassium, which helps to build cells.

Comes High.

Roads Employ Many Men

There are 77,000 trolley car motormen employed in this country every day on the electric railways. It requires 63,000 conductors for their cars. Approximately 150,000 other men are employed on the tracks and in the shops and car houses of these electric railways.

The wages of this large group of men are derived from the receipts of the electric railways from fares paid by their passengers.

But Jimmy was not so easily won over.

"No. I don't want to take it," he whined. "I don't like medicine, and I won't take it."

"Why, Jimmy," pleaded his mother, gently, "you never heard me complain about a little powder, did you?"

"No, and nor would I," was the bright child's startling response, "if I could just put it on my face like you do, but I have to swallow it."

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

TRY THESE TESTED RECIPES

"One-Egg" Cake With Monarch Cocoa Icing

¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup milk
1½ cups cake flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder

To creamed butter gradually add sugar and egg, well beaten. Mix and sift flour and baking powder, adding alternately with milk to first mixture. Bake in shallow pan 30 minutes with moderate oven.

MONARCH COCOA ICING

Mix 1 cup sugar, ½ cup water and ⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar. Boil without stirring till it threads. Pour slowly over white of egg beaten stiff, beating constantly. When mixture begins to cream add 3 heaping teaspoons Monarch Cocoa. Spread on cold cake.

Farm House Cocoa Fudge

Melt 1 tablespoon of butter in a cast iron skillet, add ½ cup of milk and 1½ cups of sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved, then add ⅛ cup of Farm House Cocoa; continue stirring until thoroughly blended. Heat to the boiling point and let boil 12 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from the fire, add 1 teaspoon of vanilla and beat until the mixture is creamy. Pour into a buttered pan, cool, and cut in one inch squares.

The high school basket ball teams lost to Hanover Saturday night. Charley Ramsdell, local player, lost a small yellow suitcase containing his purple and gold suit, socks, shoes, collar and necktie and hopes that if anyone found it in North Adams or along the road that they retnrn it, otherwise Charley will be singing, "Yes we have no pajamas" instead of "Yes we have no bananas.

Local News

Reports come to us from the neighborhood of Emery Hill out Hillsdale way that they had an earthquake. Whether they are full of "joke stuff" or really know this, we can't say. Mrs. Stanfield claims the chimney on her residence suddenly fell to the roof and at the same time the earth trembled and a roaring sound akin to thunder was heard. The pupils at the Stone school house a short distance this side also claim the earth shook under their feet and a roar was audible. This took place Wednesday. We don't know but it might be wise to investigate and see if a moonshine still had not exploded somewhere in the vicinity or mayhap a stump blower got in his work with an over charge.

Albion College is again in a turmoil since the board of trustee have requested the resignation of President Emeritis Samuel Dickie. This man is tied to his home by sickness at present and it is claimed undue advantage was taken of him at this time. District Supt Clapp refuses to talk on the subject and the students are pretty well stirred up. It looks to a novice as if the old Methodist Institution was due for a general shaking up and weeding out, What is in the wind regarding President Dickie no one knows or whether the resignation of Dr Laird has stirred up emnity is a question.

Debtors Take Notice

Will A. Russ is now living at Hillsdale and is dependent for his living expenses upon what little can be realized from goods which are in stock and have been sold. We respectfully ask all those knowing themselves to be indebted to Mr. Russ to call at the Advocate Office and settle these accounts as he needs the money badly. If you have bought goods of him on credit kindly attend to this at once. Ernest Stevens, Administrator. 36t4

Death of Mrs Shinneberry

Many of our readers will learn with deep regrets of the death of Mrs Washington Shinneberry which took place at the home of her son Joseph Slocum, on Champaign Street in Hillsdale Saturday morning February 2. Funeral services were held at Dutcher's undertaking rooms Tuesday at 2:00 p. m. Rev Elizabeth Moody Evans officiating, and she was laid to rest in Lake View cemetery. She is survived by the son only and was formerly a resident of this village where her husband died some time ago. Her age was probably upwards of 70.

Spring is on Its Way

If you don't believe it look about. Politicians are busy posting up caucus notices, chicken hatcheries are already casting about for customers which are sure to materialize, down on the farm Uncle Josh talks quite comprehendingly of how many trees he will tap this spring and the old Brahma hen is beginning to manifest broody signs.. Just around the corner is a smell of parsnips and across the street a little boy has resurrected his bat and ball. "Old Sol" gets daily higher up at noon and you find the daylight hanging on longer at the day's end and beginning a little earlier in the morning. The first robin hasn't been announced but he's on his way.

Necrology For 1923 In This Vicinity

It is usually considered rather out of order to publish the necrology unless there has been an epidemic of some sort but we are doing this so as to show the world what a healthy locality this country is. It is really astonishing how few deaths have taken place compared with some other years when pneumonia and influenza have prepoderated:

Harriette Beecher, died January 11; buried Jan. 14. Junior F. Dewey, died Feb 4. Sarah Daniels, died Feb 16; buried Feb 17. Rebecca Hamblin, died Feb 28 of diabetes. Lewis N. Fondesy died May 21 of convulsions. Nancy Adrianssens died May 19, senile dementia. Alice Lorena Wells died July 10, cancer. Robert J. Pearson died July 24, intestinal obstruction. Mrs George Wing died July 18. Mrs George Combs died Aug 19; buried Aug 22. Jane Ann Converse died Sept 18 intestinal nephritis. Marion G. Mosher died October 20, lomber pneumonia. Pulaski A. Church died Nov 7. arterio sclerosis George Westfall died Nov 18. arterio sclerosis. Mary Ann Kirby died Nov 29. arterio sclerosis. Renah Elizabeth Marvin died Nov 14. Mrs Norman R. Collins died Nov 16. Mrs A. McMullen died Dec 15, cancer. Mrs Charles Wolcott died Dec 17. Vining A. Barker died Dec 21, cancer.

that you might have been living as a British subject but for Poor Richard? And you would be reckoning values in pounds, shillings and pence.

Then Irving Bacheller's great book —

But then there would have been no such story as "In the Days of Poor Richard." We'd all have been out of luck!

Judd Westcott and son will conduct an auction at their farm one mile north and 4 miles east of North Adams on Thursday February 28, 1924, beginning at 9:30 a. m. and will sell three horses 14 cattle some hogs 85 chickens, 18 Shropshire sheep and a large selection of farming implements some household furniture. Northrup's lunch cart on the ground. John Hoffman auctioneer; John Williams, clerk.

We understand George Iveson and Will VanAken made a trip to Jackson Saturday evening in George's Daimler Mercedesspeedster. This of course was on a wager that they could not get through the snow drifts. They carried a can of hot tea and two snow shovels. It is said they resembled Esquimaux when they returned and most of the boys doubt if they really went much farther than Buck's Hill. "Bill" says the roads are good except banks up by Ernest Thornton's and he also offers a reward for the return of a snow shovel.

We Will Insure Farm Property

We are now equipped to insure farm property and live stock in the National Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, one of the strongest in the east. Any farmer or resident who lives in the country can get insurance on his property. Come in if you want protection against fire or wind storm or both. We can also insure Fairs, or any public outdoor event against rain or wind. Remember at the sign of the Hartford in North Adams.

Attend the Caucus by All Means

Next Monday evening, February 18th, occurs the annual village caucus and it is altogether paramount the ladies as well as gentlemen should all be there. Most of the ladies seem to forget they are legalized voters or they become negligent about attending to a matter which requires the attention of every 100 per cent American citizen—that of voting. It is seldom that a single causus goes by without some dissatisfaction on the part of some parties who did not attend and didn't know who was to be nominated and yet they are displeased with the selections for certain offices. Don't let that be your complaint this spring but by all means lay aside your duties at home as piously as you would on the Sabbath and turn out and help nominate candidates for election to offices which means so much to the town. There are three trustees whose terms expire this spring—Fred Baker, Bert Taylor, and Merton N. Wolcott Those who will remain on are Glenn Mercer, Harley Fry and Darwin Carney. Then the President, clerk, treasurer and assessor are to be elected.

Obituary

John B. Morris, son of Ben and Esther Morris was born in Maumee Ohio Jan. 14, 1873 and departed this life Feb. 5, 1924 in Detroit at the receiving hospital with pneumonia, at the age of 51 years.

Mr. Morris lived at and spent his boyhood days in Jerome. Later he made his home in Jackson where he was employed at the Hayes Wheel Works for 15 years. Since that time he has lived in Detroit, working two years as foreman for a railroad company up to the time of his death. He was a member of the Moose Lodge of Jackson. He leaves to mourn the loss an aged mother, Mrs. E. Morris of Jerome, and one sister, Mrs. May Lovell of Jackson besides many dear friends.

The remains were laid to rest by the side of his father in the Jerome cemetery Friday, Feb. 8th.

Temple of Diana One of World's Seven Wonders

One of the seven wonders of the ancient world was the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, built in the Fourth century before Christ, and burned by the Goths in 262 A. D. But the temple was doomed to early destruction at the hands of a half-crazed Greek named Herostratus. In 356 B. C., on the night when Alexander the Great was born, he burned the temple to the ground. When he was arraigned for his crime he said he had done it to make an immortal name for himself, and he had chosen the night Alexander was born because Diana was the goddess of childbirth, and he believed that she would be in Macedonia to bless the little prince's arrival.

A new temple, started in 350, became a storehouse for great gifts. In 262 A. D. invading Goths destroyed the city and burned the temple. Only a few of the columns escaped, and they were used in the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.—Detroit News.

Dogs Remember Tones

Can dogs pick up a foreign language and still remember that of the land of their birth? Experts who have been consulted agree that they can. The experts emphasize the fact, however, that it is primarily the inflection of the voice that the animal learns to understand when sent to a foreign country. It pays much closer and quicker attention to the tone than to the sound of the words, says the Detroit News.

Dogs, like horses, remember the sound of the language of their masters and even after many years in a foreign land can remember the meaning of sentences.

A clear proof of some dogs' cleverness is to be found in the way they pick up several native tongues and dialects when they leave their British masters in India and Africa, in places where several languages are spoken.

An Amazing Fact

To many people it may seem incredible that a habit so common as coffee-drinking can be harmful. Yet if your doctor were to enumerate the common causes of indigestion, headache, and run-down condition, he would be likely to mention coffee.

If you are troubled with insomnia, nervousness, or are inclined to be high-strung, try Postum in place of coffee for thirty days, and note the difference in the way you feel, and how much better you sleep.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine, or any harmful drug.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms. Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

POULTRY

KEEP HENS INDOORS IN SEVERE WEATHER

If you want winter eggs, the hens should not be allowed to run outdoors at all. They will do much better confined in the house all the time than they would out under the old binder or sitting in the same stall at the barn all day.

The main reason for keeping hens in the house is to force them to eat what is necessary to make them lay out of season. They must have a good well-balanced dry mash in hoppers so they may eat at any time. This dry mash must be eaten slowly so the hens have to spend a good deal of time at the hoppers to get their fill. They must also have a grain ration and greens of some kind.

There are a number of grain rations that can be used, in fact most any grain that the hens like and is generally grown on the farm is all right. It can be balanced by the addition of other grains in the dry mash. I prefer a grain ration of cracked corn, whole oats, and wheat. Kafir is fine in the mixture and kafir and oats alone make a good grain ration, says a writer in Successful Farming.

One of the most important things in the winter care of hens is a good litter of straw or some litter material on the floor. This litter should be six or eight inches deep and all the grain must be scattered in it so the hens will have to scratch and work for their feed. The heaviest feed of grain should be given at night, so all the hens will go to roost with their crops full.

Many poultry houses are arranged so the droppings fall in the litter on the floor. This can be remedied by installing a dropping board under the roosts. The roosts can be placed across the back of the house on a level with each other and the platform for the dropping board built under them. Then the droppings can be cleaned out every day or two and the litter on the floor will not have to be changed so often.

The green feed can be supplied either by sprouting oats or by using beets or cabbage that have been stored for the purpose. The best method of feeding, I find, is to give the hens a light grain feed in the early morning. This can be scattered the night before if desired. The green feed is put out at noon and the heavy feed of grain in the evening before the hens go to roost.

Necessary to Air Eggs During Hatching Period

All experienced incubator operators know the necessity of airing eggs, but some fail to understand why. Yet we know that the chick inside the shell is a living, growing thing and that it needs fresh air, change of conditions and exercise in order that it may expand, move and develop its strength.

Airing eggs has another merit. The shells expand and contract with heat and cold and this ripens them. By the use of machinists' callipers, one may discover an appreciable difference in expansion of eggs under 60 degrees and over 100. Frequent expansion and contraction of the shell is believed to break down fibers and make the shell brittle, so that chicks due to hatch can get out of shells with less exhaustion.

This matter of airing eggs during incubation requires judgment and should be guided by development of chicks, temperature of room, etc. If we watch sitting hens, we will find that eggs seemingly need very little airing the first week of incubation, a trifle more the second, and still more the third week when the vitality of chicks has added to the warmth of the eggs.

It is never safe to forget that chicks are dependent upon air that percolates through the porous shell. Cooling eggs shrinks the air-bubbles and sets up a suction which draws in fresh air to purify the interior stale air.

Plenty of Sunshine and Fresh Air Aids Poultry

Always give your fowls plenty of sunshine and fresh air, the two best disease preventives for man or beast. Ventilation is an important factor in winter housing of a flock of layers, and it should be had without causing direct draughts of air upon the fowls, especially when they are on the roost at night. This can be easily accomplished by taking out one of the windows, covering the opening with burlap in cold weather and fitting it with a sliding door so it can be opened or closed at will. The air-tight or artificially-heated house with its expensive and complicated ventilating apparatus has come and gone.

Spring-Hatched Pullets Should Be Coaxed Along

Pullets hatched in the spring can be induced to lay more abundantly in the winter if they are properly fed, housed and handled. On the average general farm very few eggs are secured at the time when eggs bring the highest prices. It will pay the poultry owner, therefore, to devote a little trouble to providing his birds with the most favorable surroundings for the winter.

Breeding Hens Work Hard.

There is always danger that the hens that have laid best during the winter and are wanted for breeding this spring, will be a little weakened from their winter's work. In this case very careful attention and feeding are necessary to get the best results.

Hatch Only Good Eggs.

Source of Sun's Heat

The source of the vast amount of heat which the sun gives off cannot be the result of combustion, for if such were the case it would have been consumed long ago. The Helmholtz theory is generally accepted. It assumes that the sun's bulk is gradually contracting, and that the energy thus produced is turned into heat. It has been calculated that a contraction of 150 feet a year would be enough to account for the heat developed.

TALES OF THE OLD FRONTIER

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

THEY SHOWED HOW A CHEYENNE WARRIOR CAN DIE

IN THE summer of 1890 Head Chief and Young Mule, two young Northern Cheyenne Indians on the Lame Deer reservation in Montana, were accused of the murder of a boy named Hugh Boyle. When the authorities demanded that their tribesmen surrender the two braves, the Indians tried to settle the matter according to their ancient custom. They offered the largest number of horses and other Indian wealth that had ever in the history of the tribe been given as an atonement for killing a man, but when the agent told them that this would not do, the chiefs sent him this message:

"You will hang Head Chief and Young Mule if we give them up. When a man is hanged his soul cannot escape from his body and it, too, is killed. That is no death for a warrior. Let them die fighting."

So they announced that on a certain date the two men would attack the agency and they expected the soldiers to be on hand to defend it. This proposition for a pre-arranged and spectacular suicide was a startling one, but the agent had no alternative but to accept it. On September 18, the day appointed, a troop of the First cavalry and the Indian police were drawn up in battle array before the agency. On all of the surrounding heights sat the Cheyennes to see the battle. And with the stage thus set, the principal actors soon appeared for their part in the drama.

That morning the medicine man had anointed them in preparation for their ride to death. They had put on their finest clothes and painted themselves.

Then, singing their death songs, Head Chief and Young Mule dashed forward, two men against more than a hundred. Under the hail of bullets that greeted them Young Mule went down. But Head Chief seemed to bear a charmed life. He rode unscathed past the line of soldiers and police firing pointblank at him until he was out of range. Then he turned and deliberately rode back, and this time a bullet found its mark.

Later it was learned that Young Mule had had no part in killing Boyle, but a mistaken sense of honor prevented his trying to prove his innocence.

THE OATH OF A RANGER

BACK in the days when Arizona was "cow country" two men rode the range together for one of the big cattle outfits and, although totally different in temperament, Bill Smith and Carlos Tafolla were pals whose friendship had been cemented by years of hardship and danger. When the cattle business declined in that territory, Tafolla enlisted in Capt. Burton Mossman's Arizona Rangers, a splendid body of picked men sworn to uphold the law and to place duty over friendship, love or life itself. As for Smith—he drifted from one job to another.

In 1900 a band of outlaws who had been stealing horses, robbing banks and post offices and committing murders in New Mexico, were driven over into Arizona. By a strange turn of fate it was Tafolla and another Ranger named Maxwell who discovered the bandits' stronghold in a deep canyon in the White mountains.

It was the custom of the Arizona Rangers before going into action to take the Ranger's oath. So Maxwell and Tafolla rode side by side, clasped each other's hand and repeated the secret words that bound them to stick to each other even unto death. They were within 50 yards of the outlaw camp before their approach was discovered. When Maxwell lifted his voice in a demand for surrender there was an ominous silence. Then a man stepped out into view.

"Hello, Tafolla," he said.

"Hello, Smith," replied the Ranger quietly.

"This is hard luck," said the outlaw. "You're as good as dead, Tafolla, if you try to arrest us. We outnumber you and we will naver be taken alive."

When Tafolla told him that an Arizona Ranger never counted the odds, Smith reminded him of his own reputation as a marksman who never missed.

"I don't want to kill you, Carlos!" he pleaded, "For the sake of old times, go away. If you will, we'll leave this country and never come back."

"I'm sorry, Bill, but we can't. We've just taken the Ranger's oath. But if things come out as you say, do me one favor. Get word to Captain Mossman that we did the best we could," said Tafolla.

Then the Rangers started forward and the shooting began. Smith still tried to scare them away. He put four bullets through the top of Tafolla's high-crowned Stetson. The Ranger continued to advance, firing as he came. Then Smith lowered his sights and shot his old friend between the eyes.

Bill Smith kept his word. A few weeks later Captain Mossman received a letter from the outlaw, somewhere in Mexico, telling how Rangers Maxwell and Tafolla had kept the Ranger's oath.

How Shot Are Made.

Shot are made by running molten lead combined with a little arsenic through a sieve or by pouring it from a ladle with a serrated edge from a high tower into water at the bottom. The stream of metal breaks into strips which become spherical.

Don't Give Them Nitrogen.

It has been found that the house-fly, whose term of life is commonly believed to be about six weeks, can live twice as long if its food contains nitrogen.

Club Comedy

An Englishman tells a story about a caddie who tried in vain to get the job of carrying the clubs of a pompous amateur player. When it was the latter's turn to play, he placed the ball carefully, threw himself into position, swung his club like a forge-hammer and—missed.

The rejected caddie laughed joyfully. Once more the novice drove and missed and the caddie's laughter became uproarious. At the third try the ball was dislodged from its perch and spun over the turf for about six feet. "Hi, man!" yelled the caddie derisively, "I'll carry your clubs for the fun o' the thing."

Interesting Story About "Devil Bridge" in Wales

There are many "devil bridges" in Europe, and nearly all have legends to account for the name. One of the more picturesque of these satanic bridges is in Wales, at Aberystwyth.

The story, as told by an English writer, is that Megan Llandunach was one day at her wits' end to know how to bring her only cow across the chasm. The devil then appeared to her and offered to bridge the gorge if, in return, he might have the first living thing that crossed it. Megan agreed, and the devil, thinking the woman would be the first to pass, flung down his bridge. But Megan was no fool. Taking a crust from her pocket, she threw it to the other side of the gorge and sent her dog after it. The outwitted devil, so the story goes, took his defeat very sensibly and left his bridge there for future generations of the clever Welsh.—Detroit News.

World's Biggest Gem

What is held to be the largest uncut precious stone in the world is a flawless black opal, discovered in this country and now said to be in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately 21 cubic inches, weighs 2,572,332 carats and is valued by the owners at $250,000. The colors are translucent blues and greens with a little red. The famous Viennese opal, which was without equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,658,927 carats, but has a number of flaws.

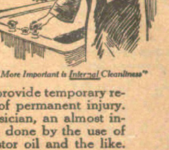
She had become engaged to the handsome foreign count against the wishes of her family. One day she said to him: "Oh, if you but knew how I have to fight for my love! My father is always saying he would give a thousand pounds for me never to see you again."

The count jumped up.

"Is he," he hissed—"is he in hees office now—yes?"



Laxatives do not overcome constipation

"More Important is Internal Cleanliness"

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only, at the expense of permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Some laxatives, according to an intestinal specialist, contain poisons which affect the stomach and intestines, resulting in grave disorders. Certain laxatives are a direct cause of piles.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Winter Conditions Of Highways

Makes it extremely unpleasant driving, although not so bad on the average as last season, still there have been many accidents of late from skidding wheels. Over at Hudson Mr. Avis and wife went out one day last week intending to drive to Morenci and on the way met a truck or some machine coming back. In turning out on a slanting piece of highway their car skidded and went into the ditch somewhere about eight feet deep, turned over and was completely wrecked.

Fortunately Mr. and Mrs. Avis escaped without serious injury although shaken up and scratched and bruised. The pity of it all seems to have been complete destruction of Avis' new Sport Nash Touring car which cost over $2,000 only a few days previously, and we suppose he had no insurance. If he did he was lucky.

The wheels were smashed, and the engine driven back on the chassis and top demolished.

Of course, we don't pretend to say winter driving is unnecessary or a farce but we do say it is risky indeed. When we consider the number of cars in use constantly this winter, we sometimes wonder where the price of alcohol and gas comes from; but that's neither here nor there. Anyhow it is very perilous to drive on the average faster than 15 miles per hour yet we find certain ones making just about as good records as they did in August. All the season through we have noted absence of cutters and sleighs notwithstanding the slipping at times has been good. But as a rule the small number of accidents compared to a large number of lakadaisical drivers is surprising. How different from 30 years back!

In the days Auld Lang Syne automobiling after Nov 1 or before June 1 was not possible or thought of. How we used to sit tight and hold the reins over old "Dobbin" when we overtook one of those strange gas devil wagons stalled in the highway and they used to quit quite regularly if they were taken out. Our first recollection of a motor vehicle was when we saw Dr Speer's steam phaeton on the streets of Hillsdale later on the highways of the country, where he used to scoot along at the hair raising speed of 10 miles per hour! It is needless to say that his glasses didn't fly off nor did the terrible velocity force the cigar from his mouth. Right here we mention Dr Speer was the most envied man of our boyhood days, yet what a crude piece of mechanicism was the steam phaeton of Dr Speer compared to the 50 horse power Wyllis-Knight of today. Then if you wanted to come to North Adams you took along your overalls and the monkey wrench prepared to make a day of it-- today you fill the supply tank with gas and start for the Pacific Coast with no concern whatever expecting to get there about as quick as you would on steam cars.

Right then and there we made a solemn resolve to own some kind of a "devil wagon" or lose a life-- Today we feel perhaps just as envious of the modern steam car but it isn't likely we shall live to see our ambitions realized. The perfected steam car of today is far and away the finest classiest, smoothest, most silent piece of transportation known to man-but Alas and Alack! Only for Millionaires.

A Big Industry

All told, a survey shows that the sporting goods industry in Michigan employs over twelve hundred people and produces every year better than $4,000,000 worth of product. These are not new industries by a good deal.

James Heddon founded the industry in Dowagiac many years ago, and his sons have succeeded to it. Charles Heddon, his son, still has the first wooden fish bait that he ever heard of. It was produced by his great-grandfather, William Tuttle, who used it eighty years ago trolling for bass and pickeral on Magician Lake, ten miles from Dowagiac.

So extensive is the industry nowadays that the Heddon company alone cuts up four or five carloads of lumber a year to supply wooden baits. This company is the largest in Michigan manufacturing artificial wooden bait lures and of high grade split bamboo fish casting rods and multiplying reels. The raw materials for these are assembled from various parts of the world. The bamboo for Heddon rods is imported direct from China, and the agates and jewels used in the production of rods and reels are imported direct from Germany and Austria. All of the hooks used on the Heddon baits are secured in England and Sweden.

Over 150 persons are employed in the Dowagiac factory and its productions, after covering practically all of the United States, are sent in quite important quantities to Europe and Australia. This number is equalled by the Shakespeare factory at Kalamazoo, which makes practically the same lines of goods and distributes them world-wide.

Although two of the men who succeeded him in the White House have succumbed to the trials of the Presidency, William Howard Taft, the Chief Justice of the United States, still goes about his daily duties as hale and hearty as ever. Taft is now 66 years old. Wilson was 67 when he died, while Harding was only 58. The death of two Presidents within a few months has brought forcibly to the attention of the leaders the necessity of choosing younger men as candidates. Being President of these States has gotten to be a man killing job.

Christmns Eve on Ellis Island

Through the windows of the New York apartments comes the flash of electric lights on the Christmas trees that fathers and mothers are trimming; in the subways uncles and aunts, sisters, brothers and cousins carry queer shaped, awkward bundles, gaily tied. It is Christmas Eve in New York, and in the bay on Ellis Island are nearly a thousand "strangers within our gates" detained over Christmas, some of them waiting to know whether liberty will be their Christmas gift, and others wondering, maybe, what kind of Christmas Eve they are to spend in America.

In the big hall of the main building on the Island, the Christmas spirit is waiting for the strangers and the General Committee on Immigrant Aid has prepared a merry evening. There is a great tree, gay with tinsel, glittering balls and colored lights. A brilliant star shines from the gallery where festoons of greens and wreaths transform the barren railings. The strangers file in and take their places on the long rows of benches: Armenians; one charming 16 year old bride of an American sailor; Italians smiling in response to the appeal of color and light; Germans with their flaxen-haired little girls and solemn-eyed boys; an English family from Manchester who had sold their home to come to America and must go back because they are excess quota; a dozen or more Chinese men; a student from South Africa; stolid Russian peasants, silent, wondering—and they keep on coming in as seemingly endless a procession as that which comes to our shores.

The strains of "Holy Night" from the pipe organ bring a solemn hush over the whole company, and tears to the eyes of many. The mother of Gretchen and Elsa puts her arms around them and will not be comforted even though they point out to her the beautiful dollies on the nearby table. "O Sole Mio", sung by a tenor, brings its emotional response from Southern Europe. And now it is time for Santa Claus. Here he comes bounding into the room. "All the way from Baffin Bay" he shouts, and at his hearty laugh every one is happy, for no one needs an introduction to Santa, the universal patron saint of happy childhood. He is a wonderful Santa too, for he can do all sorts of marvelous sleight of hand tricks, even to extracting the usual guinea pig from the small boy's pocket. But what is Santa without a pack? And here are piles and piles of goodies and presents to be distributed. Every little girl has a doll; the babies rattles and celluloid animals; the boys, balls and games; the young ladies, scarfs and utility bags; the women; black sateen bags filled with towel, handkerchief, sewing material, soap and beads; the men, neckties, pencils, pads and handkerchiefs Everyone has an orange and a cake of chocolate and each child a giant stick of candy. Then the harmonicas are tried and the horns blown and the rattles rattled, and all is joyous confusion. In the midst of it Gretchen and Elsa are putting their baby dolls to bed and little Sven is cautiously trying his ball and Pietro and Angelo are playing lotto.

Where there had been solemn faces there are now smiles; where there had been silence, there was now merriment—all because of the good-will collected and organized by the General Committee on Immigrant Aid for the benefit of the "strangers within our gates."

This year Miss Christine Wilson of the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian church was chairman of the Committee. Charles Carrol and Mrs. de Reviera headed the Welfare Workers. Large contributions of toys were sent by the National Catholic Welfare Association, the Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A. made scarfs for girls their own age, and helped in filling the bags, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union provided the black sateen bags, the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians and the Episcopalians contributed toys and money generously, so did the Jewish societies. The Steamship Companies sent substantial checks. Greatest help of all was Commissioner Henry J. Curran, who made things easy for the committee on arrangements and who, with Mrs. Curran, was an interested participant in the celebration. And so there was Christmas on Ellis Island.

Do you want to share in it next year? Look over the following list and decide what part you will have in extending the good-will of America to the "strangers within our gates:"

Dressed dolls, eight or ten inches in height.

Celluloid dolls and animals for the hospital.

Toys and games—especially for boys.

Dominos, checkers, lotto, etc.

Picture books for children.

Wash clothes.

Strings of beads.

Fitted cretonne sewing bags for young girls too large for dolls.

Pencils, pads and paper.

Handkerchiefs for men, women and children.

Neckties.

Gifts of money for supplies of which there is a shortage will be very welcome. Information as to when and where to send supplies will be sent out by each organization in the General Committee.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

Newspapers Give Publicity

Seventy-six hundred and seven newspapers of the United States, out of a total of 13,378, are now Newspaper Association Members of the National Highways Association. The members receive from the association road news every week The majority of these papers publish part or all this news every week.

Why?

Only because progressive papers, realizing the intense interest taken by everyone everywhere, in roads, desire to serve their readers with the sort of information and news stories they want to read.

That more than half the papers of this great country are so interested in highways, highway building, highway maintenance, and highway use, is a sufficient indication of the importance of the subject to the body politic. On roads depend, in an increasing degree every year, our transportation. It is not so long ago that the railroads represented the largest industry in the United States. Recently the automobile industry passed the railroads in size; it is now the country's largest industry (exclusive of farming). But the automobile industry in turn is destined soon to be passed by road building, which will be the greatest single industry in this Nation.

No Mystery About It

The term "superpower" seems to confuse many people as to meaning Superpower is nothing new, nor is it anything mysterious. It is simply a term that has been applied to the long-distance transmission of electric energy through the connection of power facilities in adjoining communities or adjoining states. In other words, by the solution of problems which were involved in the transmission of electricity over long distances it has been possible for power plants in various sections of the country so to connect their transmission lines that the output from one state can be drawn upon by the lines in another state when necessity requires, either through a breakdown in local facilities or by demand for unusual amounts of power to meet unexpected emergencies.

Thus by coupling up the power plant facilities of various sections so that energy developed at one point can be used at another point, reservoirs of power have been created by utilities thus utilizing to the fullest degree existing power facilities of he country.

Such power connections virtually eliminate the possibility of power shortage in any community due to temporary breakdown of equipment or damage caused by floods, fires or other disasters. Superpower is simply an enlargement of service such as the modern utility is constantly striving to render.

Cement Industry Aids Michigan

Scattered through the state in a dozen different places are the plants of an industry that has taken a big part in the development of Michigan. It has made possible the building of hundreds of miles of smooth highways stretching out into regions once isolated. It has been a vital facter in the construction of homes, factories, office buildings, bridges, sewers, tunnels—it is an essential in almost every branch of building construction. It yielded a product in 1923 valued at more than $12,000,000. Without this product, industrial expansion would be hampered to an alarming extent.

Yet, the story of this industry, of the great part it took and is taking in the growth of the state, is little known, even to natives of Michigan It doesn't figure in the average conversation on the street. The school boy doesn't rattle off its name when reciting about the industrial expansion of his state.

The industry in question is cement manufacturing, and there is a large probability that more will be known about it in these regions next spring, for cement manufacturers will be well represented at the Michigan Industrial Exposition, to be held in Convention Hall, Detroit, May 3 to 17.

The state of Michigan, in the midst of a huge road building project, has entered the ranks of the cement producers. It has taken over the plant of the Michigan Portland Cement Company, near Chelsea, and from this plant it expects to turn out 800,000 barrels for the 1924 road building operations, which call for a total of 2,000,000 barrels.

The Peerless Portland Cement Company, with a 1,600 barrel per day output at its plant in Union City is undertaking a $3,700,000 expansion project, having purchased a 14-acre site in Detroit on River Rouge, where it is expected that 6,000,000 sacks will be turned out yearly.

Another enlargement of cement production facilities has taken place at Port Huron. Here the new Egyptian Portland Cement Company, with original mills at Fenton, has put up a plant. The Aetna Company has completed a plant at Essexville in the Saginaw Bay region.

Henry Ford has been quick to realize the value of having cement production close at hand. It is said he is building a plant on River Rouge, where new processes of manufacture will be used.

The Alpha Portland Cement Company, a $17,800,000 organization with seven different plants, has one of its branches at Bellevue. In Lenawee county is Cement City, so named because of the Peninsular Portland Cement Company. Other firms which help to give Michigan its place among the heavy cement manufacturing states are: The National Portland Cement Company Mt. Pleasant, capital, $2,000,000; capacity, 1,800 barrels per day; Newaygo Portland Cement Company, Newaygo, capital, $945,000, capacity 2,500 barrels; and the Wolverine Portland Cement Company, plants at Quincy and Coldwater, capital, $1,000,000, capacity, 2,400 barrels.

Shade Trees Injured by Storm

The extensive injury and destruction of trees of all kinds during the recent storm has brought many inquiries to the United States department of agriculture regarding the proper methods to be followed in repairing the damage done. The following suggestions are made by the department.

The first thing that should be done is to remove such large broken branches as are now, or may become a menace to life and property this is usually done by cutting at the point where broken. Attention should then be given to inquiries on the main trunk. If limbs have been split, or partially split, from the main trunk, all splintered wood about the wound should be removed with a sharp gouge and mallet, if not so situated that it can be sawed off. The scar should be smoothed in the manner indicated in Farmers' Bulletin 1178, Tree Surgery, and treated as an open cavity, or as a large surface wound as the case may necessitate.

Attention should next be given to repairing the injuries on the larger branches in a similiar manner, and last of all to the smaller branches. Sometimes when a limb is broken away the tree is so weakened at the point of breakage that it may again break in a severe wind, and to obviate this the top must be pruned back more or less severely. In case of split crotches, the advice given in Farmers' Bulletin 1178 should be followed regarding the general treatment, including bolting through and above the crack.

In cases of estates where a great amount of injury has occurred, and only a comparatively small force is available for repairing the damage, the final cutting of long stubs can be conveniently left for a time, but wounds or breaks on the main trunk or close to it, should be attended to promptly, in any case before warm weather arrives.

It is not necessary to fill cavities. It is better in most cases to leave them open. All final cuts should be immediately covered with some good antiseptic and waterproof paint. It will not be necessary to specially treat the ends of long stubs that are to be removed close to the trunk later in the season.

In no part of repair work should climbing spurs be used on a tree. Spur marks cause injuries through which it is possible for disease and decay germs to enter and cause damage, in some cases more severe than would have developed from the original simple break. For details of treatment of all scars and wounds send for a copy of Farmers Bulletin 1178, which can be obtained from the Office of Publications, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Remember that prevention is better that cure. The open wound of today becomes the decayed spot of next year and the deep rotten cavity of 10 years from now. It is better to spend a few days or dollars in careful repair work than hundreds of dollars for extensive tree surgery in 1930.

Michigan Housewives Have Own Building

Michigan housewives took over a building destined to be more distinctly their own than any other structure in the state when the beautiful new half million dollar Michigan Agricultural College home economics building was formally opened on February 5, during the annual Farmers week at the college.

Hundreds of women from all sections of the state attended the opening ceromonies and viewed with approval the ultra modern facilities which have been provided for future teaching and experimental work in home economics fields at the state college.

Everything from model living apartments and children's nurseries to laboratories for experimentation and teaching in correct diets and nutrition is included in the new building. The structure is literally the "last word" in home economics buildings and proved a revelation to those who inspected it for the first time.

The parlors of this building also served as headquarters for the annual Housewives Congress held in connection with the Farmers Week, the women in attendance having their own program of meetings and their own home economics exhibits.

Telephones Indicate Growth of Country

The growth of this country and general industrial activity is shown by the continued demand for the service furnished by electric light, power, gas and telephone companies A specific illustration is the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and associated companies. 1923 was the record breaking year for the system, when it expended over $240,000,000 to enlarge and improve its service.

The 1924 program for the system will require about $270,000,000 for plant additions. These expenditures will be approximately $45,000,000 for land and building, $95,000,000 for central office switchboards and equipment, $35,000,000 for telephones and other equipment on subscribers' premises, and $90,000,000 for outside plant facilities.

These enormous expenditures are to take care of new business and will be distributed over every section of the country in line with the uniform policy adopted by the Bell system. It is expected there will be an increase of fifteen per cent in Bell telephones over 1923.

Weather Fails To Stop Farm Crowds

Adverse weather conditions and snow blocked roads failed to prevent thousands of Michigan farmers from gathering at East Lansing from Feb. 4 to 8 for the annual Farmers Week and Housewives Congress at the Michigan Agricultural College.

The attendance figure was placed somewhat below the record for similar conferences at the college, but exceeded expectations of the committee in charge in view of the storms which swept the state early in the week.

Lucien D. Walworth

Executor of the last will and testament, with full power of sale, of the estate of Henry S. Walworth, Deceased

Registration at the meetings of more than 30 state agricultural associations and groups held during the week equaled the average of previous years and in many cases ran ahead of the best former ranks. The Michigan State Farm Bureau and the Michigan Improved Livestock Breeders and Feeders Association in particular drew hundreds to their conferences.

One group especially noticeable during the week's event was the delegation of more than 500 boys and girls who judged in the various classes open to students in Smith Hughes vocational work in high schools of the state.

Interest in the extensive agricultural exhibits on display in different M. A. C. buildings during the week was general. Farmers found abundant material for entertainment and information in these exhibits and evidenced a desire to study out messages carried in the different displays.

Michigan's rural folk were gathered to learn the latest developments in scientific agricultural methods and practices and they took intelligent advantage of the opportunities offered in the Farmers Week features.

River Rouge Methodist Minister Uncovers Dive

It has been some years since we have heard of a real sure-enough Methodist minister who cared to mix in the turmoils of the detective business for the good of the Kingdom and so of course we are surprised but pleased to know there is a man in Michigan who has the sand and nerve to lay aside his pastorial dignity long enough to do the work which some delinquent or corrupt officials fail to do. We are copying the following little write-up from the River Rouge Herald of Detroitsurburbs, Boyd's paper, and it will serve to show what the people of the church are up against and what they will have to perform more or less if they wish a morally clean state!

'Reverend Marshall W. Hoyt, pastor of the Methodist church, laid aside his ministerial garb and reverential air yesterday and went slumming. What he saw made him fairly gasp. It also resulted in a raid, last night, on what is alleged to be a disorderly house of ill fame and blind pig, as well.

Hearsay had it that the place at 10,000 West Jefferson avenue was a flagrant flouter of the prohibition law, as well as a house of ill fame. In the interests of a cleaner River Rouge, Rev. Hoyt decided to see for himself. Pulling his hat rakishly over one eye, and assuming an air of unconcern the minister entered the place and sat at an eating table. He ordered coffee and rolls. The waiter, in an undertone, asked the reverend gentleman if "he wanted a girl."

"Sure, we have all you want," replied the waiter.

"Never mind the girls, I want a pint of whiskey," the minister demanded.

"You can have the whiskey, but you must take one of the girls, too."

Thereupon, Reverend Hoyt hastily departed. He imparted what he had seen and heard to Ralph B. Clark, county prosecuting attorney. A search warrant was secured, and late last night, a raiding party, consisting of Chief Brown, several local officers and prosecuting Attorney Clark swooped down on the alleged den of licentiousness. Reverend Hoyt accompanied the officers.

A small quanity of beer and whiskey was seized, together with gambling paraphanalia, a slot machine, tables and a bed.

The proprietor, Max Dorez, 27, of 5246 Beaubien street, was arrested, together with Miss Frances LeDuc, 25, of High street, Detroit and Joe Woods, 29, also of Detroit.

When they learned that the unwilling customer, and the cause of the raid, was Reverend Hoyt they were struck that they could be so easily deluded. As they were loaded into the patrol wagon they directed a bombardment of vile epithets in the direction of the aggressive minister.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 25th day of October 1921 executed by Harvey Kelley and Bessie Kelley, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 29th day of October, 1921 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in liber 163 of mortgages on page 494; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagor to pay the interest and portions of the principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the options contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Seven Thousand, Nine Hundred Seventy Seven and seventeen hundredths ($7977.17) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute; and no suit or proceedings at law or equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof. A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Woodrow Wilson's final exit from the world's stage at a time when the political parties are preparing for another great battle is not expected to have any marked effect on the presidential campaign. If he had lived through the summer his influence would have been felt at the Democratic National Convention, probably in support of McAdoo, his son in-law. His death, though, has been the signal for the renewal of effort by various peace organizations to sell the League of Nations to the country.

Unfortunately for them the country just now is more interested in matters closer to its home and pocket book than in international affairs. Most of the people seem willing to leave the conducting of foreign relations to Mr. Hughes (with the advice and consent of the Senate) and to focus their attention on the moves in Congress for tax reduction and the Government's effort to get at the bottom however deep that may be—of the great oil lease scandal.

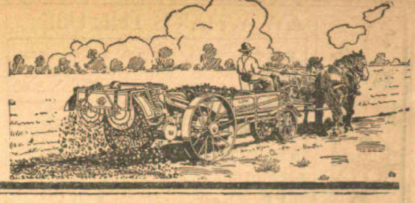
Investigation of the Fall Denby oil leases has led to a veritable deluge or oratory on Capital Hill. Mostly it is words, words, words and largely for political effect at that. Upon occasion there is a bright spot. For instance, Senator Tom Heflin, of Alabama, an old time bombastic declaimer, suggested that G. O. P. stood for the "Grand Oil Party". But that was before Ed Doheny announced that all his high priced assistants were not Republicans and that he had had at least three members of the Wilson Cabinet on his pay roll.

No national conference in Washington on Domestic problems is complete without Herbert Hoover to do the organizing and pull the necessary wires. When the president called his conference here to discuss the distressed agriculture and banking situation in the northwestern states, the Secretary of Commerce was on hand and busy, though it would appear to the casual observer that the matter might have been handled very well by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Great faith is placed in Hoover's organizing ability. It is his job to get the conferences to adopt the proper resolutions and take the action which the Administration desires. And he always does the job and does it well.

Edith Bolling Galt Wilson, widow of the Ex President, expects to continue her residence in Washington, but has notdecided whether or not she will occupy the S street mansion where her husband died. Mrs. Wilson is part owner of one of the capital's largest jewelry stores, formerly operated by her first husband. She is said to be worth half a million dollars in her own right.

It is reported from Florida that Attorney General Daughtery has started work on his promised biography of Warren Harding. The book may be ready for press in the autumn.

'Transportation is rails plus cars, rivers plus boats, highways plus motors. Cars, boats and motors are helpless without their highways It is because we have more cars than roads, more vehicles than places to use them, and because we need, must have, more highways, good highways, national highways, and good roads everywhere, that 7,607 newspapers have enrolled themselves in a campaign of highway education which will inevitably result in "a paved United States in our day."



THREE WISE MEN SAVING PENNIES

FRED PERRY, HENRY CROLL JR., AND HARRY KNOWLTON PLUG STATE LEAKS

(By Ed A. Nowack)

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 14—What was done by "the three wise men who came out of the east" may be found through reference in the bible in the second chapter of St. Matthew.

And what was done by the three wise men who came out of the north can be found spread upon the records of the state of Michigan, an incorporated commonwealth, with an assessed valuation of nearly six billions of dollars.

How three men labored to save for Michigan in just one year's time the great sum of $286,306, by catching the discounted pennies, nickels and dimes from state purchases, is a story of itself. Plugging up the little leaks in state expenditures always has paid and always will. The eavestroughs of Michigan's public treasury no longer drip with discounts lost through carelessness and inattention; her waste paper baskets no longer overflow with the red ink debits that announced the loss of discounts receivable.

The Three Wise Men

The "three wise men" of modern times are Fred B. Perry, Henry Croll Jr., and Harry Knowlton. Originally they came from Vassar, Beaverton and Pewamo respectively. In their order they hold these jobs: secretary to the state administrative board; budget director; traffic manager.

This trio came in for a bit of commendation coincident to the publication of their annual report showing what and how they had saved for Michigan nearly $300,000 in 12 months time.

Cash discounts taken by the accounting and purchasing division of the state administrative board with which these men are connected showed for the calendar year, Jan. 1—Dec. 31, 1923, a total saving of $177,546.77. Activities of the traffic department for that period showed a saving of $108,760.10, a total saving of $286,306.87.

Saving Exceeds Operating Cost

This saving was made with an organization for whose operation the legislature had appropriated $227,700 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924. The saving effected by the three men in one year is greater by $58,606.87 than the cost of conducting the administrative department.

In contrast to this record is the record tucked away here under date of Dec. 29, 1920, when the old fashioned purchasing department reported a total saving for that year of state discounts of only $10,050.57 on purchases amounting to $3,491,730.64.

Why the constantly increasing saving is possible is strikingly illustrated in the pert statement of Henry Ford who says centralized buying, centralized accounting and proper traffic directions are business principles to which Michigan should always cling. Mr. Ford says, further, that what is good for private corporations in that direction is good also for a public corporation such as the state of Michigan.

With the creation of the present system there disappeared the old method of promiscuous buying and haphazard payment and the utter inattention to how state purchased goods were to be shipped.

Haphazard Buying Halted

Michigan's 21 institutions had 21 methods of buying, with 21 methods of paying for purchases and 21 methods for having purchases shipped. That meant small purchases, indifferent buying, high prices.

Today these 21 institutions requisition the state administrative board when supplies are needed. These requisitions now come at a time when similar request are made. That insures quantity buying and lowest prices. If the budget director deems the requests necessary, and if there are sufficient funds to the institution's credit, the request is O. K'd., and sent to one of the three buyers, trained in specific lines. Quotations are asked and, before the successful bidder receives his order, it has gone through the traffic department to be routed that it may take the lowest freight rates. These directions are noted on the order and MUST be complied with or else the shipper pays the excess freight charges. Vendors and institutions alike are kept informed as to the progress of each shipment and to avoid delay in payment of invoice, thereby insuring advantage of all cash discounts.

Under the centralized system o buying and accounting and traffic regulations, Michigan taxpayers ha seen the passing of the old time salesman who would get his fat order for state business to the tune of a wel made cigar and a beautifully arrange dinner party.

Railroads and telegraph companies too, respect the new era. Severa long freight haul charges were fough out on their merits and the state won Because a telegraph company wa negligent in delivering a bid on stat material by wire, it had to make u to the sender of the message the dif ference in the low bids which wa but $42.84. Its negligence cost th low bidder an order.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Deckerville—The Flanders Co. canning plant, Deckerville's only manufacturing industry, was destroyed by fire recently with a loss of $50,000, fully covered by insurance.

Albion—The resignation of Dr. Samuel Dickie as a member of the board of trustees of Albion College has been accepted by the board at a meeting held at Detroit recently.

Ann Arbor—H. J. Andrews, of the forestry department of Iowa State college, Ames, Ia., will take charge of the land economic survey of Michigan under the department of conservation next spring, it has been learned here.

Pontiac—Thomas B. McNulty, 76 years old, is ill at his home in Milford as the result of a broken hip caused by a fall on an icy pavement. He claims that this is the first time in his life that he was ever attended by a physician.

Lansing—Dr. James T. Legear 66 years old, former pastor of the Mt. Hope Methodist Church, died suddenly at his home here. He was the founder of the Lansing Ministerial Association, and formerly held pastorates in Kalamazoo and Mansfield.

Port Huron—At a session of the forty-fifth convention of the Michigan Engineering society, held here, J. M. Bennett, Detroit, forester of the Wayne county road commission, declared Michigan ranked second among the states in the planting of trees and shrubs along highways.

Grand Rapids—Reversing its former position, the city commission has approved the plans of the State Highway Department providing for a fixed bridge across Grand River at the bridge road ferry in Ottawa County, thus permitting the eventual construction of two paved roads between Grand Rapids and Grand Haven. The bridge, to be built this year, will cost $125,000.

Detroit—A report filed with the auditor general at Lansing shows that the State will collect $936,653 in inheritance tax from the estate of John F. Dodge, Detroit automobile manufacturer. The collection, which is the largest in the history of the State, will go into the primary school fund. The personal holdings are listed at $32,312,442. The value of real property is comparatively small.

Lansing—The state advisory board has called a halt on the alleged practice of local officials participating in state highway construction bids. On motion of Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers, it was decided to draft and adopt a resolution prohibiting county officials from being parties to bids in their own counties, or state officials from being connected with any bid for state construction.

Lansing—The purchase of 10,000 large iron signs, for use on state trunk highways has been authorized by the state advisory board. It is the plan of the highway department to post direction signs at corners, huge circular warning signs at railway crossing and mileage signs, designating the distances to important points on the route, at intervals. The signs will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

Ann Arbor—The state highway department and the University of Michigan are to collaborate to determine the best types of surface for state trunk lines. The administrative board at the request of Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers, has set aside $2,000 for a highway experimental fund. Various materials, Rogers said, will be tested in the university laboratories for maintenance, wearing qualities and tractability.

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids has been assured of a permanent art gallery as a result of the approval by the directors of the Grand Rapids Art Association of plans for the erection of a fireproof addition to its building to provide suitable galleries. The association's permanent collection will be housed in a gallery 30 by 50 feet; a central gallery, 25 by 44 feet, will permit monthly exhibitions and a smaller gallery will accommodate etchings and prints.

Monroe—According to word received here by the county road commission, W. W. Lavers, Dearborn, a district state highway engineer, has been placed in charge of the counties of Wayne, Macomb, Oakland and Monroe. Monroe county heretofore was under charge of District State Highway Engineer E. G. Willemin, of Ann Arbor, who now will oversee work on state trunk line roads in Lenawee, Hillsdale, Jackson and Washtenaw counties.

East Lansing—Professor W. G. Putnam, extension specialist, will become director of the Michigan Agricultural college experiment station in the upper peninsula, April 1, it was announced at the agricultural college here. The position of director was created in a reorganization of the station started when [illegible]. L. McMillan, former superintendent of the station resigned. Putnam will take active charge of experimental research work intended to develop the agricultural resources of all that part of Michigan.

Grand Rapids—Henry A. Johnson and Bert Ramsdell, road commissioners, have conferred with the secretary of state to determine whether Kent County is being given its share of the revenue from automobile licenses sold Kent automobile owners in other counties. It is estimated that more than $5,000 is this county's share of fees paid license bureaus in other counties by local drivers who visited Ionia, Allegan, Greenville and Hastings to get their licenses rather than stand in line here for several hours.

Petoskey—John R. Davis, 82 years old, president of Petoskey before the city was incorporated, died here last week. Mr. Davis was a Civil War veteran.

Marshall—The board of education has decided to accept the plans and specifications drawn by S. D. Butterworth of Lansing, for the new Isaac Crary school building.

Ann Arbor—Walter K. Scherer, of Ottawa, Ill., had the honor of being president of the largest senior literary class ever to be graduated from the University of Michigan.

Marshall—It is planned to dedicate the new $155,000 Brooks Memorial Episcopal Church here early in April, Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, of Detroit, conducting the services.

Ludington—Purchase of a standard city service truck, carrying a dozen ladders ranging from 12 to 50 feet, at a cost of $3,785, has been authorized by the city commissioners here.

Grand Rapids—At the semi-annual convention of the Episcopal Young Peoples' association, of the diocese of western Michigan, Norman Lilly, of this city, was re-elected president.

Grand Rapids—Drain commissioners from nearly every county in the state registered here for the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Michigan Association of County Drain Commissioners.

Holland—Louis Reeverts, of Holland, has been named managing editor of the Hope College publication, the Anchor. The report showed that the publication for the first time in several years was on a good financial basis.

Kalamazoo—For one hour Dean Sanford, a 14-year-old Kalamazoo Boy Scout, acted as mayor of this city of approximately 60,000 inhabitants, having been so designated at an election. City officials here agreed to abdicate for the hour on the anniversary of the Boy Scout movement in the United States.

Cadillac—Potato grading exhibitions have been held in Cadillac and Manton under the joint auspices of the State Department of Agriculture, M. A. C., the county agricultural agent, County Farm Bureau, Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange, Cadillac Chamber of Commerce and Manton advancement Club.

Lansing—Industrial secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. from all parts of Michigan met here at a conference in Lansing last week. The meeting was under the leadership of Dr. E. H. Foster, of New York, head of the international committee of industrial departments. Plans were made for a state wide co-operation in industrial programs.

Detroit—Acceptors of commissions in the officers' reserve corps, as given out by the war department, includes the following from Michigan: Verne R. Johnson, Hastings, second lieutenant, quartermasters' corps; Glenn W. Britten, Lansing, second lieutenant, quartermasters' corps, and William G. Bantell, Ypsilanti, second lieutenant, signal corps.

Grand Rapids—Falling 60 feet from the fourth floor window, of Friedman-Springs Dry Goods store, to the sidewalk crowded with afternoon shoppers, Philip Weaver, 18 years old, janitor employed by the store, was killed instantly last week. Weaver had stepped from the fourth floor to the ledge to wash the window when he lost his balance and fell.

Constantine—William H. Burger, 68 years old, president of the Constantine Commercial State Bank, was found dead recently by his wife in the yard of his home, having suffered a stroke of apoplexy. Besides being an active farmer he has been a director in the Commercial State Bank since its organization 30 years ago, and for the last 10 years its president.

Ann Arbor—Colonel T. C. Hodson, of London, England, has arrived to prepare for his duties as special lecturer in anthropology in the literary college of the University of Michigan during the second semester. Colonel Hodson was assistant political agent in Mainpur, superintendent of state and is a fellow of the Royal Anthropological institute. He will give three courses during his term here.

Ann Arbor—One hundred and forty-three persons in Michigan have been regents of the university, according to statistics in the decennial alumni catalog, now being distributed to all alumni in the country. The longest period any one person served was 18 years, but Regent Walter H. Sawyer, of Hillsdale, a member of the board at present, has served 17 years and his term does not expire until 1929.

Holland—Raymond Garbrecht was rescued recently from Black Lake by use of a chain made of coats worn by his friends. Mr. Garbrecht went through the ice where the steamer Missouri had traveled a short time before. Unable to reach him, his companions tied their coat sleeves together and made a chain which was thrown to Garbrecht. He was then pulled from the lake, in the meantime clinging to a large cake of ice.

Houghton—Navigation on Lake Superior has been made safer and tonnage through Portage lake has been increased by the improvement of the Keweenaw waterway during the last year, according to the annual report of Major E. H. Marks, of the corps of United States engineers in charge of the Lake Superior district. The improved waterway, serves as a refuge to vessels navigating Lake Superior in stormy weather, making unnecessary the rounding of Keweenaw point which is an extremely dangerous point.

Ann Arbor—The University of Michigan recently have served notice on city officials that it would start suit against the city of Ann Arbor to declare taxes on a piece of property recently purchased by the institution illegal. When the tax rolls were being made out a condemnation suit was being heard against the property holders, it is said. The university seeks to have the taxes returned. Officials of the institution also seek to have the property removed from tax rolls in the future, as it now belongs to the state.

Just Escapes Disasterous Fire

The residence of Frank Doty north east of this village caught fire from the stove sometime between Sunday night and Monday morning last and came periously close to being entirely consumed. Mr. Doty's son, Reed, was sleeping in an adjoining bedroom, the rest of the family being away at the time. A spark from the stove set fire to the rugs on the floor and a hole about 12 feet across was burned allowing the stove to drop into the cellar together with some chairs. The young man did not rouse up for some time owing to the stupifying influence of the smoke, but finally awoke and began to pour water on the blaze. Neighbors were called in and Mr. Doty is to be congratulated upon such a fortunate ending of what might have cost a life and all of his buildings. We understand the loss was covered by insurance in the Farmers' Mutual.

In Olden Times

Looking over some old papers we find many interesting matters. Among this bunch we have the Jackson Patriot of April 8, 1868, published by Carlton & VanAntwerp and as an editorial we note this:

"THE KU KLUX KLAN. WHAT IS IT"

Political secret societies grow out of troubled times. They indicate, generally, a bad state of government—prevalent evils which are not speedily removed in the lawful way. Emperors and Kings are profoundly concerned for the permanence of their dynasties and the safety of their persons when they first learn of secret organizations existing in their capitals. We have heard lately about the Ku Klux Klan. Telegraph has reported it in Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama and Virginia. The name looks like a joke. With much that is comic and melo-dramic, the Ku Klux Klan exhibits the bad features of those political organizations which we condemn. In its midnight parades, its white and black cowls and masks it resembles the fooleries of the "Sons of Malta" but in its tragic business it recalls the "Vigilance Committee" of San Francisco. Lynching murderers and other desperados white and black, who infested Kentucky, Tennessee and other parts of the south, seems to be its principal occupation. Whatever its object, such an organization is in every way to be condemned, as it can only be productive of evil to all concerned."

So we see the K. K. K. is no new idea but we hope its morals have improved since 1868, because from all data we have it appears to have been in exceedingly bad repute with the press at that time.

Denby Is Not Out

Denby has been asked to resign aye the United States Senate has applied the iron shod boot of the state to his latters and insinuated it is time to move yet he moveth not. What would you make out of this? Well, it is likely he knows whereof his strength lies because he still lingers in the cabinet and the Associated Press says President Coolidge will not ask for his resignation. There will be a storm of abuse and indignation no doubt at this proceeding on the part of the Chief Executive. But more evidence must be procured so Coolidge says to convict and he is an ex-judge and ought to know.

When Edwin Denby was appointed to the present responsible position we said he was a swivel chair naval official but indications are he is a business man, as the Teapot Dome imbroglio shows.

When this Government is done with Teapot Dome investigations the people of the country will be just as wise as they are now not any more so. When Secretary Denby retires from the cabinet if he does—he will be a multi-millionaire and after a year or two nobody will ask how he got it. Money makes a "good fellow of many a man who is not entitled to the epigram. We don't wonder men are quite desirous of getting such jobs—as Postum Cereal says there's a reason, and the reason is written in huge S's with cross marks, and Denby is no exception.

A circular sent out by the Postoffice department states that since the days of Benjamin Franklin the system has been held down by miscalculations and mistakes to the extent of costing annually about $1,740,000. This money is not all lost by the taxpayers but it falls likewise upon different firms who are heavy users of the mails. The Government is seeking to culminate this useless waste by establishing a week of bettermailing from Feb. 18 to 25. During this time every mail service employee of the department from the office boy to the Postmaster General will attempt to retrieve the losses caused by mistakes and blunders. This will answer the same as Safety First campaigns on the railroad.

It is said that 100,000,000 tons of coal can be saved each year by electrifying the railroads of the country. This might mean something to the mine owners and a whole lot more to the consumers who are compelled to pay a big price for hard coal for heating purposes and bituminous coal for cooking. There is a time coming when the stove wood supply is bound to be exhausted and this coal saving might come awfully handy in a pinch.

The recent imbroglio at Herrin Illinois is an aftermath of the massacre which took place there not long ago and is certainly a good reminder of what is coming to parts of this country when Unionism gets in its deadly work. Whiskey and Unionism go hand in hand down the thorny paths of life and while one condition is fully as bad as the other, it is presumed the law and order gang will bring about some kind of settled peace and civilization to this wild and woolly mining community. While it is plain the fight to expel "bootlegging" and moonshining was the ground work for the trouble, yet there are elements mixed in which are going to cause a revolution in this country right quick if allowed to predominate. When it is possible for a K. K. K. organization or any other secret order to step in and usurp the government of the land, whether right or wrong, that comes pretty near being despotism and feudalism, and it shouldn't be tolerated one minute. Of course we know there is no law or civil authority at Hell Hole Herrin, but we also know America is in a bad way when any lodge can step in and actually presume to take the state's supremacy away. Watch and Beware!

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 5th day of March, 1920, executed by Joshua Smith and Harriet E. Smith, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body incorporated, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was on the 6th day of March, 1920 recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 16[illegible] of Mortgages on page 124; the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the said mortgagors to pay the interest and certain portions of principal in manner and time provided by said mortgage, which said default has existed for the period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to become due and payable, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable; and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Five Thousand Four Hundred Fourteen and Fifty-six Hundredths (5414 56) Dollars, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 25th day of February, 1924, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, central standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county,) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale with attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, to wit; the west one-half of the southeast quarter of Section 22 in Township 7 south, Range 1 west, and containing eighty acres more or less.

Dated, November 23, 1923.

Talking it Over

Jake asks Bill to Join the Farm Bureau

Bill says:

"Horses gone lame, hens won't lay
Corn's way down, wheat won't pay,
Hogs no better, steers too cheap
Cows quit milkin', expenses a heap.
Oats a fizzle, spuds a joke
Farmers are busted, absolutely broke.
Sheep seem puny, nothing sells,
Guess I'll quit a hundred hells!
Buyin's too high, sellin's too low
Rail rates doubled, got no show.
Money tighter, morals loose
Bound to get us, what's the use?
Sun's not shinin' as it should
Moon ain't lightin' like it could
Air seems heavy, weather's punk
I won't join no more junk.
Costs too much, ain't no good,
Lost more money than I should.
Won't all stick, just get stung
I was one, now I'm done."

Jake says:

"Well now Bill, farmin's slow
Buyin's up, sellin's too low,
Can't pull her up takin' a back seat
Got to go on, stand on our feet
Make some effort, same's Jim who signs
Can't fix her up with a million whines.
Farmer's the goat, may be so
Says it himself, he ought to know.
Got to look up, have some grit
The earth's got a lot, 'an it's here yit.
Can't pay the dues, less 'an three cents a day?
Three old hens can and not half lay.
Smash the black "specks", put up a fight,
It's some job to make things bright.
Sun shines today, rains the next
Keep on a goin', stick to your text.
What goes up must come down
Takes two smiles to kill one frown.
Now put her there, one good shake
So long Bill,
Good bye Jake.

Did You Ever Think

that you might have been living as a British subject but for Poor Richard? And you would be reckoning values in pounds, shillings and pence.

Then Irving Bacheller's great book —

In the Days of Poor Richard

would have cost you about "nine and six" instead of $2.00. Try that on your computing machine.

But then there would have been no such story as "In the Days of Poor Richard." We'd all have been out of luck!

Results of Citizens Caucus

The regular village caucus was held Monday evening with a very small interest and attendance. It seems as if there were no citizens here any more except at tax time when they are noisily in evidence. Meeting called to order and Frank Holcomb appointed chairman. He at once appointed Harold Young clerk and Mesdames Jones and Baker tellers. In all 25 uncertain votes were cast which spoke as follows: Pres., Merton N. Wolcott; clerk, Harrison Livermore; treas., F. W. Payne; assessor, Frank Holcomb trustees, Fred Baker, W. W. Clingerman, Bert Taylor. On motion it was decided to adjourn sine die.

Electric Juice is Coming

Great openings in the electric production of this country is looked for in the future? Inside 20 years we have increased the Kilo-Watt consumption per capita from 60 to 500 and cheapened the rate.

In the next twenty years at this rate almost every household in the land will be using the electric fluid for heating, cooking and power purposes and buying it at a much cheaper rate than wood or coal can be bought now. This land will be threaded with trunk electric lines similar to the railroads from which will radiate other smaller limbs and every farm house and hamlet will be reached at a trifling expense.

North Adams Library Receives More Books

After a request sent in to the publishers of Michigan History magazine at Lansing by Mrs. M. N. Wolcott for books she was pleased to receive the following letter from George N. Fuller who is the secretary and editor:

"Mrs. M. N. Wolcott,
The North Adams Library Ass'n
North Adams, Mich.

My dear Mrs. Wolcott:

At your suggestion we take pleasure in sending a complimentary set of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical Collection, containing all of the volumes which are now available.

Our books are being moved to other quarters and it will be necessary to delay shipment a few days.

With cordial greetings,
Very respectfully yours.
G. N. Fuller."

Otto Crapser Receives Bouquet

In glancing over the last issue of the New York Central Magazine we happened to notice the following letter of commendation which was sent to Otto Crapser city ticket agent in Chicago for these lines. Crapser has been in Chicago many years and is an old railroad man. He is a brother of Orson Crapser of Moscow township and was well known here 35 or 40 years ago having attended school at the "brick bat" also at North Adams:

"We have now settled down somewhat after our return from the convention at Chicago, and it comes to my mind that I have not written you to express our appreciation of your kindly services to our party at Chicago, and also the services rendered us by the New York Central Railroad.

"The trip from and back to Boston worked out as nearly 100 per cent perfect as anything could be expected to do, and we thank you and your company for the courteous service rendered."

The Days Of Auld Lang Syne

At the Methodist church Wednesday evening the Ladies Aid Society gave a real old fashioned entertainment consisting of songs recitations, etc. accompanied by selections on ancient instruments such as a melodeon, accordian etc Old bepowdered dames dressed in hoop skirts hobnobbed with cork screw curled damsels in shaker bonnets, and an air of "Auld Lang Syne" pervaded the assemblage. Considering the state of the weather the attendance was very good and we understand $18.00 net was the result. Good work, keep it up. The spinning wheel and the flax reel were in evidence as accompaniments of the show.

Get Your Commencement Stuff Early

Remember the Advocate has on hand a real nifty lay-out of Commencement Invitations of every description and you are reckless to buy at all until you have seen them. The man from away who wants to sell you this stuff never heard of your names before and he is quite likely to fall down on some of the spelling and make a foozle of it. If we make any foozle we replace them with the correct thing at once free of charge; we pay the shot you don't. Is not this a comfort? It ought to be. Our stuff is manufactured by the Stauder Engraving Co. and J. W. Butler Paper Co., both of Chicago, (strictly reliable firms) and the largest in the middle west which assures completeness, highest class design and strickly up to the minute stock.

RUN-DOWN WEAK, NERVOUS

Lancaster, Pa.—"After I was married I became terribly run-down and was weak and nervous. My sister-in-law told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My husband got me a bottle at once, and it did me so much good that I kept on taking it. I began to feel well and strong again and was able to do my housework up to the time my baby was born—a nice fat little girl in the best of health. I surely am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends when they have troubles like mine, and I am perfectly willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. FRANK H. GRIMM, 533 Locust Street, Lancaster, Pa.

Women should heed such symptoms as pains, backache, nervousness, a run-down condition and irregularity, as they indicate some form of female trouble.

Lansing—Planting of 25,000 trees in central Michigan, next Arbor day is planned by the Lansing Hoo-Hoo club a lumbermen's oranization, through co-operation with school children and the M. A. C. forestry department.

Ludington—Ludington's new $100,000 Masonic temple has been formally opened. The temple is a handsome three-story structure of Bedford stone and pressed brick and is furnished with the most modern of lodge equipment.

Detroit—The 26th anniversary of the sinking of the Maine in Cuban waters, which precipitated the war with Spain, was celebrated by memorial services at the headquarters, department of Michigan, Veterans of Foreign Wars, here last week.

Detroit—A Civil War veteran, 78 years old, obtained naturalization papers and became a citizen last week in Circuit Court here. He is John Thomas Scarrow, Wayne, Mich., who served with Co. C in the 30th Michigan Infantry.

Flint—There will be little danger of an ice shortage in Michigan cities next summer. Ice cuts on lakes in central and northern Michigan exceed that of any previous year by several thousand tons, according to statements issued here.

Whitehall—The first summer resorter has arrived at White Lake, near here. He is William Jarvis, Chicago attorney, who came for a vacation at his summer home. Mr. Jarvis made the trip from Whitehall to his summer home by bob-sleigh Lansing—Following charges that misinformation regarding state expenditures have been given to the public by O. B. Fuller, auditor-general the state administrative board has ordered the publication of a financial statement once a month in the daily papers.

Flint—That Mexico cannot attain normality until the United States intervenes and establishes a protectorate, was the opinion expressed here by the Rev. Joseph Munoc, a Spanish priest, who has lived in Mexico for the past ten years and who is in Flint conducting a mission for Mexican Catholics.

St. Joseph—Mrs. Mary L. Ewald, for 66 years a resident of this city, died at her home last week. She was 80 years old and the daughter of Rev. W. E. and Williamena Grimm, who with a little band of fisherfolk, crossed Lake Michigan in a sailboat from Milwaukee and established the first Baptist church here in 1860.

Lansing—The bovine anti-tuberculosis war that the state began in 1921 will be carried to nine new counties during the remainder of 1924, and will be continued with complete "area" inspections in five counties where the cattle already have been tested once, as well as in Gogebic County, where stall-to-stall inspection has been made twice.

Menominee—The Menominee Sugar Co. last week sent checks aggregating $175,000 to farmers who raised sugar beets for the plant last year. This was in addition to the $6.50 a ton paid at the time the beets were delivered. The total paid the farmers was $9.28 a ton. The Menominee plant cut about 600,000 tons of beets last year.

Battle Creek — Whether Battle Creek will adopt uniform eastern time the year around will be decided by the voters here at the spring election, according to a decision reached by the city commission. The decision followed the reading of a petition signed by 200 persons requesting the commission to adopt the eastern time schedule here.

Fremont—A more satisfactory enforcement of the spraying law was sought at the horticultural school held here recently by the County Farm Bureau and the Michigan Agricultural College. There is said to have been considerable dissatisfaction among apple growers in regard to the lack of attention to diseases in many orchards, resulting in the spreading of the ills.

Ionia—It cost Leonard P. Gemuend of this city, the sum of 1,060,000,000,000 marks to furnish information to the interior department through the bureau of pensions concerning the date of his birth. Gemuend recently filed a claim for a pension based on the fact that he had attained the age of 68 years and had served in Company I, Thirty-fourth Michigan infantry, during the Spanish-American war. He declared he was born March 8, 1854.

Lansing—A new bureau of the State Department of Health whose relationship to men sentenced to State penal institutions will be much the same as the relationship of the psychopathic clinic and probation department of Recorder's Court to prisoners convicted in Detroit, is in the process of formation. It will be the function of this bureau to determine whether prisoners shall be sent to the hardened criminal class at Marquette to the State Prison at Jackson, or to the reformatory and proposed school at Ionia.

Lansing—The State Public Utilities Commission has been notified that the Interstate Commerce Commission has ruled that the Federal Transportation Act does not empower it to rule on train service in interstate traffic between Wisconsin and Michigan in the Upper Peninsula. The Wisconsin and Michigan commissions asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to issue an order relative to service across the boundary, and the Federal commission came back with the reply that the state commissions have jurisdiction.

Flint—Mrs. R. C. Durant, mother of W. C. Durant, the automobile manufacturer, died here recently at the age of 91 years. She was a daughter of the late Henry H. Crapo, former Governor of Michigan.

Ecorse—While walking along the tracks watching a group of boys engaged in a snowball fight, John O'Dell, 40 years old, 4427 Third street, Ecorse, was instantly killed when struck by a passenger train on the Michigan Central tracks here.

Ionia—The Stevens Thomson Mason chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution celebrated its fiftieth anniversary recently, with Mrs. Victor L. Seydel, of Grand Rapids, grand regent, as the guest of honor and speaker.

Azalia—Harold B. Noble, a teacher in the public schools at South Rockwood, who was killed by a New York Central passenger train at Monroe, while attempting to cross the tracks in an automobile, was buried from his home here last week.

Iron Mountain—The proposal of the village of Kingsford adjoining the Ford plant here, to build a combined grade, junior and senior high school at a cost of $225,000, has met with an offer from Henry Ford to donate nine acres of his land for the school site.

Grand Rapids—The annual meeting of the Michigan League of Home Dailies was held here recently. Three speakers from Chicago addressed the convention, John Alexander, on "Merchandising," R. B. Harbison, in "The News Print Outlook," and B. A. Adams on "Composition."

East Lansing—At the annual meeting of the Michigan Association of Nurserymen, held at the State Agricultural college, East Lansing, B. J. Manahan, of Detroit, was elected association president. Other officers are: Vice president, William Ilgenfritz, Monroe, secretary-treasurer, C. A. Krill, Kalamazoo.

Lansing—The state administrative board referred to a committee claims from counties for back counties on noxious animals and birds amounting ot about $99,000. The claims date back as far as 1919, and there is no appropriation for their payment. The board probably will make a definite ruling regarding them.

Attica—Attica's town hall and the grain elevator were destroyed recently by a $14,000 fire. The damage to the elevator was $12,000, of which $4,000 was covered by insurance. The damage to the town hall was $2,000, some of which will be reduced by insurance. Attica, with a 400 population, has no fire apparatus.

Grand Rapids—James P. Carmody, pioneer Grand Rapids township resident, whose work with the Michigan Agricultural college in development of dairy products made him prominent in agricultural circles, died here recently. In his work with the college he aided materially in obtaining information and in the fixing of standards.

Grand Rapids—Frank Vansteenberg, 64 years old, for 37 years a member of the fire department here in which he rose to the rank of captain, died recently of apoplexy. He won wide acquaintanceship with the children keeping at his engine house an apparently inexhaustible supply of hoops and kites which he distributed to the youngsters.

Hartford—The new Methodist Episcopal church, in this village was recently dedicated with special services in charge of Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, of Detroit. Rev. J. W. Willits, of Niles, district superintendent, and Rev. Clark Wheeler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, of St. Joseph, taking part in the ceremonies.

Battle Creek—Although yeggs blew three safes in the heart of the village of Bellevue, 14 miles north of here, recently, the sleep of the residents was undisturbed and the robberies were not discovered until next morning. So much nitroglycerine was used in blowing the safes in the Ford garage and the Bellevue co-operative elevator that sheriff's officers had difficulty in finding pieces of the safes.

Ann Arbor—Professor Edward R. Turner, of the history department of the University of Michigan, has accepted a call to teach at Yale university next year, it was learned here. Professor Turner, who has been connected with the history department here since 1911, is considered an authority in the field of English and European history and has written numerous articles and textbooks on the subject.

Lawton—Grape growers of Van Buren county are looking forward to a heavy crop in 1924 to offset the comparatively light crop of the 1923 season. Growers say they can expect but one heavy crop in two years, the alternating season being light in production. The sub-zero weather experienced in January has not damaged the prospects in any way, they say, and except for heavy frosts late in the spring, or early in the fall, there is little to be feared from cold.

Detroit—Although Michigan is not among the leading producers of lime in the United States, its gain in production is so rapid that it is passing its nearer rivals and by continuing its pace will soon catch its leaders. The geological survey figures for 1923, just published, show that the state's 1923 production of lime was 80,800 tons, which was a gain of 27,165 tons for the year or at the rate of 51 per cent increase. No other state approached this percentage of gain, Indiana with 32 per cent, being the next in order.

Northfield—Death ended one of the longest pastorates on record in Michigan, when Rev. Fr. Louis Philip Goldrick, who would have completed 35 years at the head of St. Patrick's church here, had he lived until March 28, passed away at St. Joseph's sanitarium at Ann Arbor recently of pneumonia. Rev. Goldrick, who was a classmate of Right Rev. E. D. Kelly, bishop of the Grand Rapids diocese, at Assumption college, Sandwich, Ont., was one of the best known clerics in the Detroit diocese, with friends all over southeast Michigan.

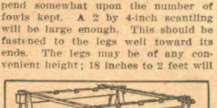
ROOSTS CONVENIENT IN CLEANING HOUSE

For convenience in cleaning a chicken house, the movable roost shown herewith will commend itself to farmers who have only a small number of fowls in their flocks, says the Orange Judd Farmer. The chief advantage is that it can be taken apart quickly and thoroughly cleaned. For control of mites and lice this is a very important feature.

It is made by using two carpenter's horses of any suitable length. On the upper sides of the crosspieces notches are made for the roosts proper to rest in. These roosts of 2-inch material should fit rather snugly in place and preferably be pinned to prevent tilting when the fowls are upon them. The dimensions of the crosspieces will depend somewhat upon the number of fowls kept. A 2 by 4-inch scantling will be large enough. This should be fastened to the legs well toward its ends. The legs may be of any convenient height; 18 inches to 2 feet will be high enough for fowls of the heavy breeds such as Cochin, Brahma and Langshan, but a foot or so higher for the lighter varieties such as Leghorns, Andalusian and Minorca.



Easily Moved Chicken Roost.

These roosts may be placed anywhere in the poultry house, preferably not in contact with the walls. They will need to be drenched with kerosene at regular intervals to get rid of mites, but probably not as often as if they were attached to the walls, because the mites will not have as good opportunities to hide. If it is not considered desirable to use oil, boiling water will do as well. Where water is used, this style of roost is specially advantageous, because the drenching can be done out of doors on a fine day and the wood be dry in an hour or so. Hot water cannot be used in the house, because it will not evaporate readily enough.

Crushed Oystershell and Lime Are of Importance

Do your hens frequently lay soft-shelled eggs, though plentifully supplied with crushed oystershell? If so it is perhaps due to an over-fat condition of the fowls. This is especially true when hens are fed almost exclusively on grains. Repeated experiments prove that all the lime needed for the forming of eggshells is not to be found in oystershells; therefore, the feed must provide a part of the necessary lime.

While grains contain much starch, they are deficient in lime. Hence, when the hens receive much grain and little feed containing mineral matter, they receive more starch than they can utilize because of the shortage of mineral matter in their systems. Clover and alfalfa are both rich in mineral matter, so the feeding of these legumes will help much to offset the starchiness of the grains.

Excessive fat not only retards laying but causes various sorts of freak eggs. If the eggs from an over-fat hen are used for incubation, the chicks will lack vitality and are often deformed.

Limited Range for Hens During Severe Weather

Even the farm hen should have her free range limited in cold weather. The object of range is to get the natural food for the chickens, in the shape of live meat, a variety of seeds, etc., and also the exercise of picking them up. With the ground frozen hard, and the wind nearly blowing a bird off her feet, range is more harm than good. The hens that stay in a well-ventilated, light hen house, and scratch in dry litter, are better off than the free-range birds.

Mature Ganders Usually Produce Best Goslings

Geese will lay during the first year and the eggs may hatch, but the goslings are not as vigorous as those produced by more mature breeding stock. Ganders usually produce the best results when from three to five years old. The yearling ganders sometimes fail to prove satisfactory as breeders. Geese are often held as breeders for nine or ten years and the ganders are often good for six or seven years.

Increase Egg Production by Supplying Green Feed

In a report from the Washington station an account is given of an experiment in which a pen of pullets, which had been receiving ordinary care, were shut in a house, due to the extreme cold winter weather, and were fed on green feed. This treatment was found to increase the egg production, the egg yield being 30 per cent greater the first 17 days of housing than it was the last 17 days of the previous month.

Green Feed for Breeders.

Feed the breeding birds some sort of green stuff like mangels, cabbage or sprouted oats daily. See that they have plenty of exercise in scratching for their food and give them a run out on the ground.

Have Incubator on Level.

Be sure the incubator stands level before you put in the eggs. Start the light and ascertain if the heat holds uniformly at the point desired. When you are sure it is running well, put in the eggs.

States Seek Data on Amount of Game Killed

Minnesota and New York were pioneer states in inaugurating systems to ascertain the amount of game killed each year. Today a score or more of the state game departments are striving to collect this important data. The compilation of such data gives a very good idea of game conditions in the different states. By reading the tabulated results from the census of game killed you can also arrive at a pretty accurate conclusion as to the efficiency of the game departments of these states in years gone by.

From a Denver dispatch we learn that it is estimated that 600 deer were killed in Colorado last year. In the same paper comes a report from New Jersey that 860 Virginia deer were killed in that state the past season. When you compare the areas of Colorado and New Jersey, when you think of the difference in density of population and also consider the amount of territory in each suitable for deer, you cannot help but realize that Colorado has been negligent in the past in the care of her game.

His Off Day

Bobby was of an inquiring turn of mind, but mother usually managed to answer his questions.

"Why does daddy go to town every day?" he asked on one occasion.

"To work, so that you and I can have good dinners," mother replied promptly.

Next day, as Bobby sat down to dinner, he looked disparagingly at the fare provided, then turned an accusing eye on father.

"You didn't do much today, did you?" he remarked.—London Answers.

Steer Requires More Grain

In a series of studies made by the United States Department of Agriculture, it has been ascertained that it takes about six pounds of grain and six pounds of hay to produce one pound of beef. About five and a half pounds of corn will produce a pound of live pork.

Exposition Combs State For Exhibits

The Michigan Industrial Exposition which is to open its doors May 3rd in Detroit is expected to be the largest industrial show in the world in 1924.

The show is to be essentially an all Michigan show with Detroit and her industries, especially the automobile industry, to be relegated to second place.

Investigators for the Exposition are seeking in every town throughout the State for the interesting and the educational in connection with factory production.

Michigan industries are marvelously diversified and there is scarcely a human need that is not supplied by some manufacturer in some position of the State.

The Exposition has already received the endorsement of President Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, Senator James E. Couzens and numerous other national officials as well as the Governments of thirty seven states and nineteen foreign nations through their ambassadors.

To Continue Swine Ton Litter Contest

Michigan swine breeders will hold another "ton litter" contest during the coming season, according to announcement made here this week by Vernon A. Freeman, leader of the state ton litter club and extension specialist in animal husbandry at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Success of a similar contest held last year, which was won by a litter which reached a total of 2,840 pounds at end of its allotted 180 days, led to the decision to repeat the event. Great educational and demonstrational value accompanies the contest, it is said, breeders learn many ways of improving the handling and feeding of the swine. Most of the men who entered the contest a year ago plan to enroll again, according to reports.

"Any Michigan farmer is eligible to enroll in this contest says Mr. Freeman. It costs nothing to get in and nothing to get out. Farmers should enroll at once, though, as they are likely to be too late if they wait until the pigs are farrowed. The latest date at which a person can enroll is April 1, and he must be enrolled in time so that any litter he may wish to enter can be marked and reported within seven days of birth.

"In counties where there is no agricultural agent, it will be necessary for several breeders to get together and form some sort of organization to cooperate with the state leader of the ton litter club. At all events, Michigan swine breeders should send in their names at once and enroll."

Various cash prizes and medals go to the litters, which reach the required ton of weight within the 180 days allowed after birth.

Weekly Papers Unite For Better Service

One hundred editors and publishers of leading Michigan weekly newspapers gathered at the Michigan Agricultural College recently for the annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association an organization which has worked for the better interests of the state's rural press for nearly a half century.

At the close of a three day conference devoted to discussion of the business and editorial ends of newspaper making and to enjoyable social functions, the association elected the following officers for the coming year: Len W. Feighner, Nashville News, president; D. E. Hubbell, Croswell Jeffersonian, vice president; Herbert A. Woods Bangor Advance secretary-treasurer. Members of the executive committee, with the officers, are Fred D. Keister, Ionia County News; Oscar Schumann, Grayling Avalanche, Schuyler L. Marshall, Clinton County Republican, St. Johns; Don Moon National Democrat, Cassopolics J. B. Haskins, Howard City Record, continues as field secretary of the associations.

G. L. Adams, editor and publisher of the Fowlerville Review and dean of Michigan weekly newspuper men, will next July finish fifty years of continuous service in "getting out" the same paper. The Press Association voted at its East Lansing meeting to hold a summer conference in Fowlerville next summer in tribute to the veteran editor.

A special cup put up by the Michigan Agricultural College for the best definite example of community service, as shown by news and editorial handling, was won by the St. Johns News, in a close contest. Other papers given honorable mention included: Clinton County Republican, St. Johns; Ionia County News; Arenac Independent, Tuscola County Advertiser.

Country Still Importing Sugar

Increase in Michigan's sugar beet acreage was strongly advocated at a recent sugar beet institute held at the Michigan Agricultural College.

That the beet crop returned the largest gross return to Michigan farmers of all crops grown in the state last year, and that the United States continues to import from foreign nations about one fourth of the sugar consumed insuring good market demand, were reasons brought out to support the advise regarding increased acreage.

"From the standpoint of soil and climate, Michigan is particularly adapted to the growing of this crop through extensive areas" says Prof. J. F. Cox head of the crops department at M. A. C. in discussing the sugar beet situation. "The sugar supply of the nation will be on a more dependable basis when a larger proportion of the crop is homegrown a condition which is desirable in times of peace and a great asset in case of war.

"Michigan is ready for a marked increase in sugar beet acreage if condition continues to demand it Instead of 100,000 acres of beets, she has adapted land over 3,000,000 acres. Her present factories could handle almost twice the present production with little expansion. As long as our own markets need more sugar, the beet crop, rightly handled, will stand forth as a community builder.

"While the best crop responds to fertilization, it is not hard on the land as compared with many other non-leguminous crops. As a matter of fact, if the tops are returned and the best pulp is fed on the farm, less fertilizer is removed by beets than in the case of any other crop.

"The sugar beet crop fits well in Michigan rotations, cleaning up weeds and preparing the land for following grain crops without further cost. It associates well with dairying and livestock industries.

"The crop does best on fertile loams, silt loams and clay loams, and responds to careful methods of seed bed preparation and culture. The largest yields are secured from fall or early spring plowing and thorough prepapation of seed bed. The use of sufficient amounts from 300 to 500 pounds of high grade fertilizer pays well.

Are You Sick?

We heard a funny joke the other day. A doctor in a neighboring town had been notified that a certain party living out in the back country about five miles had the "small pox" and should be seen to at once. Post haste the medical man twisted the stem of his "Lizzie" and away he went in search of the erring one. He found the rascal seated astride a fence around the hog yard whistling rag time and meditatively watching the swine grow. Doc. clapped him on the back and said kind of severe like "You've got small-pox and I must quarantine you". The poor diseased small poxite looked at the doctor with a hurt expression and said "Gosh, is that so Doc, will it hurt as bad as that tooth you pulled for me the other other day?" The doctor tried to look fierce as he bundled the patient into the house: "Now we'll have no monkey business about this Sir, You are supposed to be sick and you must go right to bed, further than that I have got to take your temperature, test your heart, scarify your duodenum, administer vaccine and muss you up generally." The diseased man looked up pitifully at his wife and moaned: "Sarah, for God's sake I'm done for. Tell the hired man to take good care of the Holsteins, give my watch to Brother Smith and you can marry Ike Billings."

A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Henry Ford's renewed effort to get control of the Government's nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals, Ala. comes at a bad time, in view of the Senate Oil investigation. A number of Senators declare that if Henry Ford or any other private citzens or corporation leases or buys the Muscle Shoals property, there will be another great scandal just like the row stirred up over the leasing of naval oil lands. They point out that the nitrates which Ford wants to make into fertilizer will be sorely needed by the Government in the manufacture of munitions in the event of another war and that the plants should never pass from the control of the War department

President Coolidge's unlimited use of the personal pronoun "I" in his recent public speeches, in explaining what the Government has accomplished during his Administration, has caused considerable comment in official and political circles here. There are some who suggest that the President is taking entirely too much credit unto himself, but on the other hand it is pointed out that the President leaves no doubt as to whom he is talking about and that all his statements are clear, concise and haye a Lincolnesque brusqueness.

When Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana broke into the head lines in oil probe he sported the most gorgeos moustache extant anywhere on the eastern seaboard It was of the so-called "walrus" type a flowing Western moustache which hung over and below his lips. The Senator's pictures began to appear frequently in the New York and Washington newspapers and it is reported that Walsh was not at all pleased with his likeness as thus exhibited. So thence forth to the Senate barber-shop, and off comes most of the famous moustache. Walsh now looks like a Wall Street banker, but he is still hot on the trail of the oil grafters.

Strenuous efforts are being made in Congress to review enthusiasm for the proposed Government loan of $50,000,000 to feed the starving Germans. The measure received a serious setback when Otto Wiedfeldt, the German Ambassador, refused to lower the Embassy flag to half staff in honor of Woodrow Wilson. The State Department may ask Berlin for an official explanation and Wiedfeldt's recall is expected.

If the President continues to insist that the Mellon tax plan be approved by Congress in toto there will be nothing for him to do but veto the bill when it finally gets into the White House. Republican leaders have agreed that the bill cannot get through as drafted by the Secretary of the Treasury, and that there will have to be bigger reductions in the rates on small incomes, objections of the President notwithstanding.

Another American of moderate means has found that he couldn't make both ends meet in his country's diplomatic corps. Richard Washburn, known to most of his fellow-countrymen for his writings, has gone back to literature after a three year hitch at Rome. American Ambassadors only get $12,000 a year and they are forced to spend at least $100,000.

Scotland yard, long known to all the world as its greatest criminal bureau and police headquarters, begins to sink into second place when compared with the Bureau of Criminal Investigation which has more than half a million finger print records and the largest "rogues' Gallery" in the world is to be made the clearing house for the records of all the known criminals on the globe. Pending the consolidation of the various activities of the Department of Justice under one roof, the new bureau is located in the office building on Pennsylvania Avenue about two blocks from the White House.

Concrete roads, properly made with good Portland cement, offer considerable choice of basic materials, according to the local market, and a satisfactory long wearing road when completed. For suburban and rural roads concrete is an ideal road material. Concrete consists of a mixture of water, cement, sand and gravel or stone of many varieties. Engineers call the sand part the "fine aggregate", and the pebbles or rock the "coarse aggregate" Given clean aggregates and good cement and the road when finished will be durable, dustless, easily maintained and smooth.

State Toxin-Antitoxin is Cold Proof

Toxin-antitoxin that is sent out by the state laboratories of the Michigan departmert of health is a cold proof product. A short time ago an eastern state experienced difficulty with some lots of 1-L diphtheria toxin-antitoxin which froze when exposed to zero weather. Upon being injected into the arms of children it produced severe reactions. But the solution distributed by the state laboratories not only would suffer no ill effects if it were frozen, nor would its power as diphtheria preventive be at all impaired.

Says Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner, "We are happy to say that we started the use of 1-10 plus diphtheria toxin-antitoxin mixture the first of last December. We have been carrying on some freezing experiments since the 23 of December on this 1-10 plus material and are satisfied that no harm what ever can come from its use, even though it were actually frozen. An effort is made, however, to prevent the toxin-antitoxin from freezing.'

High Interest Rates

"The average interest rate charged for merchant credit was 22.3 per cent," the survey reveals. "Credit from local stores was the most expensive, costing an average of 26.6 per cent Landlords came next in order, with a rate of 21.5 per cent. Factories and their agents are much lower, with rates of 14.2 and 17.0 per cent respectively.

"Fertilizer and 'living expenses' are the chief purposes for which merchant credit is extended. Stores apparently handle more of such business than all other agencies combined, while banks carry less than one-sixth of the total. That the farmers fail to obtain needed short-term credit direct from banks constitutes a handicap to agriculture in North Carolina, since the rate on such loans is materially lower than on short-term loans from all other sources."

—By Irving Bacheller

WHEN Benjamin Franklin said to King George the Third: "If anyone supposes that I could prevail upon my countrymen to take black for white or wrong for right, he does not know them nor me," is the period Mr. Bacheller has chosen for his new romance—the fight of our fathers for liberty. Dramatically involved with the historical incidents and figures is the beautiful love story of a boy and a girl.

Here is the human story of our struggle for independence and the part Benjamin Franklin played in it.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122 and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortgage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less

COURT UPHOLDS PATENT SALE

U. S. Suit Against Chemical Foundation Dismissed by Judge Morris.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE FAILS

Conduct of Chemical Foundation Praised in Use of Former German Patents for Benefit of American People.

Wilmington, Del.—In a sixty-two page decision which swept away every one of the Government's major contentions as being without basis in fact or law, Federal Judge Hugh M. Morris dismissed its suit to set aside the sale of seized chemical and dye patents by the Alien Property Custodian to the Chemical Foundation, Inc.

The decision rebuked the Government for including in the bill of complaint a series of conspiracy charges unsupported by evidence at the trial and refuted by the defense as well as by documents filed by the Government.

In declining to compel the Foundation to restore the disputed patents, numbering some 4,700 and bought for $271,000, from the Government, Judge Morris held there was no evidence bearing out allegation of a conspiracy by American manufacturers to effect a monopoly through the Foundation. The court ruled that there was no evidence of fraud or deceit practiced on President Wilson, Mr. Polk, Under Secretary of State; Attorney General Palmer and other high officials of that Administration.

Garvan's Course Upheld

The opinion praised Francis P. Garvan, president of the Foundation, and its trustees, as having met the most severe of tests in their conduct of the Foundation—"the test of actual trial." They were declared by the court to afford, through their high integrity and unquestioned patriotism, a thorough assurance of loyalty to their trust. "It has kept the faith," said the court of the Foundation's work.

Judge Morris found without merit the Government's contention that the criminal laws were violated in that Mr. Garvan, as Alien Property Custodian and thereby a public trustee, sold to himself as president of the Foundation the patents in question. He had acted by direction of President Wilson and his acts, supervised by the President under the latter's wide war powers granted by Congress, could not be brought to court. Congress had not delegated legislative powers to President Wilson, as maintained by the plaintiff, and the courts could not pass judgment on the wisdom or lack of wisdom of Presidential war acts.

Judge Morris recited that although Colonel Thomas R. Miller, present Custodian, who had approved two of the sales involved, verified the complaint, in his testimony he admitted that he could not enumerate any of the facts alleged to have been withheld and suppressed from him.

"In view of this testimony and the obvious fact that the power to charge persons with fraud and conspiracy is a weapon with which serious irremedial injury may be done to innocent persons if such charges are lightly made, it is difficult to understand why the specific charges to which the foregoing testimony relates were made," wrote the court. "Yet the remaining like charges were equally lacking in evidential support. In fact, at the argument, the plaintiff seemed no longer to press these charges against the persons alleged to be conspirators, but it sought to have the charges sustained as against the officers of the Government who formulated and carried out in the public interest the plan of sale. . . . While I know of no case where by implication of law the duty of clearing itself from imputed fraud rests upon the defendant, yet the defendant has met even this burden."

Holds Wilson Had Full Power

While the Trading With the Enemy Act at first merely authorized custodianship of German properties in this country, it was later amended, recalled the Court, to give power of sale under such conditions as the President, in the public interest, should determine upon. In effect, this made the President, as agent of the nation, possessed of powers as broad as though he were absolute owner of the seized properties. Under the provisions of the act, the President was empowered to make any conditions of sale he considered necessary in the circumstances.

The sales in dispute were not made by the Custodian in his capacity as a common-law trustee, but under the extraordinary powers devolving upon him as the President's representative, under the additional sections of the act. "Because a trustee with only the usual powers may not ordinarily sell trust property at private sale for less than its fair monetary value, it by no means follows that the Custodian acting under supervision and direction of the President, may not do so," held the Court. "Obviously, the primary purpose of the act was the protection of the nation, not the benefit of the enemy. The trust was for the benefit of the nation—a public, not a private trust. The statute re

How Far Is It?

"How far is it"? is the first question the prospective buyer asks of the real estate man who wants to show him a suburban home or a farm.

He doesn't want to know how far it is in miles, however. He wants to know in minutes or hours. "It is thirty minutes from the corner of Main and State Streets" tells the story. "It is seven miles out" does not. For "seven miles" may mean seventy minutes if the road is poor, whereas "thirty minutes" is definite.

A man has only so much time to spend. He cannot add to the number of minutes in a day, or the number of days in his life. Therefore, he wants to use as few of his minutes in non-productive, unnecessary and unprofitable effort as possible.

It is for this reason he wants to know the distance from his new home and his office or business in terms of time. And it is for this reason he wants to locate on a good road, for only a good road can cut down his time, without increasing his cost! The railroad can serve only a limited number of suburban towns on any one line, and its trains can run only so often. He must waste time waiting for them at both ends; suit his convenience to the schedule. With the good road he makes his own schedule, often beats the train as to speed, and always beats it in convenience in leaving home, getting into his conveyence, and getting out at or close to his place of business.

The good road—plus the motor—is translated in terms of time, and not distance, because it is time we have to spend, and time in which we have to live; it is only the amount of time consumed which we have to live; it is only the amount of time consumed which counts, and not the mere number of feet or miles traveled in that time.

Motorists to Help Make Roads Safe

Major A. A. Stewart, of New York City, recently formed what is known as the Argus Association, composed of motorists all over the country who are willing to take the pledges of the association as to safe driving. These pledges are:

1. To be always ready for any emergency by keeping my eyes on the road and my thoughts on what I am doing.
2. To particularly watch out for curves, crossings and bridges.
3. To always keep my car under perfect control.
4. To keep the brakes and steering gear in good working order.
5. Never to stop or slow down without signaling to the driver of the car behind.
6. Never to take a turn without care and warning to drivers of other cars.
7. Never to cut off another car unless I am positive that there is ample space.
8. Never to stop in a narrow place on the road if by doing so I inconvenience the drivers of other cars.
9. Never to start out from the curb without making sure that the road is clear.
10. To consider the safety and comfort of the other car's occupants as well as my own.
11. Never try to save a minute or two of time if by so doing I am risking the life of a human being.
12. To obey all the rules of the road as laid down by the law or common sense.
13. If I do not drive my own car, to require my chauffeur or members of my family to live up to these principles.
14. To be always careful, vigilant, courteous and thoughtful—a gentleman of the highway.

More than 12,000 motorists are stated to have taken this pledge.

Keep Communicable Diseases at Home

We are somewhat amused to receive from Dr. Olin a circular headed "Keep Communicable Diseases at Home" and he goes on to say "Folks who settle their family rows on the street, in public conveyances or even while calling on neighbors are more or less odious to society, but the diseased person who ventures abroad spreading contagion right and left, is a grevious spectacle We suppose he has reference to small pox which is rampant in this part of Hillsdale county, at least that's what the doctors call it. They say it is deadly contageous and advise every person to go under the vaccine treatment. Well, we appreciate the joke as much as it is possible to but how in the name of common sense are you going to keep people quarantined when they feel perfectly well, know nothing ails them except a slight rash and small amounts of itching at various points on their anatomy. There have been cases in our village and people felt so good they wanted to go out and take a roll in the snow bank, but of course that wouldn't do, so they chewed their whiskers and stayed in hock. Now what's all this commotion about? Simply the fact that something or other which medical men call small pox, is raging in our midst and it is so terribly fatal we must all be vaccinated at once, and every patient must keep in quarantine until he really is sick. We understand one doctor vaccinated 70 patients in one week, and thanks to the state of Michigan, they have seen to it the vaccine is not the fatal kind otherwise there would be an awful epidemic in our midst.

Some "Tricks of the Trade"

If They Knew!

If some people drinking bootleg whisky and homebrew had any idea of the kind of thing that is going down their throats they would never touch another drop, say those officials who have as their chief task the ferreting out of violaters of the prohibition laws. Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes devotes a good deal of space in his book, "Prohibition Inside Out", to descriptions of how the "real stuff" is adulterated, or the labels counterfeited and placed on spurious beverages.

"It may be necessary", he says, "to outcry the thousands of bootleggers who have prospered on the whisper that their goods were 'straight from Canada.' Fine yarns of the ease with which whisky could be smuggled from Canada have been spun by the men who had it for sale, and accepted by the purchasers, who hoped they were true. The plausibility of the stories gave them active currency, so that the phrase, 'real Canadian stuff", has acquired a wide vogue in the circles where illicit rum is bought and sold. The truth is that most of the talk of 'Canadian stuff' is a myth, of which the purchasers of doctored moonshine, or synthetic whisky, are the more or less cheerful victims. Prohibition agents have captured innumerable consignments of whisky indicating Canadian origin, or purporting to have come from England by way of Canada, but actually having no more relation to Canada than was afforded by the counterfeit labels. In one raid on a Syracuse printing plant, where fake labels and counterfeit stamps were turned out by the thousands, officers found enough Canadian labels to carry many times more whisky than Canadian distilleries and export houses could possibly send to the United States in a year." If the patrons of the bootleggers realized the poisonous nature of the concoctions of which they are partaking under these fictitious labels, would they be so willing to quaff the beverages?

A Christmas circular, gotten out by the H. & H. Novelty Co., of New York City, entitled "Something For Your Hip," went the rounds, at Christmas, advertising miniature bottles stuck into hip pockets. At the bottom was a verse on the gladness of the season and the virtues of the hip bottle as an aid to good cheer.

The force of chemists in charge of the Internal Revenue chemical laboratory in Chicago's Transportation Building have had busy days looking over the Christmas holiday beverages, and state that bootleggers are always unusually careless at that time of the year, being more concerned with the profit they will make than with the inner mechanism of their customers, and that an enormous majority of the liquors on sale to celebrate the day of peace and good-will are deadly poisons.

Perhaps the governors' conference at the White House and the various citizenship conferences have shown the bootleggers the need for closer co-ordination. However that may be, the fact remains that from different sections of the country has come the word that bootleggers are holding, are to hold, or have held conventions. Strange to say, however, the public at large are not invited, and there is almost a total absence of publicity concerning the event! As one editor says: "Nobody but themselves and maybe one or two close friends know where the meeting will be held." The word crept out regarding the later gatherings, however, that "higher up bootleggers" were to deliver speeches, in which they were to urge a higher price for Christmas liquor, and that at least one of the chief objects of the convention was to fix a standing price for the contraband liquors, and to map out, as well, a program for escaping the clutches of the law in the event that officers are on the watch.

Many people would be greatly interested in attending some of these meetings, and feel keenly the lack of hospitality. Why do these benefactors of humanity fail to advertise

Action was started within the last few weeks to stop the manufacture and sale of impregnated malt syrups and other home-brew ingredients by so-called "breweries and cereal beverage concerns". Prohibition Director, Clark Perry, of Wisconsin, has discovered that one Milwaukee concern has been putting out more than a half million dollars worth of malt syrup annually. Commissioner Haynes some weeks ago announced his intention of notifying all breweries to cease the manufacture of such syrups at once and asserted that failure to obey would result in a prompt citation and revocation of permits to manufacture cereal beverages. "It is the intention of the prohibition department to absolutely stamp out the menace in all parts of the country, in a campaign to halt the manufacture and traffic of home-brew ingredients at the source", was his declaration.

Far Away Cows Have Long Horns

The lack of knowledgeof Michigan industry and of the process of industry in general which exists among the rank and file of informants of Michigan people was shown lately in a leading Detroit newspaper in a description of the work of the Ober-Ammergau Passion Players, who are exhibiting their art as carvers of woods and artificers of clays and metals throughout the United States. These master craftsmen actually worked at their art before the crowds who come to pay tribute to their industry and their genius. Describing their processes, an enthusiastic newspaper writer told how they worked entirely with gouges and chisels, how they use no hammers, but instead a mallet shaped like a potato masher and how they even use this tool with much gentleness, lest they split the wood which is the medium through which they express their genius and their craftsmanship. The humor of it all is that there is nothing different in these processes from what carvers in Michigan have been doing through sixty years of workmanship in Michigan. They have all been working with chisels and gouges and mallets shaped like potato mashers, and have been keeping their tools sharp and have avoided splitting the wood in which they worked, just like Ober-Ammergau artists, save that they were not on exhibition and wonder-waiting reporter was not familiar with them.

Michigan has produced many artist carvers not inferior in workmanship and creative ability to even the visitors from Ober Ammergau, even though they had not the artistic appeal of contact with so historical an event as the Passion Play. There have been carvers in Detroit and Grand Rapids at all times during the past half century whose work compared in value with that of these famous Bavarians; while some of them have risen even to the heights of mastership and have made their impress upon the world of art. For instance, Julius Melchers, of the olden time in Detroit, was not only a master carver, but a great teacher of drawing anatomy as related to carving, as is attested by the brilliancy and success of his son and pupil, Gari Melchers, world famous as an artist in color; while his friend and associate, Edward Reuther, was quite equal of any of the Ober-Ammergau artists. The carvers of Michigan have contributed to the greatness of the furniture industry, and, in another application of their art, as patternmakers to the stove industry and other metal products trades where beauty of design and practical values had to be first worked out in wood patterns.

It is to be hoped that some time latter on the general news paper writers will discover some of these excellences at home which seems strange to them in the cases of these worthy visitors. Perhaps some such educational process as the forthcoming Michigan Industrial Exposition will teach them and all the rest of us how much of genius we have in our own fabric of industry.

Quite incidentally, the newspaper writer missed the most striking things connected with the exhibitional work of these artists. The benches upon which they worked were made in Muskegon, Michigan, U. S. A., and Aloys Lang, cousin of one of these master-workers, himself from Ober Ammergau, has been for years carving church furniture and decorations for the American Seating Company, of Grand Rapids, for Michigan customers.

By IRVING BACHELLER

Copyright by IRVING BACHELLER

> AMERICA IN THE MAKING
>
> Irving Bacheller, in his new novel, "In the Days of Poor Richard," has written a story of America in the making—of the United States in the days of Benjamin Franklin. It is a story with a double appeal. One is to the reader in search of entertainment, since there is a fascinating love story in it, spiced with adventure and fighting. This is the love-making of Jack Irons, a young frontiersman, and Margaret Hare, the daughter of an English colonel. The other appeal is to the good American who is interested in his country's history. Franklin is the dominating character of the story and as all good Americans know—or should know—he was human, engaging and lovable beyond the measure of most of the great men of his day. And there were giants in those days, not the least of whom was Franklin. The reader gets vivid glimpses at historic moments of our American giants—Washington, Hamilton, Adams, Jefferson and the rest, as well as such actors in the drama of nation-making as Andre and Benedict Arnold. It ends with a fine picture of Poor Richard in his last days, uttering those homely philosophies which are both historic and classic.

The Horse Valley Adventure.

"The first time I saw the boy, Jack Irons, he was about nine years old. I was in Sir William Johnson's camp of magnificent Mohawk warriors at Albany. Jack was so active and successful in the games, between the red boys and the white, that the Indians called him 'Boiling Water.' His laugh and tireless spirit reminded me of a mountain brook. There was no lad, near his age, who could run so fast, or jump so far, or shoot so well with the bow or the rifle. I carried him on my back to his home, he urging me on as if I had been a battle horse and when we were come to the house, he ran about doing his chores. I helped him, and, our work accomplished, we went down to the river for a swim, and to my surprise, I found him a well-taught fish. We became friends and always when I have thought of him, the words Happy Face have come to me. It was, I think, a better nickname than 'Boiling Water,' although there was much propriety in the latter. I knew that his energy given to labor would accomplish much and when I left him, I repeated the words which my father had often quoted in my hearing:

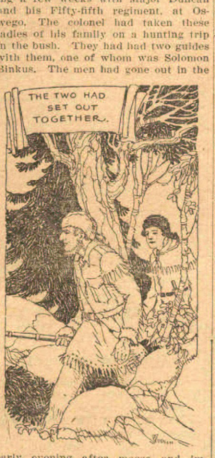
Nothing further is recorded of his boyhood until, about eight years later, what was known as the "Horse Valley Adventure" occurred. A full account of it follows with due regard for background and color:

"It was the season o' the great moon," said old Solomon Binkus, scout and interpreter, as he leaned over the campfire and flicked a coal out of the ashes with his forefinger and twiddled it up to his pipe bowl. In the army he was known as "old Solomon Binkus," not by reason of his age, for he was only about thirty-eight, but as a mark of deference. Those who followed him in the bush had a faith in his wisdom that was childlike. "I had had my feet in a pair o' sieves walkin' the white sea a fortnight," he went on. "The dry water were six foot on the level, er mebbe more, an' some o' the waves up to the tree-tops, an' nobody with me but this 'ere ol' Marier Jane (his rifle) the hull trip to the Swegache country. Gol' ding my pictur'! It seemed as if the wind were a-tryin' fer to rub it off the slate. It were a pesky wind that kep' a-cuffin' me an' whistlin' in the briers on my face an' crackin' my coat-tails. I were lonesome—lonesomer'n a he-bear—an' the cold grabbin' holt o' all ends o' me so as I had to stop an' argue 'bout whar my bound'ry-lines was located like I were York state. Cat's blood an' gunpowder! I had to kick an' scratch to keep my nose an' toes from gittin'—brittle."

At this point, Solomon Binkus paused to give his words a chance "to sink in." The silence which followed was broken only by the crack of burning faggots and the sound of the night wind in the tall pines above the gorge. Before Mr. Binkus resumes his narrative, which, one might know by the tilt of his head and the look of his wide open, right eye, would soon happen, the historian seizes the opportunity of finishing his introduction. He had been the best scout in the army of Sir Jeffrey Amherst. As a small boy he had been captured by the Senecas and held in the tribe a year and two months. Early in the French and Indian war, he had been caught by Algonquins and tied to a tree and tortured by hatchet throwers until rescued by a French captain. After that his opinion of Indians had been, probably, a bit colored by prejudice. Still later he had been a harpooner in a whale boat, and in his young manhood, one of those who had escaped the infamous massacre at Fort William Henry when English forces, having been captured and disarmed, were turned loose and set upon by the savages. He was a tall, brawny, broad-shouldered, homely-faced man of thirty-eight with a Roman nose and a prominent chin underscored by a short sandy throat beard. Some of the adventures had put their mark upon his weathered face, shaven generally once a week above the chin. The top of his left ear was missing. There was a long scar upon his forehead. These were like the notches on the stock of his rifle. They were a sign of the stories of adventure to be found in that wary, watchful brain of his.

Johnson enjoyed his reports on account of their humor and color and he describes him in a letter to Putnam as a man who "when he is much interested, looks as if he were taking aim with his rifle." To some it seemed that one eye of Mr. Binkus was often drawing conclusions while the other was engaged with the no less important function of discovery.

His companion was young Jack Irons—a big lad of seventeen, who lived in a fertile valley some fifty miles northwest of Fort Stanwix, in Tryon county, New York. Now, in September, 1768, they were traveling ahead of a band of Indians bent on mischief. The latter, a few days before, had come down Lake Ontario and were out in the bush somewhere between the lake and the new settlement in Horse valley. Solomon thought that they were probably Hurons, since they, being discontented with the treaty made by the French, had again taken the war-path. This invasion, however, was a wholly unexpected bit of audacity. They had two captives—the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare, who had been spending a few weeks with Major Duncan and his Fifty-fifth regiment, at Oswego. The colonel had taken these ladies of his family on a hunting trip in the bush. They had had two guides with them, one of whom was Solomon Binkus. The men had gone out in the early evening after moose and imprudently left the ladies in camp, where the latter had been captured. Having returned, the scout knew that the only possible explanation for the absence of the ladies was Indians, although no peril could have been more unexpected. He had discovered by "the sign" that it was a large band traveling eastward. He had set out by night to get ahead of them while Hare and his other guide started for the fort. Binkus knew every mile of the wilderness and had canoes hidden near its bigger waters. He had crossed the lake, on which his party had been camping, and the swamp at the east end of it and was soon far ahead of the marauders. A little after daylight, he had picked up the boy, Jack Irons, at a hunting camp on Big Deer creek, as it was then called, and the two had set out together to warn the people in Horse valley, where Jack lived, and to get help for a battle with the savages.



THE TWO HAD SET OUT TOGETHER.

It will be seen by his words that Mr. Binkus was a man of imagination, but—again he is talking.

"I were on my way to a big Injun Pow-wow at Swegache fer Sir Bill—ayes it were in Feb'uary, the time o' the great moon o' the hard snow. I found a heap o' Injuns at Swegache—Mohawks, Senekys, Onandogs an' Algonks. They had been swappin' presents an' speeches with the French. Just a little while afore they had had a bellerin' match with us 'bout love an' friendship. Then suddenlike they tuk it in their heads that the French had a sharper hatchet than the English. I were skeered, but when I see that they was nobody drunk, I pushed right into the big village an' asked fer the old Senecky chief Bear Face—knowin' he were thar—an' said I had a letter from the Big Father. They tuk me to him.

"I give him a chain o' wampum an' then read the letter from Sir Bill. It offered the Six Nations more land an' a fort, an' a regiment to defend 'em.

"A powerful lot o' Injuns trailed back to Sir Bill, but they was a few went over to the French. I kind o' mistrust thar's some o' them runnygades behind us. They're 'spectin' to git a lot o' plunder an' a horse apiece an' ride 'em back an' swim the river at the place o' the many islands. We'll poke down to the trail on the edge o' the drownded lands afore sunrise an' I kind o' mistrust we'll see sign."

Jack Irons was a son of the much-respected John Irons from New Hampshire who, in the fertile valley where he had settled some years before, was breeding horses for the army and sending them down to Sir William Johnson. Hence the site of his farm had been called Horse valley.

Mr. Binkus went to the near brook and repeatedly filled his old felt hat with water and poured it on the fire. "Don't never keep no fire a-goin' a'ter I'm dried out," he whispered, as he stepped back into the dark cave. "'cause ye never kin tell."

The boy was asleep on the bed of boughs. Mr. Binkus covered him with the blanket and lay down beside him and drew his coat over both.

"He'll learn that it ain't no fun to be a scout," he whispered with a yawn and in a moment was snoring.

It was black dark when he roused his companion. Solomon had been up for ten minutes and had got their rations of bread and dried venison out of his pack and brought a canteen of fresh water.

They started down the foot of the gorge then dim in the night shadows. Binkus stopped, now and then, to listen for two or three seconds and went on with long stealthy strides. His movements were panther-like, and the boy imitated them. He was a tall, handsome, big-framed lad with blond hair and blue eyes. They could soon see their way clearly.

They hurried through sloppy footing in the wet grass that flung its dew into their garments from the shoulder down. Suddenly Mr. Binkus stopped. They could hear the sound of heavy feet splashing in the wet meadow.

They came out upon high ground and reached the valley trail just as the sun was rising. The fog had lifted. Mr. Binkus stopped well away from the trail and listened for some minutes. He approached it slowly on his tiptoes, the boy following in a like manner. For a moment the scout stood at the edge of the trail in silence. Then, leaning low, he examined it closely and quickly raised his hand.

"Hoofs o' the devil!" he whispered as he beckoned to the boy. "See thar," he went on, pointing to the ground. "They've jest gone by. The grass ain't riz yit. Wait here."

He followed the trail a few rods with eyes bent upon it. Near a little run where there was soft dirt, he stopped again and looked intently at the earth and then hurried back.

"It's a big band. At least forty Injuns in it an' some captives, an' the devil and Tom Walker. It's a mess which they ain't no mistake."

"I'm afraid my folks are in danger," said the boy as he changed color.

"Er mebbe Peter Boneses'—'cordin' to the way they go. We got to cut eround 'em an' plow straight through the bush an' over Cobble hill an' we'll beat 'em easy."

It was a curious, long, loose stride, the knees never quite straightened, with which the scout made his way through the forest. It covered ground so swiftly that the boy had, now and then, to break into a dog-trot in order to keep along with the old woodsman. They kept their pace up the steep side of Cobble hill and down its far slope and the valley beyond to the shore of the Big creek.

"I'm hot 'nough to sizzle an' smoke when I tech water," said the scout as he waded in, holding his rifle and powder-horn in his left hand above the creek's surface.

They had a few strokes of swimming at midstream, but managed to keep their powder dry.

PROMINENT NEW YORKERS SAYS "GOIL" AND "FOIST"

The New York schools are making a determined effort to stamp out the native dialect, but with seemingly little success. One of the handicaps comes from the influence in high places. A certain New York citizen, mentioned frequently as a presidential possibility, says "foist" for "first."

At one of the public schools recently, the pupils entertained their parents. A feature was an act wherein each child pronounced words properly. The children—there were many nations represented—did so well that even Augustus Thomas, always a stickler for good diction, would have been pleased had he been present.

Following the children, the speaker of the evening, a distinguished citizen, well learned in the law, was introduced. He proceeded to make an address in which he used all of the localisms, over and over, accenting them and emphasizing them, even while praising the children for their diction! As he wasn't from Brooklyn, he didn't call oil "erl," or oysters, "ersters," or boys, "bedds," but he did call girls "goils," first, "foist" and made 26 other errors.—Detroit News.

A Demonstration

Pat, a new hired hand in a machine shop, after having been repeatedly warned to keep away from the dangerous machinery, came in contact with a buzz saw. The foreman happening along, saw Pat holding up the bleeding stump of a finger, cried:

"Why, Pat, how did that happen?"

"Ah, sure, sir," said Pat, "I jist put me finger near that saw like this—Ah, be jabbers, there goes another one."—Boys' Magazine.

Still, It's Golden.

There is too much praise of silence. Cultivation of silence would make of the world a conversational Sahara.

Why You May Need—

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

Minister Is Set at Naught

It will be remembered last week we mentioned the case of a River Rouge Methodist minister who entered the guise of a detective and ferreted out the keeper of a dive and disorderly house in Detroit. Since that time this minister Rev. Hoyt, has appeared in court against the parties mentioned before a jury and what do you think of a jury of well meaning citzens who would find no cause for action and adjudge the accused innocent of the charges preferred? This is just what they did. The jury composed of business men picked up at random in the town. Looks a little shady don't it? The worthy Chief of Police is quoted as saying he was afraid the minister's raid might have a real damaging effect on law enforcment in River Rouge, and likely he knows. Of course this preacher was somewhat chagrined at the publicity given the affair and doubly so, after receiving no results. However the offender is bound over to circuit court for trial, and the lost character woman in the deal probably will have her freedom entirely. Of course the word of a dive keeper and a red woman will have to stand as against that of a Christian minister of the gospel.

Letter From Old Resident

We received the following letter from Eli Harrington an old resident of North Adams who is sojourning at Kansas City, Missouri, visiting his son, Harley:

"Kansas City, Mo.
Feb. 15, 1924.

Friend Louis:—

I came west to avoid Michigan cold weather but I nearly jumped from the frying pan into the fire.

Its not been as cold as in Michigan—just below several times—but aside from this it has been very dis agreeable. We had one snow storm that lasted all one night and day, with a strong wind that piled the snow in drifts and hindered auto traveling for a few days. But it does not stay very long as it does in Michigan.

For the last few days its been nice summer weather. People go to the parks with their picnic dinners and eat out in the open. The golf links are patronized. The mercury climbs to 70 and the ladies wear their new spring suits. Every one has a joyful smile for spring has come they say.

Kansas City has grown wonderfully since I was here three years ago. I persume 500 apartment houses have been built in that time. They are from four to ten stories high and rent from $50 to $300 per month.

In a nice location where there are two nice houses worth ten thous and dollars each they are bought, torn down and a nice apartment built in their place. What little I have been around the city I have seen ten built at the present time.

The price of material and labor does not make any difference, they are building just the same. Brick layers get $12.00 for 8 hours, plasterers $14.00 common work $6.00. The goods you buy are just as high in proportion.

Mr. Werner wished some new furniture for his theatre. He wished two davenports, two large armed chairs and two large floor lamps He got the best there was. They cost him $1600. He looked at one high chair. It was covered with flowers all hand carved, upholstered with the finest material. You probably can't believe it but the price was $1200. Its the nicest furniture house in Kansas City. It is eight stories high, the show rooms are 100 square feet and filled with this kind of goods, probably a million dollar stock. Three years ago there were tracts of land containing ten to twenty acres just outside of where they stopped building and today streets are laid out, sewers and all improvements made and is built up solid with nice bungalow houses Real Estate is going up by leaps and bounds and it is hard to tell where it will stop.

I went to Swope park one nice day last week and visited their golf links. Its eight miles around the course which are composed of woods ravines, small creeks and of course some level spots. In nice warm weather 500 people go out from the city every day to play. Lots of ladies play just for exercise. They have a nice club house where meals are served to those who wish them any time of day. When you have played once around the course you are ready to eat a square meal.

While at the park I went to see the animals. There are most all kinds there. They are fed exactly at 3 p. m. and one half hour before feeding time they are very restless, pacing around their cages and watching the door where they came through with the meat. With their growling and jumping against the bars of the cage it almost frightens one.

The meat is brought in a big basket and a man with a pitch fork gives it to them then all is quiet. They have a cement place twenty by thirty feet with a tank in the center filled with water where they keep about twenty alligators, some large and some small. When it is nice and warm they crawl out of the water and stretch out upon this cement and when they all get out there they are pretty thick.

The day I was there a man got over the railing with a pail of water and a mop to clean up a little. He started in on one side where there were no alligators. When he came up to the big one he would open his mouth and show those terrible teeth and make an awful hissing noise. He would hit him over the head with the mop and drive him into the water. As fast as he came to them he drove them into this tank.

They also have some of the most beautiful birds I ever saw. They were not labeled and there was no attendant so I can't tell you their names. Eli Harrington."

Did You Ever Think

that you might have been living as a British subject but for Poor Richard? And you would be reckoning values in pounds, shillings and pence.

Then Irving Bacheller's great book —

In the Days of Poor Richard

would have cost you about "nine and six" instead of $2.00. Try that on your computing machine.

But then there would have been no such story as "In the Days of Poor Richard." We'd all have been out of luck!

The Advocate

Washington's Birthday

Today the Great "Father of His Country" is memorailized in the anniversary of that notable hour back in 1732 when George Washington first saw the light of day? His tomb at Mount Vernon without doubt will be visited by a large concourse of American citizens. Over the iron door thereto appears this scriptural verse "He that believeth in me though he be dead, yet shall he live" and the immortal George has lived in men's minds through the years. He was known as America's most prominent Mason and throughout this broad land Masonic bodies do honor to his hallowed name and yet he was intensely human. How he did cuss the poacher who was caught on Washington's private duck fields of the Potomac river!

How he did "slam" Benedict Arnold at one Revolutionary battle where the day was nearly lost on account of some blundering of Arnold! Washington kept negro slaves and they had to work you bet, or history lies. The annual crop production of the Mount Vernon estates had to be kept up at whatever cost. Tradition also says George (the sly dog) had his own cider mill and a still on the premises, but after all we have to admit he was a man of immense calibre for his day. He could pray too, if necessary as witness the awful winter at Valley Forge when the great generalissimo went alone in the dark and silent woods to importune the Almighty that the cup of bitterness be taken away from the unfortunate army. Washington was a genius so was Abraham Lincoln so was Theodore Roosevelt so was woodrow Wilson. But the two latter can never enjoy the fame of the two former.

Our Thanks to Hollister

John Hollister a former resident of this village has returned here and makes his home with Fred Baker and family. Mr. Hollister recently loaned us some ancient [illegible]ies of the Jackson Patriot and J[illegible]sville Independent.

This was in the flowery days of the Independent under the management of the talented and versatile "Jim" Dennis. From these papers we clip some articles which we believe might interest our readers: April 8, 1868 wheat in Jackson was quoted at $2.60 to $2 78; apples, 60c to $1.00 per bu.; butter, 33c, 35c; eggs, 12½c; lard, 14 to 16c; oats, 55c to 65c; potatoes, 80c; chickens, 14c; hay, $12 per ton; marsh hay, $5.00. Andrew Johnson, the erring follower of the lamented Lincoln, was being tried for impeachment. From the Pittsford Reporter of July 14, 1892 we glean that Mr. McBain of Adams township had Zelotus Post arrested and tried for shooting the McBain foxhound. Post set up a plea of "self defense" but as the dog was shot in the west end, it took the jury until low twelve to determine whether the dog was a "kicker" or the pleading a fabrication. The railroad company was advertising a grand rowing regatta to be held at Baw Beese Lake July 15 and 16, 1892. This we suppose was held by members of the famous old Hillsdale rowing team who later became champions of the United States and went to England where they met defeat on the Thames River owing to an accident which happened to one of the seats of the boat. April 20, 1865 the Secretary of State in Lincoln's cabinet offered $100,000 reward for the apprehension of the slayers of President Lincoln who were at that time at large In this offer Sec. Stanton especially warned all concerned that persons harboring or otherwise aiding the assassin would be treated as accomplices to the murder. Some excitement those days!

Remember the date, next Tuesday evening March 4th.

People of United States Can eat Reindeer Meat

Reindeer meat may occasionally be purchased in some of the larger markets of the country, particularly in Pacific coast cities, according to the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. A recent report from Spokane, Wash., was to the effect that 33 Alaskan reindeer would be placed on sale on a certain day at a public meat market. The carcasses were shipped whole with the hides on, and frozen solid, and it was stated that to preserve the juices and flavor, the meat would be cut up and sold without thawing. These particular carcasses were part of a shipment from St. Lawrence Island, in the Behring Sea, made as an experiment by the Bureau of Education. The Biological Survey states that at the close of the transportation season on the Behring Sea coast in October, over 1,400 reindeer carcasses were shipped from Alaska to the United States. Of this number, 1,000 were shipped by a single company.

Reindeer meat is fine grained, contains a good palatable fat, and is not "gamy" in flavor when properly produced and handled, but compares favorably with beef. The liver is not unlike calves' liver and, as it is of large size makes an important item of food. The tongue and heart are both of good flavor and quality.

Does are not slaughtered. A certain number of bucks are set aside for breeding purposes, and the rest are raised as steers, to be butchered when about 3 years old. The dressed weight of a three year old steer averages about 150 pounds. By cross breeding with caribou and following a process of selection and grading up of stock in the herds the weight will eventually be much increased At the present time, a little more than 30 years after the first importation of reindeer into Alaska from eastern Siberia, the number of living reindeer in Alaska is estimated to be about 250,000. In addition half as many more have been slaughtered for food and clothing. Begun as an experiment, reindeer grazing in Alaska has amply proved its practicability and demonstrated its importance as one of the great future industries of the Territory.

We Will Insure Farm Property

We are now equipped to insure farm property and live stock in the National Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, one of the strongest in the east. Any farmer or resident who lives in the country can get insurance on his property. Come in if you want protection against fire or wind storm or both. We can also insure Fairs, or any public outdoor event against rain or wind. Remember at the sign of the Hartford in North Adams.

Debtors Take Notice

Will A. Russ is now living at Hillsdale and is dependent for his living expenses upon what little can be realized from goods which are in stock and have been sold. We respectfully ask all those knowing themselves to be indebted to Mr. Russ to call at the Advocate Office and settle these accounts as he needs the money badly. If you have bought goods of him on credit kindly attend to this at once. Ernest Stevens, Administrator. 36t4

Card of Thanks

We desire, through the columns of the Advocate to extend our deepest gratitude and heart-felt thanks to all those who assisted in extinguishing the fire at the Methodist parsonage, especially to the Fire Department for their prompt and efficient service, and to all for their kind sympathy.

W. W. and Stella H. Gray.

The Law on Fireworks

The Commissioner of Public Safety and State Fire Marshal have ruled that hereafter no 4th of July celebration noise makers will be allowed in use anywhere in this state. It appears from the statistics that the sale and use of firecrackers and fire works results in a large number of deaths and wholesale destruction of valuable property, therefore hereafter no firm or corporation shall sell, offer for sale or put on display in the state any blank cartridge, toy pistol, toy cannon, toy cane, toy gun, in which explosives are used; the type of balloon which requires fire to propel, fire crackers, torpedoes or any fireworks containing any explosives or inflammable compound, or any tablets or other device commonly sold or used for fire works. Whenever any of the above named are found in possession or offered for sale the chief of police, chief of fire department or supervisor has authority to confiscate and destroy same.

This will be a hard blow to the American small boy and more so to the merchant who depends upon the sale of fireworks and "crackers" to swell his dividends.

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota.—"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous breakdown following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORDLEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Denby Resigns From Cabinet and President Is Urged to Drop Daugherty.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY DENBY said repeatedly that he would not resign from the cabinet. Monday of last week, to save the President and the Republican party further embarrassment, he tendered his resignation, effective March 10, and it was promptly accepted.

Attorney General Daugherty, more persistently attacked even than Mr. Denby, declared he would not resign from the cabinet. The Republican party leaders in Washington sent Senators Lodge and Pepper to the White House with the message that it was the unanimous opinion of the Republican members of the senate that the President should get rid of Mr. Daugherty. The attorney general again said he would not resign, but at this writing it is believed he will do so, and within a few days.

Mr. Denby stepped out with a smile and to the correspondents he repeated his defense of the wisdom of the oil reserve leases. In conclusion he said:

"My own vindication and that of the Navy department will come with the proper ventilation of all questions connected with these leases in the impartial courts. As a private citizen, if I have committed any offense against the law, I am still subject to action. I am able to fight my own battles, but I cannot fight slander protected by senatorial immunity. No one more than I can more deeply deplore fraud or corruption in public or private life, and where such guilt is shown it should be rigorously punished.

"The President has stood up manfully for right and justice. The sportsmanlike thing for me to do is to relieve him of the further embarrassment of continued political maneuvers and partisan political trickery."

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt retains his office. He was attacked in the senate by Senator Harrison of Mississippi and defended by Senator Moses. Mr. Denby's successor has not yet been named.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, author of the resolution for an inquiry into the conduct of the attorney general and the Department of Justice, led the assault on Mr. Daugherty, whom he charged with protecting instead of prosecuting crime and criminals. He asserted that offenders had purchased immunity by payment of large sums to Thomas B. Felder, the attorney general's associate in the Morse pardon case, and to Jesse Smith, Mr. Daugherty's confidential aide, who committed suicide last year under mysterious circumstances, leaving the attorney general a legacy of $25,000. Senator Wheeler raised the question of whether the attorney general received a share of such payments, and declared that if he had not "he is a bigger fool than the people of the United States give him credit for being."

Mr. Daugherty denied ~~Mr.~~ Wheeler's charges specifically and generally, and said that, though he had been exonerated in one inquiry, he was quite ready to undergo another. He then sent a letter to Special Prosecutors Pomerene and Roberts, placing at their disposal the machinery of the Department of Justice. The senate had confirmed the nomination of Mr. Roberts by a vote of 68 to 8.

THOUGH the senate investigating committee held no public hearings during the week, it was busy inquiring into the alleged "million-dollar slush fund" and with preparations to bring to light stock transactions connected with the oil leases. There was a lot of "scandal talk" circulating and various prominent men were mentioned. Mr. Daugherty frankly admitted that he had bought and sold stocks, as he had been doing for years, and Senator David Elkins of West Virginia issued a statement saying he had bought Sinclair oil stocks, but "without any knowledge with respect to the oil leases." Harry Sinclair returned from Europe and is expected to be called before the committee this week, as are Harry Payne Whitney and E. B. McLean.

WHAT has been neatly termed the process of "candling" William G. McAdoo was carried out according to program by the conference of his leading supporters in Chicago, and he was declared to be a good egg. In other words, he was told that his availability as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency was not lessened by the fact that he had been in the employ of Edward Doheny and that he must continue his campaign. There was no doubt at any time as to the decision the conference would reach. If there had been it would have been dissipated by a telegram from Senator Walsh of Montana, chairman of the senate investigating committee, indorsing McAdoo and his candidacy in unrestrained terms. Republicans noted with amusement that this message was sent to the Montana representative in the conference, who happened to be Thomas Arthur, a stockholder and employee of the Continental Oil company and formerly in charge of a legislative oil lobby in Montana.

Mr. McAdoo of course accepted the mandate of his followers and then made a long speech in which he not only explained his Doheny fees but told what he proposes to do when he becomes President—if ever.

James M. Cox of Ohio, Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1920, is willing to try again. Having been informed that his Ohio friends wish to present his name to the convention in New York, he has given his consent.

IT BEGINS to look as if the taxpayer would get no relief from congress this session, despite the fact that all its members agree with him that there should be a reduction. Of course, if he doesn't get it, partisan politics will be to blame. Last week the lower house, sitting as committee of the whole, approved by a vote of 222 to 196 the Garner amendment to the tax bill, embodying the Democratic surtax and normal tax rates and increased personal exemption. Voting with the 203 Democrats were 17 insurgent Republicans, one independent and one Farmer-Labor member. The Mellon plan was rejected by a vote of 152 to 244. All efforts of Representative Longworth and other Republican leaders to arrange a compromise that would suit their recalcitrant fellow Republicans failed.

The Garner plan provides:

Normal taxes of 2 per cent on incomes below $5,000; 4 per cent on incomes between $5,000 and $8,000; 6 per cent on incomes exceeding $8,000.

A graduate surtax scale, beginning at 1 per cent on incomes between $12,000 and $14,000 up to a maximum of 44 per cent on incomes exceeding $92,000.

Exemptions of $2,000 for single persons and $3,000 for heads of families.

Many economists and financial experts have held that this plan is not comparable to that proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. Since President Coolidge already has publicly declared that it is "impossible in practice," it is fair to assume that, if the bill gets through congress as now framed by the coalition, it will be vetoed by the Chief Executive. The Republicans assert that the entire Garner plan would mean an annual deficit of $300,000,000 after the law is in full operation.

SECRETARY HUGHES is trying to guide the house toward the adoption of an immigration bill that will not be likely to involve the State department and its agents abroad in troubles. He already had told why the proposed Johnson measure is objectionable to Japan and last week he called the attention of the immigration committee to the protests of Italy and Rumania against the plan to make the 1890 census figures the basis for quota restrictions. Chairman Johnson read the Rumanian protest on the floor of the house. It said adoption of the 1890 census as a restrictive basis would "deeply wound the pride of the Rumanian people" and "strongly affect their material interests."

"These impudent protests received from foreign governments desiring to recuperate at the expense of the American people will have the result soon," he said. "I hope, of insuring enactment of really restrictive immigration legislation."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE nominated George B. Christian, secretary to President Harding, as a member of the federal trade commission. Opposition to his confirmation sprang up at once in the senate, so the name was withdrawn at the request of Mr. Christian.

On Thursday President Coolidge sent to the senate his nomination of Charles B. Warren of Detroit to be ambassador to Mexico. Mr. Warren has agreed to serve in that post, but reluctantly for he preferred to remain in private life. He and John Barton Payne were the special commissioners who brought about the agreement by which recognition of the Obregon government was accorded, and his selection as ambassador is especially pleasing to President Obregon.

Henry P. Fletcher, now ambassador to Belgium, has been selected to succeed Richard Washburn Child as ambassador to Italy.

GENERAL DAWES and his committee of experts last week practically completed their report on the German problem and presented it in outline form to Premier Poincare, who is said to have accepted in principle these features of it:

To surrender control of the railways in the Ruhr and Rhineland in exchange for a general lien on the German railways.

The establishment of a bank of emission with a capital of 300,000,000 gold marks ($75,000,000), the seat to be in a neutral country and the governor to be selected from the financiers of some neutral country.

Economic consolidation of Germany with the surrender of various Franco-Belgian economic control services established to extract reparations directly from the Ruhr.

A moratorium for Germany—although the experts' recommendation of three years will be reduced by France to two years.

Premier Poincare has been trying hard to bring the French experts into accord with the Americans and English so that the report may be unanimous. To this end he is willing to make great concessions. Probably this attitude is induced largely by the fall of the franc and his other domestic troubles, including the hot fight that is being made in the chamber of deputies against his plan for increasing taxation.

LEADERS of the dock workers of Great Britain thought they had reached an agreement with the employers that would end the strike that has been cutting down the English food supply and increasing the prices. The employers offered to raise the wage one shilling now and another on June 1, and to leave to a commission the question of providing a full week's work for the men. The more radical elements among the workers were dissatisfied with this compromise, believing all the demands could be won if the strikers would hold out. Prime Minister MacDonald was prepared to put in motion a plan for feeding the nation, and his government was trying hard to stop the profiteers from raising the prices of foodstuffs.

CHINA and Russia are reported to be about to sign an agreement by which the former recognizes the soviet government and Russia gives up Mongolia and returns all concessions, though reserving Russian ownership of the Chinese Eastern railway. Japan does not like the agreement and may intervene to prevent its consummation.

MEXICO'S rebels are now devoting much of their attention to attacks on the railways which form the lines of communication of the federal armies. Their publicity bureau says they are contemplating a combined assault on Mexico City.

BITUMINOUS miners and operators of the central competitive field, in conference at Jacksonville, Fla., have signed a renewal of the present wage scale for a term of three years, giving the country assurance of an adequate supply of soft coal for at least that period.

Fees Paid to Lawyers Kept This Bandit Poor

That a criminal career doesn't pay was proved by the book of a statistical young bandit who confessed to the police his profits in three years were one-fourth of the fees of lawyers he employed to keep him out of trouble.

The confessed thief is Firl Wilson, twenty-one years old, 827 South Coy street, Kansas City, Kan. He was arrested in a touring car stolen January 6 from L. E. Steer, 4510 Mill Creek boulevard. Oliver Bargar, eighteen years old, 624 Osage avenue, Kansas City, Kan., was arrested with Wilson.

Wilson confessed the theft of the car at police headquarters. He said he had been a box-car thief three years in Kansas City, and in that time had stolen ten motorcars in which to haul stolen goods. All of these, except the touring car and a flivver, which he sold for $35, were abandoned, he said.

Wilson said he had "kept books" since he first took up stealing. His total "profits" amounted to $900, he estimated. To balance that figure he said he had spent $3,400 in lawyers' fees keeping out of jail.

"I owe a lot of this yet," he said. "As fast as a 'mouthpiece' got me out of trouble I had to go out and steal to raise the cash for his fee.

"If I ever get clear of this charge and can begin again, I'm going to get a job where I won't need lawyers. Stealing is about the most unprofitable business one can get in."—Kansas City Star.

Michigan Happenings

Members of the Michigan Potato Shippers' association, in conference at Grand Rapids, viewed with alarm the tightening of car supply at a time when it is important that shippers have liberal equipment, but declared strict enforcement of the potato grades have profited the growers more than any other single move in many years. With the resultant improved reputation of Michigan potatoes, has come an increased market value, higher prices and removal of the discrimination against Michigan potatoes in the country's markets.

The steady downward trend of the State's advalorem tax on real and personal property and the contrasting upward trend of the tax levied by cities, counties and school districts on the same classes of property was shown again here by a series of tax totals and significant percentages made public by George Lord, state tax commissioner. Mr. Lord's totals disclose that the $50,714,816 raised by Michigan cities for municipal purposes in 1922 rose to $57,494,532 in 1923.

Two new courses will be established at Michigan Agricultural College as a result of action taken by the state board of agriculture. One of the new courses offered, and the most important from the standpoint of the college, is the liberal arts course. This will place M. A. C. in direct competition with the University of Michigan and other colleges of the state offering literary courses leading to a degree of bachelor of arts.

June 13 has been set by the alumni association, of the University of Michigan, as reunion day for this year. Sixteen classes will return for reunions under the Dix plan, which brings each class back at three or four-year intervals. Included in the classes expected this year are: '63, '64, '65, '66, '82, '83, '84, '85, '01, '02, '03, '04, '21, '22 and '23.

Professor M. M. McCool, head of the soils department at M. A. C. was granted a four months' leave of absence from April 1 to August 1, by the state board of agriculture, in session here. McCool will go to Europe to study agricultural conditions. He also will represent Michigan at an agricultural conference to be held in Rome during May.

Owing to the great depth of snow in woods and swamps, wild deer have lost their footing places. Various hunting clubs around Alpena are strewing tons of hay in the accustomed feeding places. At this time of the year, the deer are so tame they come to lumber camps and are fed on the ground around the camps.

Two of the oldest residents of Kalamazoo County died recently. Edward P. Titus, 95 years old, one of the best known builders of Kalamazoo in pioneer and later days, and Mrs. William H. Morgan, 85 years old, who last December celebrated with her husband the sixty-eighth anniversary of their wedding.

The State Highway Department will make strenuous efforts this summer to control the dust clouds that follow traffic along the graveled country roads, and will for that purpose receive bids on 7,600 tons of calcium chloride, 150,000 gallons of light oil and 2,500,000 gallons of various surfacing materials.

The new automobile rates which became effective recently, show a decrease of 20 per cent in cost of liability insurance in Grand Rapids, according to safety Director James Sinke, who says he has been informed that reduction of deaths and injuries during 1923 was held a contributing factor in the change.

The University of Michigan ranks second in the list of leading universities of the United States in enrollment in the liberal arts department, according to statistics just compiled. The University of California, with the southern branch included, leads the list with 6,913. Michigan's total is given as 4,805.

Transfer to the city of Battle Creek of two unsurveyed islands in the Kalamazoo river, has been asked of the government by Representative Arthur Williams of that city. The two islands are within the corporate limits of the city, and all rights and ownership were requested for public use.

Mrs. Sophronia Bowerman, prominent Lansing Y. W. C. A. and W. C. T. U. worker, died at her home recently. She organized the Ingham County Temperance Union.

Mrs Susannah Bashore Rappelis, 101 years old, and Battle Creek's only centenarian, died recently. She has outlived some of her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Robert W. Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Warren, of Detroit, has received an appointment to West Point military academy, and has been ordered to report to Columbia barracks March 4 for examination. He has been a Boy Scout for many years.

The Oakland County Pioneer and Historical Society, of Pontiac, celebrated its 50th anniversary. Residents of Farmington Township had charge of the program in commemoration of the settling of that township 100 years ago this year.

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, will be beneficiary of the entire estate of $41,000 left by Peter Hanes, Farmington township resident, near Pontiac, whose will has been filed in probate.

Desecrating The Flag

Up at River Rouge (a suburb of Detroit) it is now quite customary to decorate the autos of the newly married with the official flag of the nation, and a lot of folks of good intentions ask "why is?" Any such usage of "old Glory" as this is certainly out of place, but how to get under and abolish the nuisance is not plain. There are a number of acts connected with our flag and the uniform of the army which will bear renovating. For instance, when army uniforms were blue with brass buttons they certainly commanded respect which is vastly more than you can say of them today. Nobody seems to regard the clay bank duds of our army with any amount of enthusiasm. Most any day, in most every way you can meet guys abroad who are wearing the identical uniform of a United States army lieutenant, (minus the cap and chevrons of course) but we'll guarantee these could be had also if he cared for them, and you are wondering why so many ex-soldiers are putting in an appearance—fellows whom you never suspected of going to war—then you investigate and find they have never been to war nor belonged to the army. It doesn't look very tasty to say the least.

We believe that when America adopted the clay bank uniform she cheapened her soldier boys exceedly. And it begins to look as if the flag was in the same category. Quite frequently we see advertisements printed upon the stars and stripes or upon the official shield of the coat-of-arms of this nation and it harks back to the days of the Inquisition when everything had its official hall mark.

Kaiser's Trail Of Woe Is Being Wound Up

About the time Kaiser Bill's torpedo boats were starting from Keil to prey upon American commerce the whole German nation certainly stood up in their boots and huzzaed "Hoch Der Kaiser" to day they are uttering something which sounds very much like curses upon his devoted head. as well they may considering the ruin the old stand-patter brought upon the Fatherland. The court of claims acting upon the loss of the Lusitania which was sunk by German U-boats in the war has rendered a bill to stricken Germany which amounts to $1,000,000 in 88 different awards and all these must be paid by the Germans because they are absolutely in the power of the Allied banking concerns of the world. If these debts are not paid the banks can wreck their financial system which is so badly used up even now as to demand a nurse. This enormous budget has been handed to the Huns with a "pay up or scoot, root hog or die" proviso. The Allied nations would be perfectly justified in seizing every dollar the Kaiser owns even to the clothes he wears, to satisfy this bill, and it is going to distress the Germans considerably to raise the money, but they are paying the price of vanity boomeranged and gone to seed. Time was when the Fatherland prided herself as being the foremost of the world both martially and financially, but to-day Alas! she has her best shirt in hock.

Roadways Of Steel

The man who is laughed at today is revered to-morrow. They laughed at Bell and his telephone, Edison and his electric light, and Langley with his crazy flying machine. The Wright brothers were derided, the discoverer of X rays were ridiculed, and the "radio delusion" brought smiles and amusement.

But not now!

It is as impossible for us to say, now what the road of the future is to be, as it was impossible for us to say, five years ago, what the radio broadcast of today would be.

An inventor wants to interest capital in making a roadway of steel. It will cost, if built, not thousands, but several hundreds of thousands of dollars per mile. Roads builders laugh. The public laughs. We all laugh. Why pay 3 hundred thousand dollars a mile for roads when we can get them for a few thousands?

Twenty years ago the idea of paying twenty-five thousand dollars a mile for road was laughed at!

This steel idea may all be wrong It hasn't been tried. It may be chimerical in the extreme. We don't know. But we do know that laughing at it because its different is no way to prove it idiotic. Ten years ago people laughed at the idea of national highways. They don't laugh any more. More and more people are coming to think that highways are as much a part of the Nation's business as water ways, Panama Canal, battleships, an army.

The new idea is always laughed at. Laughter doesn't prove anything except the "stand-pat-mind" of the laughter. Maybe steel roads at three hundred thousand dollars a mile are impractical. But why not bring something else to bear on the question beside laughter? Nobody laughs at national highways anymore; not even Congress!

The joke of yesterday is the fact of today. Maybe we will yet ride on national highways of steel They laughed at steel rails for locomotives, too. They laughed at transcontinental highways. And how they did laugh at De Lesseps and his Panama Canal!

He laughs best who laughs last.

Much State Corn Is Said Poor For Seed

That a large percentage of the corn reserved for seed by Michigan farmers this year is low in germination, due to high moisture content carried in the fall, is shown by germination tests made at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Very little of the crib corn in the state is satisfactory for seed, according to Prof. J. F. Cox, professor of farm crops at M. A. C. Low temperatures of winter, coupled with the high moisture content, are blamed for the condition, as corn exposed to freezing while moist suffers a great reduction in germination.

"This is the time of year to cull over corn which is to be used for seed and to test germination of the ears," says Prof. Cox.

"The situation this year makes this work especially important for our farmers.

"Ears which are moderately discolored, high in moisture, show dark or blistered germs, or which are discolored at the butt by Mold should be discarded. Off type ears, ears which are too large or too small, or which otherwise vary in type, should not be selected.

"For testing, select firm, dry ears typical of variety, free from discoloration, and having healthy bright colored germs. These ears should be tested individually by one of the well known germination tests. The rag doll tester is considered one of the most efficient and conveniet. Many still adhere to the sawdust box or earth box tester. Detailed information in regard to germination tests and practical testers, which can be made from material to be had on any farm, is given in Bulletin No 289, which can be had on request from the Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing.

"The importance of planting good seed, giving a high percentage of strong sprouts when planted in the field, is known to all good corn growers. Those who find their own supply in bad condition will do well to order good seed of adapted varieties, at an early date, from dependable sources."

Market Prospects

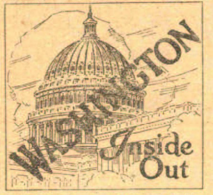
It was the advice offered by the live stock men that unfinished lambs should be held off the market at present. It is the belief that prospects are good for a much better lamb market later on.

"Heavy cattle, around 1,200 lbs. not finished, are selling at a very low prices," stated an official of the exchange. "The trouble today," he added, "is due to the fact that many cattle which as a rule have been carried over to the May or June market as finished stuff have been coming to market now as half finished stuff, due to high priced feeds. Indications are that the cattle market will be so much better in May and June that it will warrant finishing them up."

Spread of information regarding the cheapness and effectiveness of Sodatol as blasting and agricultural explosive is expected to result in increased use in the Lower Peninsula, according to Livingston.



A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Michigan has hard luck. First it was Newberry and then it was Denby. And for the first time in seventy five years the state of Michigan has a Democrat representing it in the United States Senate as a result of the Newberry scandal. Reports are reaching the Capital that many of Denby's friends back home are urging him to get into the Senatorial race this fall against Couzens. They point out that although the Secretary of the Navy, who gets out of the Cabinet on March 10th, has been held up to all kinds of bitter attacks in the naval oil scandal, there has not been any evidence of dishonesty on his part, and that he stands a chance of getting the Republican nomination from his fellow townsmen. But the ligitation over the oil leases may put a different color on the situation.

The Valentinos of the movies have nothing on Jeremiah E. O'Connell, who represents Providence, Rhode Island, in the House of Representatives. Besides being the first Democrat who ever represented his District in Congress, O'Connell is famed as one of the handsomest men on Capital Hill and is daily adding to his laurels as an orator. He was of the few men chosen to lead the Democratic bombardment during the tax debate.

Albert Bacon Fall, who leased the Government's oil lands and got $125,000 from two oil millionaires, has gone back to his ranch in New Mexico, broken in body and spirit. The Department of Justice granted permission for Fall to go home, but he is under constant surveillance and has been warned not to try to leave the territorial limit of the United States, under penalty of immediate arrest and imprisonment.

Knud Wefald, the Minnesota Farmer Labor Congressman, tried to describe his political beliefs to his colleages the other day. "I guess I am an old fashioned Whig Republican," he said, "And if I am not an old fashioned Whig Republican, I am a William Jennings Bryan Democrat you can take your choice."

The Washington "Rumor factor" is not running so fast as formerly. It used to be possible to pick up any amount of scandal involving high officials most any time. Two recent events, though have slowed down the wheels. The first was Frank A. Vanderlip's public confession that he was "gossiping" when he cast insinuations on the late President Harding, and the next was the calling of Col. Tom Miller, the Alien Property Custodian, when he made serious charges involving Treasury Department officials in elleged deliberate attempts to delude Congress as to the state of the nation's pocketbook. The Miller episode irresponsible gossiping has been dealt a deadly blow.

Senators and other tireless investigators are finding that there is plenty of real scandal about without wasting time to manufacture it. Congress is investigation mad and it has become the easiest legislative act in the world for someone to put through a resolution authorizing a probe of something or other. A definite move is under way to bring American diplomatic methods into the light of day and demands are being made for Secretary Hughes to let the Senate see what is going on behind the scenes in the State Department and in the Embassies of Europe and Asia. The Secretary of State can always sidestep, however, on the ground that such disclosures would not be "in the public interest."

Among the new Senators who are gaining fame rapidly is C. C. Dill of Washington, who attacked the proposed flight of the Airship Shenadoah to the North Pole before the trip was called off by President Coolidge. Dill was defeated for re-election to the House in 1918, mainly because he was not wholeheartly in favor of the War with Germany, but he came back strong in 1922. He was a newspaper reporter in Cleveland, O., and taught school in Iowa before he took up the practice of law in Spokane.

Big Sodatol Supply Left For Michigan

There are still millions of pounds of Sodatol, war salvages explosives made available for agricultural blasting purposes, left in government storage houses waiting order from farmers in Michigan and other states.

In spite of the fact that five million pounds were used over the United States last fall, more than a half million of this coming to Michigan, nearly three fourths of the original supply of eighteen million pounds is still available.

Sodatol, a war salvage material made of Sodium Nitrate and TNT has proved its effectiveness in land clearing operations through out the state. It is the cheapest agricultural explosive material ever made available in the state and thousands of farmers are taking advantage of the opportunity to save on their blasting work. Most of the Sodatol sent out by the government is being used in the Lake States, as is indicated by the fact that Michigan alone used more than one tenth of the total last fall.

While uses for the new explosive are said to be just as varied and profitable in the southern counties of the state as the northern, farmers in the Upper Peninsula seem to be more fully aware of their opportunities,

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122 and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

JOHNSON OPENS STATE CAMPAIGN

POPULAR CALIFORNIA SENATOR FLAYS WORLD COURT OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

ASKS RELIEF FOR THE FARMER

Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, candidate for the Republican nomination for President, opened his campaign in Michigan on January 17 with a speech in the Light Guard Armory, Detroit, before an audience of approximatey 2,500 people. He was enthusiastically applauded as he denounced the World Court of the League of Nations, advocated the Soldiers' bonus and criticized the President for his coldness toward the farmer. A summary of his speech follows:

The election of a president begins with his nomination by a national convention. The Republican National Committee, acting under the orders of our opponents violated the pledge of the last Republican Convention for a "just and equitable basis" in the selection of delegates. The Committee had, under the mandate of the Convention in 1920, reduced the Southern representation. Very recently at Washington, without warrant, it unjustly rescinded its former action and increased the representation in the South. Nine Southern States, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia, polled 489,000 votes for President Harding, and these nine Southern States have 134 delegates in the Republican National Convention. Michigan polled 762,000 votes for President Harding, and Michigan has 33 delegates. Ohio polled 1,182,000 votes for President Harding and Ohio has 51 delegates. Illinois polled 1,420,000 votes for President Harding, and Illinois has 61 delegates.

One Republican, however, in South Carolina, or Mississippi, where there is no Republican Party, and where delegates are controlled by a few federal officeholders under command from Washington, is equal to more than one hundred Republicans in Michigan, Illinois, or Ohio.

It is this system upon which we war, and it is this system I challenge in this campaign. The determination is a test of popular government.

Tax Reduction

An inevitable tax reduction has been utilized as a smoke screen to hide every domestic and foreign issue before the American people. There can be no political issue on the reduction of taxes. Nobody believes in high taxation, and everbody wishes low taxation. With a surplus of $350,000,000.00 on hand, it is obvious there can be tax reduction. The only question is how shall it be effected

There would be no great propoganda overwhelming in its extent, skillfully and cunningly devised, if reduction of taxation of small incomes alone were at stake. The propaganda comes from those who are most able to pay taxes, and is directed for the benefit of those who have demonstrated their ability to make large incomes, and who wish to have even larger incomes by reduction of their taxes.

Over 13,000,000 people pay taxes on incomes less than $10,000. 330,000 people pay taxes on incomes over $10,000.00. Under the so-called "Mellon plan" the fortunate possessors of incomes of $250,000 will make $49,000.00 a year; on an income of $300,000.00, $63,000 a year; on an income of $500,000.00, $117,000 a year; on an income of $1,000,000, $232,000 a year. On an income of $5,000,000, $1,330,000 a year. It is those who expect these enormous returns under the Mellon plan, who are filling the newspapers today, and inciting the enormous propaganda for tax reduction.

We would reduce the taxes as far as possible upon every class, but we would also keep our faith. The Republican Party is pledged, so far as its responsible leaders can pledge it, to the Adjusted Compensation Bill. The late President Harding unequivocally endorsed it. In the United States Senate, the leaders of the Republican Party promised the passage of the bill. We can pay this adjusted compensation and reduce taxes, too.

Soldier Bonus.

The principle of adjusted compensation the Government, at the instance of business itself, has established. It was established also for the railroads and for our mining interests. The Congress upon the prayers of those who had war contracts, which were terminated by the armistice, passed the Dent Bill, permitting adjustment of the compensation of those business interests who had dealt with the Government, and upon this principle of adjusted compensation, the United States Government has paid out to business about three billions of dollars. Business insisted upon this principle, and received its benefit. It would now deny the same principle to the men who bared their bodies to shot and shell across the sea.

Do You Believe In Signs ?

If you do you are a judicious advertiser and a good business man. Judicious advertising Always Pays and especially when you advertise in a paper that is read by everybody in its territory.

This newspaper reaches the eye of everybody who might be a possible buyer in this section.

It is rumored that the "House of David" at Benton Harbor are figuring on transporting their whole out fit to the balmy climes of Texas plains. A certain Chicago speculator (probably with an eye to benefitting humanity) has offered to trade them a great big ranch in the south-west for some island which the cult owns in Lake Michigan. This arrangement would be highly appreciated by most of the citizens of Michigan. It is more than likely if the "House" establishes itself in the centre of a million acre ranch and keeps up its line fences—we say up—we mean about 20 feet up and pig tight, that no one will be very badly injured by its presence. Then the erring King Ben can come home to the bosom of his families once more and tenderloin tactics will be again in evidence. Unless the papers lie quite suavely Ber narr McFadden's health colony in New Jersey had nothing on these "Holy rollers" for obscene didos. If they should establish themselves in Texas or some other out of the way country it might demoralize the cowboys or the Mexican Greasers. Why not unload them upon President Obregon?

The Soldier Came Home and Found

Congress paying manufacturers three billion dollars for profits they might have made on war contracts terminated by the Armistice.

Congress paying a "bonus" of $240 a year to each of 150,000 civil employees of the Government because of the increased cost of living during the war. These bonuses are still being paid.

Congress paying the railroads $1,696,000,000 in compensation for loss of profits in war.

Congress giving the soldier himself just $60.

From this the veteran was expected to

1. Buy himself a new outfit of civilian clothes.
2. Pay off the load of war debts accumulated by his family.
3. Pay his rent and food bills while hunting a job.

Picks Four Greatest Men of 20th Century

Pres. Marion L. Burton, of the University of Michigan, believes that the four greatest men of the twentieth century are Theodore Roosevelt, Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison and Orville Wright. The men named were selected because of their service to society.

Mr. Edison was named because of his inventive genius; Mr. Ford because of his industrial achievements and the socialogical value of his product; Roosevelt for his statesmanship and ability as a leader of men; and Mr. Wright for his creative achievement in the scientific field in the development of the flying machine.

President Burton feels that the War is still too recent to enable one accurately to judge the work of the men concerned with it. He considered Wilson and Lloyd George, however, close contenders for a position equal to that of the four named.

Farm Records Give Vital Information

Many Michigan farmers are unable to answer vital questions regarding the financing and operation of their farms, lacking definite accounts or records which would give the necessary information. As a result they work along largely "in the dark", trusting to luck in the management of many of their enterprises.

Remedy for this, according to F. T. Riddell, farm management research man at the Michigan Agricultural College, lies in keeping a simple record or the farm business, made easy by modern account books.

Without keeping records, many farmers cannot tell how much they are worth or how their capital is distributed. They cannot tell what their farm income was for the past year, and what sources were the most profitable. They have no record of the livestock and crop yields, or of the prices received.

This is a good time of the year to begin keeping records according to Mr. Riddell, and farm account books can be secured from the local county agricultural agents or from the extension division at the Michigan Agricultural College. The books, which are sold at cost, are: Farm Account Book No. 1 25 cents; and the Farm Business Record 15 cents.

What is Due in Duty

"Christian Duty" is a well worn and smoothly polished phrase, and perhaps a bit passe because of its frequent use without an adequate interpretation. It needs to be freshened up a little, and humanized a great deal. There is unlimited virility in it if correctly understood. It covers about every possible contact of life. The proper application of it brings a peace of mind, a satisfaction of soul, and a sweet consciousness of having some part in shaping the common weal of the world. Just one thought concerning it today, growing out of our relationship to the mental, spiritual and physical development of the coming generation. How much have you been caring about that question? How much have you interested yourself in the employment of teachers for the schools in your community? How much prayerful thought have you given to the fact that the school teacher who handles the training of your children s doubtless the most influential person in town so far as the future of the children is concerned? Do you not think that something more than a mere commissioners or state certificate of ability is requisite? What about Christian training, experience and character? Who passes on such essentials? What sort of a school trustee or board of education have you helped to select? We are from Missouri and it looks to us that this has a great deal to do with the "due" in duty. Think it over.

A Safe Place

Not long ago I was asked by an anxious father, "Do you consider Albion College a safe place religiously to send my son?" I have been wondering since what that father meant by "a safe place". Of course conditions are not ideal at the college. They never have been. A student is bound to meet temptation when he comes to Albion. He will meet it if he remains at home. A college, however, which has one out of every seven of its student body dedicated to a life of definite religious service; a college which has just such splendid Christian gentlemen on its faculty as Drs. Williams, Hembdt, Harrop, Goodrich, Whitehouse, Chickering and others, a college which never allows a week to slip by without stressing the religious life and obligation through its administration, class lectures, chapel addresses, and the quiet influences of its leaders, and finally, a college which maintains a weekly prayer meeting attended by about 250 of its student group, ought to be a fairly safe place to send your son. Given a wholesome young man with the right sort of religious and home background and Albion College will do him no hurt. I will go further, Albion college will make him a stronger man for having come. This is her purpose and her desire.

The Children's Billet

It is known as the American Legion Children's Billet, and it cares for the widows and children of deceased service men, and the wives and children of ex-service men who are incapacitated due to physical or mental disabilities. There is no charge whatsoever, as the project is financed solely through the efforts of the Legion.

The original intention was that the Billet should be only for the orphans of veterans.

It then became evident that where a veteran was under hospital care, or otherwise deprived of his earning power, and without the benefit of compensation from the government, his children were equally entitled to be cared for—to be saved from "institutions" or adoption.

It became equally evident that the children's mothers must be considered in all cases. In some instances they are able and willing to support themselves if their children are cared for. Some are nursing children and must be cared for directly. Others are of help around the Billet, or can find work nearby. Some provision is made for all.

The American Legion feels that all these people are truly casualties of the war.

The Legion sees them suffering because of the war. It accepts the responsibility of helping so far as it can. It wants the families of veterans to be held together—not broken apart. It wants the children of veterans cared for until they are able to make their own way in life.

The Legionnaire in Michigan may justly feel proud that his department of the Legion was first in the nation to see and feel the responsibility. Now it has been accepted as a National policy and task of the Legion. The Legion sees in this work a field for genuine usefulness.

Is there any red-blooded veteran who will refuse to support an organization which voluntarily undertakes such an effort?

A Modern Paradise

Frank G. Carpenter the famous globe trotter, who has crossed the Atlantic Ocean so many times he has lost track of it, claims that the island of Java comes as near the ideal heaven as any land on the globe. He says that the state of Iowa has approximately 40,000 more square miles of territory than has Java yet on this little spot of soil 35,000,000 souls live and thrive, the densest population on earth. Even flea-bitten China cannot compare with this. However, even at that a lot of this territory is covered with the blackest jungle in which wild beasts such as tigers, snakes, alligators and hippotamus roam at will and the people are constantly devoured by them. But the climate is so even that four crops of corn are harvested annually, one after the other. The soil is so rich that merely scratching it is all that is necessary to raise the eatables which they need. Fruits of tropical climes are so numerous that Carpenter doesn't try to enumerate them all. Bananas of the finest and largest variety are found here—gauvas, pineapples, oranges, etc. The inhabitants live as care free as children, have no education, but are free from the blight of war. Their only worryment is the thirteen active volcanoes on the island which are more or less alive at all times. One, the famous Krakatoa, erupted lately by literally blowing off its head, and the results were terrible. Thousands of people were quickly buried under hot lava and ashes and cities destroyed.

Holsteins in Hillsdale County

Several very fine Holstein cows from the state dairy cattle sale held by the Michigan Holstein-Friesian Association at M. A. C. during farmers week were added to the Holstein herds of Hillsdale county. Eugene Carmichael during the state sale purchased three of the finest cows for his herd in Wheatland. Mr. Carmichael brought home two cows which have very fine cow testing associations records.

It was the concensus of opinion at the state sale that the Holstein sold this year were of the best type ever put through a public sale ring in the state of Michigan. The average of the whole sale of 39 head was $253.33, according to report of J. G. Hay extension specialist in dairying at the Michigan Agricultural College and manager of the sale. Six bulls averaged $212.50, while 27 cows of milking age averaged $271.29, with two cows topping the sale at $420 each. Although the prices quoted above are very reasonable, they run higher than the prices reported in any neighboring state sale this year.

At the annual meeting of the state Holstein-Friesian association, among the resolutions adopted was one urging the breeders of the state to enter their cows in cow testing association work. The dairy department at M. A. C. has developed this activity to such an extent that Michigan now holds second place in the Union in regard to the number of cows under test.

According to L. F. Livingston, agricultural engineer at the Michigan Agricultural College, who is in charge of Sodatol distribution for the state. Nine carloads have been ordered for the Upper Peninsula this spring already, while but three carloads have been pooled in the lower counties.

"DROP YER GUNS!"

"Now we've got jest 'nough hoppin' to keep us from ge'tin' foundered," said Solomon, as he stood on the farther shore and adjusted his pack. "It ain't more'n a mile to your house."

They hurried on, reaching the rough valley road in a few minutes.

"Now I'll take the bee trail to your place," said the scout. "You cut ercrost the medder to Peter Boneses' an' fetch 'em over with all their grit an' guns an' ammunition."

Solomon found John Irons and five of his sons and three of his daughters digging potatoes and pulling tops in a field near the house. The sky was clear and the sun shining warm. Solomon called Irons aside and told him of the approaching Indians.

"What are we to do?" Irons asked.

"Send the women an' the babies back to the sugar shanty," said Solomon. "We'll stay here 'cause if we run erway the Boneses'll git their ha'r lifted. I reckon we kin conquer 'em."

"How?"

"Shoot 'em full o' meat. They must 'a' traveled all night. Them Injuns is tired an' hungry. Been three days on the trail. No time to hunt! I'll hustle some wood together an' start a fire. You bring a pair o' steers right here handy. We'll rip their hides off an' git the reek o' vittles in the air soon as God'll let us."

Mrs. Irons hid in the shed with the loaded guns.

Ruth Irons and the children set out for the sugar bush. The steers were quickly led up and slaughtered. As a hide ripper Solomon was a man of experience. The loins of one animal were cooking on turnspits and a big pot of beef, onions and potatoes boiling over the fire when Jack arrived with the Bones family.

A little later Solomon left the fire. Both his eyes and his ear had caught "sign"—a clamor among the moose birds in the distant bush and a flock of pigeons flying from the west.

"Don't none o' ye stir till I come back," he said, as he turned into the trail. A few rods away he lay down with his ear to the ground and could distinctly hear the tramp of many feet approaching in the distance. He went on a little farther and presently concealed himself in the bushes close to the trail. He had not long to wait, for soon a red scout came on ahead of the party. He was a young Huron brave, his face painted black and yellow. His head was encircled by a snake skin. A fox's tail rose above his brow and dropped back on his crown. A birch-bark horn hung over his shoulder.

Solomon stepped out of the bushes after he had passed and said in the Huron tongue: "Welcome, my red brother; I hear that a large band o' yer folks is comin' and we have got a feast ready."

The young brave had been startled by the sudden appearance of Solomon, but the friendly word had reassured him.

"We are on a long journey," said the brave.

"And the flesh of a fat ox will help ye on yer way. Kin ye smell it?"

"Brother, it is like the smell of the great village in the Happy Hunting Grounds," said the brave. "We have traveled three sleeps from the land of the long waters and have had only two porcupines and a small deer to eat. We are hungry."

"And we would smoke the calumet of peace with you," said Solomon.

They entered the house and barn and walked around them, and this, in effect, is what Solomon said to him:

"I am the chief scout of the Great Father. My word is like that of old Flame Tongue—your mighty chief. You and your people are on a bad errand. No good can come of it. You are far from your own country. A large force is now on your trail. If you rob or kill anyone you will be hung. We know your plans. A bad white chief has brought you here. He has a wooden leg with an iron ring around the bottom of it. He come down lake in a big boat with you. Night before last you stole two white women."

A look of fear and astonishment came upon the face of the Indian.

"You are a son of the Great Spirit!" he exclaimed.

"And I would keep yer feet out o' the snare. Let me be yer chief. You shall have a horse and fifty beaver skins and be taken to the border and set free. I, the scout of the Great Father, have said it, and if it be not as I say, may I never see the Happy Hunting Grounds."

The brave answered:

"My white brother has spoken well and he shall be my chief. I like not this journey. I shall bid them to the feast. They will eat and sleep like the gray wolf, for they are hungry and their feet are sore."

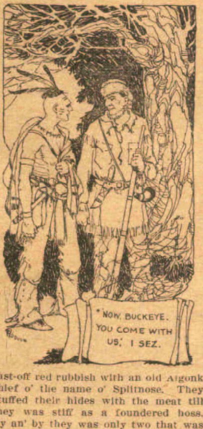
The brave put his horn to his mouth and uttered a wild cry that rang in the distant hills. Then arose a great whooping and kintecawing back in the bush. The young Huron went out to meet the band. Returning soon, he said to Solomon that his chief, the great Splitnose, would have words with him.

Turning to John Irons, Solomon said: "He's an outlaw chief. We must treat him like a king. I'll bring 'em in. You keep the meat a-sizzlin'!"

The scout went with the brave to his chief and made a speech of welcome, after which the wily old Splitnose, in his wonderful headdress of buckskin and eagle feathers, and his band in war-paint, followed Solomon to the feast. Silently they filed out of the bush and sat on the grass around the fire. There were no captives among them—none at least of the white skin.

Solomon did not betray his disappointment. Not a word was spoken. He and John Irons and his son began removing the spits from the fire and putting more meat upon them and cutting the cooked roasts into large pieces and passing it on a big earthen platter. The Indians eagerly seized the hot meat and began to devour it.

In a letter Solomon has thus described the incident: "It were a band o' cutthroat robbers an' runnygades from the Ohio country—Hurons, Algonks an' Mingoes an' all kinds o' cast-off red rubbish with an old Algonk chief o' the name o' Splitnose. They stuffed their hides with the meat till they was stiff as a foundered hoss. By an' by they was only two that was up an' pawin' eround in the stew pot fer 'nother bone, lookin' kind o' unsartin an' jaw weary. In a minute they wiped their hands on their h'ar an' lay back fer rest. They was drunk with the meat, as drunk as a Chinee a'ter a pipe o' opium. We white men stretched out with the rest on 'em till we see they was all in the land o' nod. Then we riz an' set up a hussle. Hones' we could 'a' killed 'em with a hammer an' done it delib'rit. I started to pull the young Huron out o' the punch. He jumped up very supple. He wasn't asleep. He had knowed better than to swaller a yard o' meat.



"NOW, BUCKEYE. YOU COME WITH US,' I SEZ.

"Whar was the wimmen? I knowed that a part o' the band would be back in the bush with them 'ere wimmen. I'd seed suthin' in the trail over by the drownded lands that looked kind o' neevarious. It were like the end o' a wooden leg with an iron ring at the bottom an' consid'able weight on it. An Injun wouldn't have a wooden leg, leastways not one with an iron ring at the butt. My ol' thinker had been chawin' that cud all day an' o' a sudden it come to me that a white man were runnin' the hull crew. That's how I gained ground with the red scout. I took him out in the aidge o' the bush an' sez I:

"'What's yer name?'

"'Buckeye,' sez he.

"'Who's the white man that's with ye?'

"'Mike Harpe.'

"'Are the white wimmin with him?'

"'Yes.'

"'How many Injuns?'

"'Two.'

"'What's yer signal o' victory?'

"'The call o' the moose.'

"'Now, Buckeye, you come with us,' I sez.

"I knowed that the white man were runnin' the hull party an' I itched to git holt o' him. Gol ding his pictur'! He'd sent the Injuns on ahead fer to do his dirty work. The Ohio country were full o' robber whelps which I kind o' mistrusted he were one on 'em who had raked up this 'ere band o' runnygades an' gone off fer plunder. We got holt o' most o' their guns very quiet, an' I put John Irons an' two o' his boys an' Peter Bones an' his boy Isr'el an' the two women with loaded guns on guard over 'em. If any on 'em woke up they was to ride the nightmare er lay still. Jack an' me an' Buckeye sneaked back up the trail fer 'bout twenty rod with our guns, an' then I told the young Injun to shoot off the moose call. Wall, sir, ye could 'a' heerd it from Albany to Wing's falls. The answer come an' jest as I 'spected, 'twere within a quarter o' a mile. I put Jack erbout fifty feet further up the trail than I were, an' Buckeye nigh him, an' tol' 'em what to do. We skootched down in the bushes an' heerd 'em comin'! Purty soon they hove in sight—two Injuns, the two wimmen captives an' a white man—the wust-lookin' bulldog brute that I ever seen—stampin' erlong lively on a wooden leg, with a gun an' a cane. He had a broad head an' a big lop mouth an' thick lips an' a long, red, warty nose an' small black eyes an' a growth o' beard that looked like hog's bristles. He were stout built. Stood 'bout five foot seven. Never see sich a sight in my life. I hopped out afore 'em an' Jack an' Buckeye on their heels. The Injun had my ol' hanger.

"'Drop yer guns,' says I.

"The white man done as he was told. I spoke English an' mebbe them two Injuns didn't understan' me. We'll never know. Ol' Red Snout leaned over to pick up his gun, an' he'd made up his mind to fight. Jack grabbed him. He were stout as a lion an' tore 'way from the boy an' started to pullin' a long knife out o' his bootleg. Jack didn't give him time. They had it hammer an' tongs. Red Snout were a reg'lar fightin' man. He jest stuck that 'ere stump in the ground an' braced ag'in' it an' kep' a-slashin' an' jabbin' with his club cane an' yellin' an' cussin' like a fiend o' hell. He knocked the boy down an' I reckon he'd 'a' mellered his head proper if he'd 'a' been spryer on his pins. But Jack sprung up like he were made o' Injy rubber. The bulldog devil had drawed his long knife. Jack were smart. He hopped behind a tree. Buckeye, who hadn't no gun, was jumpin' fer cover. The peg-leg cuss swore a blue streak an' flung the knife at him. It went cl'ar through his body an' he fell on his face an' me standin' thar loadin' my gun. I didn't know but he'd lick us all. But Jack had jumped on him 'fore he got holt o' the knife ag'in.

"I thought sure he'd floor the boy an' me not quite loaded, but Jack were spry as a rat terrier. He dodged an' rushed in an' grabbed holt o' the club an' fetched the cuss a whack in the paunch with his bare fist, an' ol' Red Snout went down like a steer under the ax.

"She needn't 'a' tuk the trouble 'cause afore she spoke I were lookin' at him through the sight o' my ol' Marier, which I'd managed to git it loaded ag'in. He were runnin' towards me. He tuk jest one more step, if I don't make no mistake.

"The ol' brute that Jack had knocked down quivered an' lay still a minit an' when he come to, we turned him eround an' started him toward Canady an' tol' him to keep a-goin'! When he were 'bout ten rods off, I put a bullet in his ol' wooden leg for to hurry him erlong. So the wust man-killer that ever trod dirt got erway from us with only a sore belly, we never knowin' who he were. I wish I'd 'a' killed the cuss, but as 'twere, we had consid'able trouble on our hands. Right erway we heard two guns go off over by the house. I knowed that our firin' had prob'ly woke some o' the sleepers. We pounded the ground an' got thar as quick as we could. The two wimmen wa'n't fur behind. They didn't cacalate to lose us—you hear to me. Two young braves had sprung up an' been told to lie down ag'in. But the English language ain't no help to an Injun under them surcumstances. They don't understan' it an' thar ain't no time when ignerunce is more costly. They was some others awake, but they had learnt suthin'. They was keepin' quiet, an' I sez to 'em:

"'If ye lay still ye'll be safe. We won't do ye a bit o' harm. You've got in bad comp'ny, but ye ain't done nothin' but steal a pair o' wimmen. If ye behave proper from now on, ye'll be sent hum.'

SNEEZE GREETED IN MANY WAYS IN VARIOUS PLACES

"A vos souhaits!" (God bless you!) Now is the season when you hear the expression very frequently. With these words we apostrophize one who sneezes.

Among the Indian tribes of North America, we understand, a polite question is elicited by the sneeze of one's companion: "Who calls me?" When an Eskimo sneezes he says to himself: "Come back to me!" for popular belief has it that the sneeze indicates an escape or flight of the soul.

In the British East Indies it is also believed that part of the soul flies forth at each sneeze; and when the natives hear a friend sneeze, they say: "God protect you!" to which the sneezer's response should be: "And you likewise!" The Siamese believe that a person sneezes because God, turning the pages of the Doomsday Book, has paused at His name.

In Portugal, when anyone sneezes, you raise your hat. The Irish and the Russians, like the Hindus, exclaim: "God protect you!" The Italians says: "Felicita!"

As for the English, they don't say anything at all, but they immediately take precautions against a cold in the head, of which the sneeze is supposed to be a warning.—Le Petit Parisien.

The Old Savannah.

The Savannah was the first steamer to cross the Atlantic. On May 24, 1819, she left Savannah for Liverpool, which port was reached in 27 days; 80 hours of which time she was operated by steam power. The vessel was first constructed as a sailing packet, but an auxiliary engine and boiler with paddle-wheels were fitted before she was placed in service.

There is nothing more difficult to find than perfection.

100,000 PEOPLE PRAISE TANLAC FOR ITS MERIT

World's Greatest Tonic Is Endorsed by People Grateful for the Relief It Has Given Them.

Actuated by a deep sense of gratitude and desire to help their suffering neighbors, more than 100,000 well-known men and women have offered their personal experiences as proof of the wonderful health-giving powers of TANLAC, the World's Greatest Tonic.

Throughout each and every one of this long list of testimonials rings the spirit of earnest sincerity which characterizes the following excerpts:

Mrs. D. J. Pritchard, Cleveland, Ohio: "People wanting to know what TANLAC will do may communicate with me. It increased my weight 32 lbs. and brought me the very help I longed for."

J. H. Taylor, Memphis, Tenn.: "To me TANLAC was just like a good friend—gave me help when I needed help most."

Mrs. Mary Schumaker, Racine, Wis.: "Every year at the change of seasons a course of TANLAC makes me eat with a relish, restores my strength and leaves me in splendid health."

Judge George P. Wagnes, Police Magistrate, Belleville, Ill.: "That I am enjoying such fine health now I can attribute only to the help I received from TANLAC."

Mrs. C. K. Sellers, Springfield, Mo.: "Since taking TANLAC I enjoy the blessing of perfect health and have the complexion of a schoolgirl."

V. E. Ferry, age 73, Seattle, Wash.: "TANLAC built my weight up 21 lbs., rid me of fifteen years' stomach trouble, and left me feeling many years younger."

Internal Cleanliness More Important Than Bathing

Washing Cleans Only the Skin

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHY run the risk of sickness? Keep clean internally. When you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, attack all parts of the body. The first results, headache, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness," etc., serve as warnings of a graver danger. If this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked, you become the victim of some serious organic disease.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

We note with pleasure that President Coolidge with his customary carefulness has forbidden the Polar expedition to fit out which has been so loudly projected by navy and aerial men of the country. We thought some real hard common sense would be brought to bear on the matter. Such a foolhardy enterprise as this would prove to be, ought to be nipped in the bud.

A fire alarm was sounded in the village Friday between 10 and 11 o'clock and our citzens rushed out to learn the Methodist parsonage was on fire. The chemical engine was taken out and did very good service as they happened to have a supply of chemical on hand. The fire had eaten a hole in the roof around the chimney sufficient for a man to get through. but ,was extinguished without much damage.

Detroit Saturday Night enters in to a laughable dissertation on the most famous men of the day and says its first choice of the four most notable characters would be Jack Dempsey whose last little engagement required 10,000 news writers and 1,000,000 wave lengths to depict just three minutes of his action Second choice would be the renowned Andrew Gump who exists nowhere except in pictures. Third choice, Rudolph Valentino and fourth choice is the dude who won the marathon dance of six days. They have forgotten his name but will look it up.

Michigan's Board of Health

Dr. Kellogg of Battle Creek Sanitarium states that he served on this board 45 years ago, having been appointed by the Governor. About the only thing they did those days was to quarantine scarlet fever, measles and small-pox. They were just beginning to learn that contaminated drinking water was a source of disease but it was up-hill work to convince the public that their diseases resulted from infected well water. At that time nearly all country and small town inhabitants were using water from open wells. Over at Hillsdale they found a well 20 feet deep and open at the top, which was situated within 15 feet of a 12-foot cess-pool.

This nuisance was only one of hundreds throughout the state and Hillsdale wells have had their reputation contaminated ever since.

With so good a reservoir as Baw Beese Lake at her command it is a wonder there are any wells within 3 miles of Hillsdale.

But we will proceed: The Hillsdale nuisance was rounded up but it was difficult to establish the "bug" theory among citizens of the country-side. When Kellogg showed a woman these minute animalcule through a powerful magnifier, she asked how large they were. Dr. Kellogg told her you could lay 20 thousand of them in the space of one inch and she replied "Oh, I aint afraid of them little fellers." and that's about the way it went in those naked days. Tomatoes were never eaten at that time but were grown purely for ornamental uses in the garden. They went by the name of "love apples" and no one supposed they were fit for food.

To-day tomatoes make the choicest table sauce and cancers are so prevalent that a large number of people honestly believe they are the result of tomato diet, but investigations by doctors exploded that idea some time ago.

However, the discoveries of science in germs has opened a wide field for the treatment of disease. We can remember when the old doctor scouted the theory of "germs" and made all manner of fun of such things but his poor vision didn't quite carry over—that was all.

The death rate 45 years ago was 140 to 100,000 population from typhoid alone but insanity, imbecility and idiocy did not increase as fast as it does to-day. These have increased 300 per cent in 50 years. Medical men of to-day almost universally admit that "germs" are the cause of practically all diseases, yet 40 years ago we recollect the situation was radically different.

Over at Waukesha Wisconsin, the KuKlux Klan have been endeavoring for the past two weeks to organize a lodge but matters came to a crisis rather suddenly on Tuesday when a mob of non clansmen stormed a hotel where the Klan was scheduled to meet and made it so hot generally that the meeting had to be called off. The mob broke in doors, put out the lights and drove the Klansmen to an upper floor where after about one hour they were rescued by police. Three speakers for the Klan who were to address the meeting had to vamose without any speechifying.

Bronze Medal Awarded

Some time ago the Illinois Watch Company sent out circulars and literature announcing a contest for the best essay on the "Life of Abraham Lincoln" and offering as a prize a solid bronze medal nearly 3 inches in diameter for the best composition, the contestants to be High School students. Nearly Burned to Death

Mrs. Clyde Butcher who lives east of Jonesville on the "turnpike" was quite seriously burned on Tuesday morning when she attempted to start a fire with kerosene. The oil flared up in the stove and set fire to her dress. While ablaze she ran out doors and by rolling in a puddle of water extinguished the fire, though severely burned below the waist. Dr. Fisk was called from Jonesville and made the woman as comfortable as possible.

As we go to press Mrs. Butcher is reported as improving.

The W. F. M. S. of the M. E. church met on Wed. p. m. with Mrs. Alfred Haight. The mission study book was completed by Mrs. Haight. A paper read by Mrs. Walworth and the mystery box was much enjoyed. The next meeting will be at the church parlors April 2 with an Easter Dinner served at noon to which the public is Invited. Usual prices.

A church member was overheard to remark last Sunday at the M. E. church that it certainly made older people "sit up and take notice" to see two long seats full of young Junior Leagers come up from down stairs just before the sermon and sit quietly at attention during the rest of the service. A beautiful part of the communion service on Sunday last was the reception of five of the "Juniors" into probationary membership.

The official call for the Democratic State convention gives dates selected for county conventions and state pre-primary conference The Democratic electors of the state of Michigan are notified that in pursuance of action by the State Central Committee, a state convention of the party will be held in the city of Flint on Thursday. May 15, 1924. Notice is further hereby given that the county conventions for the election of delegates to said State convention will be held in all counties on Tuesday, April 29, 1924

We heard a citizen make the remark the other day "the editor would get along better if he didn't make so many stump speeches in the paper" and we just could not help laughing. Any man who imagines we want to dictate any manner of deportmenf to a living soul is badly flim-flammed, because we consider it a duty of any paper which circulates and is alive to discuss the problems of the day pro and con. and we never try to antagonize the smallest of our citizens. We do think however, that a newspaper which runs those colorless write-ups known as "editorials' that you read and can't for the life of you tell which side the writer is camping on, is as near a candidate for the cemetery as could be expected without actually being laid away. These fellows who want a newspaper muffled are usually politicians or crooks—but the man however who made the above remark is neither. He's a good fellow —but in wrong.

Convict Labor Is a Success

Prison labor on Michigan roads was given a try-out during 1923. According to the report now made public it seems to have been a successful undertaking. Of the 660 men employed in the construction work but 21 escaped. and of this number four voluntarily returned and 11 were re-captured. The state paid the men $58,000 and at the same time saved large sums. The men were sent out from Jackson and Ionia as highway trusties under temporary paroles. During the present year it is planned to use double the number tried out in 1923. It is stated too, that the prisoners laid more and better road per given number of men than contract work. A large portion of the workers were men sentenced for bootlegging, which is the cause of nearly one-fourth of those received for state custody.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Ishpeming—Hancock has been voted the 1925 meeting of the Upper Peninsula Older Boys' conference at a meeting held here recently.

Hart — Mrs. James Cogshequam, pioneer woman, who came here with her parents over an old Indian trail 65 years ago, died last week.

Elk Rapids—George W. Perry, 70, prominent northern Michigan publisher, died at Fresno, Cal., recently. Mr. Perry owned and published the Elk Rapids Progress for 18 years.

Grand Rapids—Legislation fixing standard weights for loaves of bread manufactured in Michigan is sought by 44 Western Michigan bakers who organized a branch of the State Bakers Association here.

Mackinaw City—Mrs. Julia A. Inglis, of this city, has retired as teacher under the retirement act after teaching 30 years. She has been a teacher in the Mackinaw City schools for several years, retiring a few months ago.

Monroe—Fire destroyed the Marsh Club clubhouse, keeper's home and 12 boat houses, along the Government Canal, 2½ miles east of here on Lake Erie. Heat from the fire caused 5,000 shotgun shells in lockers in the clubhouse to explode.

Lansing—Owners of factories and residents in the lowlands near here fear a flood this year if there is a sudden thaw coupled with rain. The snow is deeper and the ice is thicker in both the Red Cedar and Grand Rivers than in several years.

Detroit—Thirty-one banks in Michigan, reporting to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, showed total savings accounts Feb. 1, of $273,188,375, which was an increase of 0.9 per cent over Jan. 1, 1924, an d11.9 per cent as compared with Feb. 1, 1923.

Sault Ste. Marie—Chippewa County's War Memorial Hospital, costing $180,000 and dedicated to soldiers of the Civil, Spanish-American and World Wars, was opened recently. It is the finest hospital in the Upper Peninsula, complete in every detail with a 60 bed capacity.

Lansing—Edward C. Richards, 50 years old, prominent Lansing citizen, died here recently as a result of injuries received a few weeks ago when his bicycle was struck by a truck. Physically, he was known as the shortest person in Lansing and among the few Michigan dwarfs.

Flint—An attempt will be made at Lansing by about 15 Michigan cities to obtain an apraisal of the electric light and power department of the Consumers Power Co., and the fixing of reasonable rates with more adequate service, according to an announcement by John H. Farley, city attorney of Flint.

Iron Mountain—Twenty million feet of logs is the estimated output for this winter placed by lumber companies, loggers and jobbers operating in this district. Last year's cut was about the same. In addition to the logs, it is estimated the output will total 5,000 cords of hardwood ties, 5,000 poles and 25,000 posts.

Ann Arbor—The 100th anniversary of the founding of Ann Arbor was celebrated recently at a banquet given in the Michigan Union. Nearly 600 people attended and the decendants of the early settlers of the village were given places of honor. The committee in charge made every attempt to have at least one member of the more than 60 old families in the city present.

Iron Mountain—Horses are holding their own with automobiles in the upper peninsula. There are almost 31,000 passenger cars and the horse census is 29,540, according to state department of agriculture figures. The number of milk cows is 71,800, with 42,000 other cattle. Menominee county leads Cloverland in milk cows, having 15,850. The sheep census is 19,300 and the swine 17,200.

Alpena—Fifty-seven creditors of the defunct Alpena County Farm Bureau to whom the bureau owed nearly $5,000, have lost out in the settlement of the claims, according to a letter received by Trustee Michael O'Brien from the Federal Court at Bay City. These creditors neglected to file their claims within the time set by the court, believing that it would be a waste of time as there were no visible assets with which to meet them.

Grand Rapids—Construction of a 58-room addition to the Clark Memorial home, both for aged persons, have been begun. The Clark home addihome and plans for the new Isabella tion, to be of two stories and of fireproof construction, will cost about $70,000. The institution is maintained by the Methodist church. The Isabella home, maintained by a local women's organization, will contain 22 sleeping rooms in addition to the living room for inmates, dining room and matron's quarters.

Lansing—Maintenance of trunk line highways during 1924 will be strictly under the direction of the state highway department, it has been decided by the state administrative boards. Counties must agree to rules made by the commissioner before they will receive funds from the state. In the cases of counties who refuse to accept the state department rules or to live up to agreements made, the state will take over maintenance and charge to the counties their proportion of the expense for maintenance.

Marquette—A conference on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep water way project will be held in Ironwood has been announced by George E. Bishop, secretary-manager of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau. Attending the conference will be John A. Doelle, secretary of the United States Tidewater Association, John Pardee, of Duluth, secretary of the Deep Waterway Commission, A. C. Carton, secretary of the Michigan Deep Waterway Commission, and Leo C Harmon, of Manistique, and Mr. Bishop, of the Michigan commission.

Hillsdale—Hillsdale is to have a woman postmaster. Mrs. F. A. Lyon recently received word of her appointment here.

Lansing—Alexander Reid, of Detroit, has been appointed to the State Board of Pharmacy by Gov. Groesbeck. He succeeds Oscar Gorenflo, of Detroit.

Grand Rapids—Diplomas have been awarded, by the Grand Rapids safety council to 80 members of the Industrial school of safety which has completed its course here.

Tustin—Arrangements have been completed to change the fire district of Deputy W. C. Kidder, of this village. Oceana county will be withdrawn and Manistee county added to his district.

Saginaw—Helpless because their motor engine was stuck in the snow, city firemen were unable to save the farm home of Sherman Sommerville last week and were obliged to watch it burn to the ground with a loss of $10,000.

Saginaw—Elf Khurafeh shrine, of Saginaw, conducted a class of 76 candidates over the "hot sands" here last week before an audience of 2,500 nobles from all sections of the local jurisdiction. Potentates were present from several shrines.

Menominee—Fire of unknown origin recently destroyed the Wilson-Henes company department store here in the heart of the business section of the city. The loss has been estimated at $300,000. No one was in the building when the fire started.

Kalamazoo—Dr. William A. Stone, formerly identified with the Traverse City and Kalamazoo state hospital, and noted specialist in mental and nervous diseases, died at his home here recently. He was stricken with heart trouble at a football game here last fall and never recovered.

Marquette — Professor V. Vampa, director of Vampa's Italian band, one of the upper peninsula's leading musical organizations, has announced his intention of leaving Ishpeming to become director of a 45-piece Italian band in Chicago, where 20 of his former musicians now are located.

Adrian—The city commission has under consideration a plan to modernize Adrian's sewage disposal system and will submit to the voters at the presidential preference primary a bond issue of $450,000. The plan calls for a disposal plant and an intercepting trunk line sewer along the Raisin river.

Lansing—The State Highway Department will make strenuous efforts this summer to control the dust clouds that follo traffic along the graveled country roads, and will for that purpose, receive bids on 7,600 tons of calcium chloride, 150,000 gallons of light oil and 2,500,000 gallons of various surfacing materials.

Manistee—Nature's annual winter art exposition has been opened along Lake Michigan at Manistee. One of the features is a Venetian bridge of snow and ice. An ice pillar, glazed and unyielding to the water, supports the bridge on one side while on the other it rests on the edge of the frozen slush cliff piled up by waves.

Detroit — Michigan's wealth increased 116.7 per cent in the 10-year period from Dec. 31, 1912, to Dec. 31, 1922, the Departmet of Commerce announced recently. In 1912, according to tht announcement, Michigan's wealth was $5,233,760,000, and in 1922 it had increased to $11,340,150,000. The per capita wealth increased from $1,806 in 1912 to $2,883 in 1922, or 59.6 per cent.

Traverse City—No more sincere grief was felt in this city over the sudden death of Rev. Father MacDonald, of Traverse City, who died suddenly in Manistee recently, than that experienced by children of the parish. In recognition of this Bishop Kelly, of Grand Rapids, ordered a funeral mass, exclusive for children, to be said two hours before the chief funeral sermon.

Cheboygan—State highway department engineers surveying the proposed new road from Cheboygan to Mackinaw City, along the Straits of Mackinac, have completed their work. The new road, a continuation of the Detroit-Mackinaw road, will open to resorters thousands of acres of beautiful shore line, heretofore inaccessible. Work on the road, it is understood, will be started early this spring.

Grand Rapids—A branch of the state testing laboratory may be established in Grand Rapids for the benefit of western Michigan, it has been stated by Dr. C. C. Slemons, member of the state health board. It is said the state is awaiting presentation of a definite proposition from the city before the proposal is submitted to the state administrative board. City officials are said to be willing to rehabilitate a hospital building and to expend about $5,000 a year for maintenance.

Battle Creek—With only $12,000,000 available for this year's paving program out of $26,000,000 paving fund, road projects in Calhoun county are likely to be retarded. Probably only three of the four new stretches of pavement approved will be built, according to Commissioner E. H. Puffer. These include a 20-foot pavement a mile long on M-60 through the village of Tekonsha; about a mile on M-60 through the village of Homer; and a 20-foot concrete pavement of about two miles on M-29 through Marshall.

Bay City—Announcement has been made recently by Eugene Fifield, president of the Bay City Scottish Rite bodies, to the effect that local Masonic bodies this year will begin the construction of a large cathedral. While no figures are given out it is estimated that the proposed building will cost about $500,000. Purchase recently of the Fred Mohr residence on Center avenue and Monroe street, gives the Masonic temple association possession of the entire block of property with the exception of the Baptist Church.

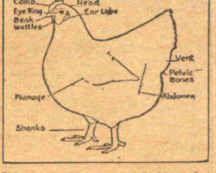
CULLING HEN FLOCK INCREASES PROFITS

The first essential for high egg production is healthy and vigorous stock, says H. M. Wells, the extension poultryman, of the University of Nebraska. Birds that have any physical defects should not be kept. The indications in health and vigor are noted by a good bright eye, a bright red comb and an active disposition. The poor layer will generally appear listless, inactive and have a poor appetite. The hen that is first off the roost in the morning, the last on the roost at night, and has a full good crop of feed when she goes to roost, usually proves to be the best layer.

Certain colors or pigment changes also indicate whether a hen is a good layer or not, especially during the summer months after a period of heavy laying. These color changes can be noted in yellow-skinned breeds. The heavy layers can usually be distinguished by the faded-out appearance of the vent, eye ring, beak, skin, and shanks. This is due to the fact that the laying fowl uses up the surplus fat in the body for egg production, using it especially from the skin. The fat carries with it the color pigment so that the good layer has lighter-colored shanks, skin and beak than has the poor layer.



Points to Observe in Picking Out Layers.

Poultry profits are not based altogether on the number of hens in the flock, but rather on the number of eggs that the hens lay. The elimination of the poor layer from the flock should begin about the first week in June or as soon as the production begins to decrease perceptibly, and should continue during the summer and fall. The accompanying diagram shows the points that should be given special consideration when culling the poor layers out of the flock.

Avoid Chilling Eggs in Gathering for Hatching

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Eggs saved for hatching should be gathered often enough through the day to prevent any possibility of the germs being killed from becoming chilled, says the United States Department of Agriculture, and for best results should be stored in a moderately cool place where the temperature is between 50 degrees and 75 degrees Fahrenheit. It is not advisable to hold hatching eggs longer than ten days or two weeks before being incubated, and the fresher they are when set the better the chances of a good hatch and strong chicks. It is harmful to wash the eggs intended for hatching, as the pores become filled and the air is shut off from the living embryo.

It is also advisable to test the eggs in each setting for the removal of the infertile ones, which will give a better chance to those that are left. This should be done about the sixth or seventh day. A simple homemade tester can be made in a few minutes from a small wooden or pasteboard box of such size that a common hand lamp, a lantern or a candle can be placed in it. A hole should be cut in the top directly over the flame, and another a little smaller than an egg in one side opposite the flame. The testing should be done in a dark room.

In testing, the light shining through the egg held against the hole in the side of the box, shows the condition of the egg. An infertile egg is clear, while the fertile egg will show a spiderlike formation, a center with long, crooked threads, leading outward, and this formation will float as the egg is turned.

Feed Sprouted Oats to Poultry During Winter

The poultry raiser who has not yet adopted sprouted oats as a part of the hen's bill of fare, especially during the winter months, is not only depriving his hens of feed that would be relished and which is most valuable in feeding for egg production, but is also overlooking one of the best opportunities to save on the cost of feeding.

Spring Range for Fowls Needed for Good Health

As soon as spring comes, the fowls should be given the range of a large yard where they can pick green food and dig for worms. If any of the fowls have diarrhea, add to each gallons of their drinking water one teaspoonful of powdered muriate of ammonia. Supply this three days, then give pure water three days, then the medicine, and so on. Diet is more than medicine in most cases of indigestion.

Best Drinking Fountains.

Provide drinking fountains which prevent the fowl from wetting its wattles, and place the fountain upon a platform so that the water will not be spilled or flirted into the litter on the floor.

Warm Water in Winter.

Warm the water in the winter. Your birds cannot drink too much. Succulent feeds to eat, such as green grass, sprouted oats, roots, cabbage, etc., also contain a great amount of water.

Macadamized Roads

When John Louden Macadam, in 1810, began to experiment with broken stone for building roads, he met with much opposition from the "stand-pat" road builders, who contended that the expense would be prohibitive and that anyway, broken stone in courses of assorted sizes was no better than broken stone of one size in one course.

Time proved the merit of Macadam's idea, although the century and nine years which have elapsed since his first practical experiment was tried at Bristol, England, in 1815, have greatly altered the practice of macadamized road building.

Up to the advent of the automobile, Macadam's principles were employed in their entirety, the broken stone being bonded with rock dust and water, the former replaced by the impact of iron shod vehicles and hoofs, the latter by rain.

When the automobile, with its rapid movement and broad rubber tires, sucked the rock dust from between the stones in spite of the gentle bonding effort of the water it was realized that something was lacking in the roads used for fast, soft-shod traffic, which is lack was not felt under slow and steel-shod traffic. That "something" was a better bond than water. It was found in oils and ars and bituminous compounds. Luckily for the millions of dollars invested in macadamized roads, an oil, tar, or bituminous binder could, and was, applied with success to existing roads, thus saving to the taxpayer miles of highways which were otherwise doomed.

To-day, all macadamized roads are built with the bituminous oil or tar binder applied during the building, but the basic principles of larger foundation and smaller upper course, topped by a wearing surface of fine crushed rock and dust, bound in place by something, is still employed. Macadam's greatest monument is the dropping of the capital letter in his name and making it the label for all roads built of crushed rock laid in courses of different sizes.

A tax on gasoline, effective in Nevada for less than a year, has netted the State more than $110,000. This money is used for highway improvement.

Some Meat Figures

Charles Hitchcock recently presented us with a copy of the Daily Drovers Journal published in Chicago and surprising statistics are given therein concerning the meat trade and its by-products in the U. S. The average layman if he should ever give this a thought, would probably excuse it from mind with only a slight comprehension of the immense volume of business which clusters around the swine trade alone, to say nothing of other meat products which go to feed the nation.

The amount of meat consumed in this country during 1923 was in round numbers 18,481,000,000 lbs. Of this amount 6,918,000,000 lbs. was beef; 873,000,000 was veal; 514 000,000 was mutton; 3,000,000 was goat and 10,113,000,000 was pork.

WOULD GO TWICE AROUND WORLD

It is not easy to grasp the real magnitude of the meat producing industry in the United States but a comparison may help to show how inconceivable it is. Suppose we have the 81,532,600 hogs slaughtered last year in a single drove. Allowing 4 feet as the length of a hog, in single file they would stretch out for 61,770 miles or twice around the world at the equator, with enough left over to reach from the nerth pole to the southern end of South America.

This same great drove would stand 21 abreast from New York to SanFrancisco. A prodigious meat appetite is needed to consume all the pork and the great quantities of other meats and lard.

Good Citizenship The Object Of Our public School Training

The primary and ultimate purpose of our public schools is the training of young people for citizenship. If they fail to develop good citizens they fail to do the very thing for which they were founded and lay a useless burden upon tax payers.

To accomplish the purpose of their existence it is necessary to adopt a course of study calculated to produce good citzens and to employ teachers of strong moral character to put it into operation.

A good citzen is one who is not only well-informed in what are known as the secular branches of knowledge, but one who is also well developed morally, so that he can be trusted in any position whether as a private citizen or as a public official.

Such citizens cannot be produced without giving special attention in public schools to the training of the moral nature.

A great body of the American people are Christains in so far as they recognize the moral code of the Bible as a rule of conduct in every sphere of life.

There are many laws on the statue books of our forty-eight states which are based upon the precepts of Decalogue. Our public school curriculum should include instruction in obedience to these laws, in the moral principles on which they are based, and in reverence for God to whom both individuals or nations are accountable. Civil government has no right to punish for crime unless it teaches its citizens the principles and laws of mortality. But the supreme aim should be to give such moral and religious training as will lift our citizens above the criminal level.

It has been said that "it will not cost the state one-tenth as much to teach the boys morals in childhood as it does to build prisons for them during their manhood. * * Superficial men have confused the teaching of morals that are universal and concern market place, street home and forum, with the teaching of denominational tenets But the Ten Commandments are not denominational any more than the multiplication table is denominational, or gravity, or an eclipse of the sun."

President Hadley of Yale University has said "I do not believe that you are going to make the right kind of citizens by a Godless education and adding religion afterward."

Judge Thomas O'Sullivan of New York City, gives as one chief reason for the pravalence of crime among young men, even those of respectable families, "a lack of religious and moral instruction in the schools."

Bird S, Coler declares "I for a long time have believed that nothing but positive religious instruction can protect the country. The schools are being conducted on a basis or a plan sundementally wrong, any they are responsible for the spread of Socialism,"

The Rev. Washington Gladden says, "Education that is not founded on religion is a misnomer and will never accomplish what genuine education is expected to bring about."

Say Hydrated Lime Claims Overstated

Claims being made in the state at present that a few hnndred pounds of hydrated lime are as good as a ton or more of limestone for agricultural purposes are not borne out by results of experimental work at various Michgan Agricultural College test stations.

"Such statements are erroneous' says Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the college soils department, "and doubtless lead to a high per acre lime cost in certain sections of the state."

Results of experiments on the relative efficiency of hydrated lime, finely ground limestone, and medium ground limestone, carried on by the college at the Cass County farm and other experimental plots, have thrown interesting light on this important question. The conclusions are supported, also, by work in other states.

"As a resnlt of these and many other experiments," says Dr. McCool, "we have steadfastly maintained that under most conditions it is doubtless more practicable for a farmer to use limestone, preferably the finer material, such as the finely pulverized stone or the medium finely ground limestone, than it is for him to use the hydrated.

"We have adopted the following figures for a working basis; 500 pounds of hydrated lime, 800 pounds of finely pulverized lime, or 1,000 pounds of medium finely ground material should be considered to give the same results the first year of application, provided they are well incorporated with the soil and there is a sufficient amount of rainfall.

Gardeners Lose With Inferior Varities

Michigan market gardeners are losing vast amounts of profits each year through the planting of inferior varieties, according to George E. Starr, vegetable specialist with the horticultural staff at the Michigan Agricultural College.

The experienced grower, according to Starr, is acquainted with many of the dependable varities, but an inspection of the vegetables on display in any of the state's city markets will show that even he might well make changes in his planting list, with profit both to himself and to the customer.

The beginner, the inexperinced grower, is often at an absolute loss to know which varieties to choose. The large lists carried by the average seed catalogue result frequently in selection of varieties which are poor in quality and entirely unsuited to the local conditions.

"To be most profitable", says Mr. Starr, "a variety should possess at least three imporant qualfications: productiveness, attractive appearance, and high quality. For nearly every kind of vegetable there are a number of outstanding varieties in which these characters are combined to a high degree.

"The expense connected with any intensive gardening operation is so great today. that the gardener cannot afford to overlook any point which may tend to add to his income. The best of cultivation will be of little benefit if the variety is an inferior one. Hence the grower should make every effort to secure the best strain of the best variety that may be available."

"Information on vegetable varieties may be had by writing to the horticultural department, Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing.

Urge help In State Forestry Come-Back

Essential features in a policy to bring about the perpetuation and improvement of Michigan's forest industry have been outlined by Prof. A. K. Chittenden, head of the forestry division at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Michigan is said to present excellent opportunities for timber raising, and Professor Chittenden predicts that with a little care the state will "come back" as a leading timber producing state.

1. Adequate appropriations for the prevention and suppression of forest fires.
2. An equitable system of taxation of forest lands so as to make practicable the growing of timber as a private enterprise. This could propably best be accomplished by taxing land and timber separately, the tax on the timber to come when it is cut.
3. Utilization for timber production of idle land and land too poor for farming.
4. Extension of State forests by exchange of tax lands and enlargement of the Michigan National Forests.
5. A gradual increase in the area of land planted to trees each year on the State Forests and on the Michigan National Forests.
6. Federal aid in fire protection in reforestation and in forest extension and experimental work on a fifty-fifty basis with the State.
7. Proper care and handling of farm woodlands.
8. Care and planting of road side trees, the development of city forests, and the employment of county foresters to look after such work.

WASHINGTON
Inside Out

A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Hiram Johnson's wife, Minnie McNeal Johnson, came valiantly to the defense of her husband when it appeared that his name was about to be dragged into the naval oil scandal. Although she would authorize nothing for publication, she pleaded tearfully with the correspondents not to be led astray by reports of the connection of any members of the Johnson family with the Doheny oil interests. Her husband, at the time, was in North Dakota fighting for votes in his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Gathering News in the National Capital has reached such complex proportions that a Washington Printer has come to rescue of the correspondents. His name is James William Bryan and he has offered to take upon himself the task of gathering up each day all the statements, manifestoes, announcements and "hand outs" emanating from the Government departments and various private organizations for subsequent distribution to the press representatives at stated times during the day. The plan is not expected to meet with great success as it would tend to eliminate much of the element of chance from the job of reporting news of the capital and reduce it to a matter of rote. Bryan's scheme has been broadcast, however, on engraved stationery and he has great hopes of putting it over.

It is a matter worthy of note in connection with all the scandal now rampart here that in the cases of the Cabinet members involved, members of the House of Representatives have been slow to move for impeachment, as provided in the Constitution as punishment for "high crimes and misdemeanors." One reason is that history discloses that it is extremely difficult to impeach a public officer. Impeachments have thus been few and far between. No Cabinet officer has ever been sent back to private life by that route.

Investigation to determine the causes of the World War is the proposal before Congress. It was made by Senator Robert Latham Owen of Oklahoma, who thinks the Senate would perform a great service to humanity by getting at all the facts--if possible. Owen is a native of Virginia and his ancestry is Scotch-Irish and Indian his mother having been a member of the Cherokee Nation. Among other achievements, Owen claims credit for the Federal Reserve Act. He is a close student of international affairs.

Stony silence on the part of Administration leaders meets the veiled charge that politics was chiefly responsible for the cancellation of the proposed flight of the airship Shenandoah to the North Pole this summer. Democrats point out that flight would have been either a great suceess or a noted failure right in the midst of the presidential campaign and that the Coolidge Administration couldn't afford to take a chance on it being a failure. So the buck was passed to Congress to approve or reject the Navy's plan. Before an O. K. is possible it will be too late to start this year.

Calvin Coolidge has a new walking stick. He sported it for the first time when he went to the Ellipse back of the White House to greet the winner in a marathon race staged by one of the local newspapers.

The first attempt to get Congress to act upon a beer and cider bill gotonly eight votes in the House. The move was made by John Philip Hill of Maryland, the wet leader, who tried to get the manufacture and sale of beer authorized through an amendment to the tax bill. The House refused to even consider the Hill proposals. Hill declares, however, that he has not lost hope and that he will try it again when the situation looks more favorable.

Another Diplomatic post for the United States is in prospect. Negotiations are now in progress between London, Ottawa, and Washington with the object of an exchange of Ministers between Canada and the United States. The Canadians feel that their interests in this country are so extensive that they are entitled to a separate voice at the seat of the American Government.

Maple Syrup Time is Here

From a treatise put out by the U. S. department of Agriculture we glean the following facts concerning maple syrup production:

The spout or spile, the tube thru which the sap flows into the bucket is usually of metal bnt often hollow reeds or alder with the pith removed, are used. The best forms are perfectly cylindrical, smooth, of an even taper, making them easy to insert without interfering with the wood tissue. The perfect spout is strong enough to support the bucket safely, and should bring the whole weight on the bark of the tree, not on the itssue or sapwood. Spouts with spurs or anchors tend to split the bark and crush the sap wood thereby tending to decrease the flow of sap and allowing a leak Spouts having small holes are best because a large hole allows the bore to dry out faster when there are strong winds. Various forms of spouts on the market are good and others that will serve just as well can be made at home. The spout should have a spur to hang the bucket on and under no circumstances whatever should a nail be driven into the tree. As a rule a wood spout is not strong enough to support a full bucket, also they soon become foul from bacteria and sour the sap. Their use means a decrease in the yield and a poor grade of syrup. In driving spouts into the tree care should be raken not to compress the sapwood or split the bark. Either will decrease the flow of sap and a split will rot the tree. At the end of the season use care in removing the spouts.

LOCATION OF TAP HOLES

Befora tapping the side of the tree should be brushed off with a stiff broom to remove all loose bark and dirt and a spot where the bark looks healthy some distance from a previous tapping, should be selected. Care should also be taken to tap where a bucket will hang level and be partly supported by the tree Tap waist high and select a place on the tree which is not shaded by some other tree. In general the south side of the tree is best for earliest runs, next after the east side. Some men believe that holes on the north side flow longest.

Use a sharp bit that makes a clean-cut hole. If the bit is rusty or dull it cuts a rough feathered hole which soon clogs and becomes foul, stopping the sap. Be careful to clean out all shavings and never cut away the bark as it shortens the life of the tree.

SIZE OF TAP HOLE

Among sugar makers the size of the hole is a much mooted question All agree that it should be of such size as to heal over in a season or two years at the longest. General practice seems to indicate that $\frac{3}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch is the best diameter. If the season is long and a warm spell stops the flow, the holes can be reamed out to $\frac{1}{2}$ to 5-8 of an inch thereby increasing the run. A thirteen thirty-seconds of an inch bit is often used. The bit should be very sharp and should bring the shavings to the surface. Its direction is slightly upward into the tree. This slant allows the hole to drain readily. The depth of the hole is an important point on which makers disagree. It should however be regulated by the size of the tree, as only the layers next to the bark are alive and contain enough sap to flow freely. Toward the interior the flow diminishes. With the ordinary tree a hole not over $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 inches deep seems to be best. In small second-growth trees a short incision or just through the sapwood is best. Dark colored shavings indicate the proper depth.

In locating the sugar house it is better to place it on a side hill so the drainage is good and if a sap storage cistern is built in the hill above the sap will run by gravity into the pan, thus doing away with pumping into an elevated supply tank. A shed at the entrance is is desirable to keep the fuel dry, and if the producer expects to supply the trade from any sizable sugar grove it pays to use modern evaporators and apparatus throughout, as sanitation and neatness must be observed if the product is to be sold The days of the cauldron kettle, like the old-time grain cradle, are gone forever. The fragrance of boiling sap and the call of the blue bird and the "febee" from the thickers hail the maple syrup worker,and Dame Nature marshals all her forces to recoup the freezing, blasting results of winter.

Chicago Is Rather Obese

Chicago is rather obese; a voluptuous beauty with a breath. Of the medley of sounds in Chicago, the one that lingers is the grinding of brakes on Michigan Boulevard. If Chicago had as much faith in God as in its brakes, heaven would be overcrowded.

The wheat pit is in Chicago. The wheat pit fluctuates; it flctuates greatly at times. Lately they have had to brace the walls with steel girders and constantly watch the levels. Chicago says that it wasn't the wheat fluctuations that threw the building off its base. but a subsidence of earth. But you ask Kansas!

One man actually toid me that Chicago was prosperous; he even quoted figures to prove it. But he was a dull wit. Why stress so obvious a fact? The general attitude is "Well, what do you think of Chicago? Not that we care a d—n what you think; we're satisfied with it."

Chicago is a sausage city, made from the mixture of many meats, ground fine. Fat and muscle, flesh and blood, have gone into its making. Some are floating in rich gravy; others are fried in oil. There are two extreme Chicagos but in betweem is a lot that is just plain "hot dog."

Chicago wants to be a world port It probabjy will be. If Chicago wants to be a thing, it doesn't hesitate to try. I shouldn't be surprised if some day fashions change and it is more desirable to be considered a South Sea island. Then Chicago will lay a pipe line to the Pacific ocean and build itself a coral reef.

Prettiest Girl in Michigan

Who is the prettiest girl in Michgan? A state wide search for her has begun and when she is found she will be rewarded in a manner that one usually hears about only when speaking of dreams or story books.

She is wanted to take part in the great Michigan Industrial Exposition te be held in Detroit May 3 to 17, to participate in the spectacle "Enchantment." From the contestants will be chosen one who is to be known as the "Girl you can't forget" and to her will go as a reward a haudsome sedan. She will be brought to Detroit as a guest of the Expositisn, will have her expenses paid, and will receive a salary in addition.

The girl is to be selected by photograph' All she has to do is send us a late picture with her name and address all complete and in full, written on the back. The picture should be addressed to: "Beauty Contest, Michigan Industrial Exposition, Convention Hall, Detroit." It should be mailed not later than April 2. The pictures will be passed upon by a committee of artists headed by Joseph Kraemer, head of the Art Department of The Detroit News; Russel Legg, of the Detroit Times and Arthur Marchner, The Detroit News, and members of the Scarab Club.

"Enchantment", the beautiful spectacle in which the winner is to participate, tells the story of a little girl, who, because of her naughtiness in destroying a garden of flowers, is seized by gnomes and carried away to their cave, where they are filling a great cauldron with Hate, Envy, Malice and all the unpleasant things of life. Here the little girl has a series of exciting adventures, until she is freed by Mercy to behold the "Girl You Can't Forget" and all her charming court.

The part of the little girl is to be played by Miriam Baptista, the child star of "Humoresque", "Smiling Through" and famous pictures.

A ballet of 50 will take part in the spectacle, and there will be national dances and other deluxe vaudeville acts.

The winner of the contest, in addition to receiving the automobile and taking part in "Enchantment", will be the central figure in anumber of social events. There will be a dance in her honor at one of the exclusive country clubs, boats rides, automobile trips, and other forms of entertainment, all under the chaperonage of well known Detroit matrons.

If everything irons out all right Hillsdale will have a lady postmistress after the present postmaster's term expires in June. Two active candidates, Mr. Clancey and Dr. Frankhauser, have been after the position and their friends are lined up about equal. Congressman Williams who desires to have the ship sail smoothly over the political waters will not recommend either gentleman as both are real good friends to him, so he has concluded to recommend Mrs. F. A. Lyon who has been Probate Register for the past three years.—Camden Advance

FOSSIL CHANGES IDEAS OF BOTANICAL HISTORY

Search Rewarded by Important Geological Find.

Chicago.—Discovery of the stem of a plant similar to that of a corn stalk in a lump of limestone found imbedded in a coal seam in Illinois has changed hitherto accepted ideas of plant evolution and pushed the mystery of the origin of flowering plants millions of years further back into the geological past. Prof. A. C. Noe, paleobotanist for the University of Chicago, unearthed the revolutionary evidence after a systematic search.

The strata from which he obtained the limestone lump, or "coal ball," was identified as belonging to the carboniferous, or great coal, age of the Paleozoic era, the next to the oldest of the four great geological time divisions which contain the fossil record of the past life on the earth. He classified the fossil stem as that of an angiosperm, or a flowering plant which had its seed inclosed in a seed container, as are the seeds of our apple, rose and oak.

No flowering plants of this sort have heretofore been proved to have grown so far back as this period of ancient geological times. The specimens previously reported of land plants with such highly organized structure have been found in parts of the earth's crust formed during the Mesozoic era, or geological middle ages, millions of years nearer to the present time.

Botanists have assumed from such evidence that the flowering plants had just begun to appear about the latter part of the age when the plants that form our coal flourished. They have expected to find the more primitive flowering plants at this earlier time. Professor Noe's discovery in the coal measures of a plant representing what had been taken to be a far advanced stage in plant evolution indicates that land plants must have gone through an enormously long period of development before the earliest period recorded in the fossil rocks.

MISS LI BREAKS ANCIENT TRADITION OF CHINESE

INTERNATIONAL

Breaking a tradition of ancient China by traveling without an entourage, Miss Grace Li, demure daughter of Li Yuan-Hung, president of the Chinese republic, arrived at Wellesley, Mass., accompanied only by Miss Harriet Chou, and rented a hall bedroom in a small boarding house on a side street. The girls entered Wellesley to take a two-year course in political economy. Miss Li said she believed in woman suffrage and that Chinese girls are no longer betrothed in infancy. "We are not bossed nowadays," she added. She is unmarried, she said, because she had never seen a man she wanted to marry.

California's Governor Seeks County Supervisor

Sacramento, Cal.—The worm has turned and the job really seeks the man. Gov. Friend W. Richardson is in the unusual position of having a political plum which apparently nobody wants. It is in Alpine county, where the reluctance of the inhabitants to hold office has caused the governor to have posted in the courthouse at Markleeville a notice calling for applicants for appointment as supervisor.

Supervisor George H. Luhrs of Alpine county created the vacancy by resigning. Patiently the governor waited for the army of deserving aspirants. None came. When he decided to advertise, he found there was no newspaper published in the county.

Ex-German Kaiser Now Seeks Greater Seclusion

Doorn.—Instead of time softening the seclusion of the former German emperor, he is about to retire even more completely from the gaze of the sightseer, for he has ordered the erection of a barricade to prevent his residence from being overlooked from the highroad. The framework for the new screen, which is eight feet high, will successfully prevent anyone from getting even a fleeting glimpse of the fretful monarch as he walks in his garden.

The recent publicity given to a bonfire celebration in the grounds of Doorn house is said to have been the motive for the greater privacy.

CHEVROLET

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

Russian Chemist Makes Strong Wire From Salt

A wonderful discovery has been made by a Russian scientist, who claims to have found a method of making wire stronger than steel out of common rock salt. His discovery is the result of a series of extraordinary experiments in the mutability of metals by structural chemistry.

The scientist found that by submitting the rock salt to high heat pressure before the elementary crystals began to decay he arrested the decay by changing the structural arrangement of the atoms and molecules, and this change increased the durability and ductility of the substance 300 times, says London Tit-Bits. He is continuing his experiments with other metal substances.

If this discovery can be applied to metals it will revolutionize the world. It will mean, amongst other things, trains capable of running 200 miles an hour and turbine steamers that could reach Australia in ten days.

Metal Star Marks Spot Where Abe Lincoln Stood

In front of Independence hall in Philadelphia, stands a statue of George Washington. It replaces the marble statue of the great American which was placed there by the contributions of the school children of Pennsylvania.

The weather was causing the marble to disintegrate and for that reason it had been removed to a corridor on the second floor of the city hall. On the sidewalk, near the new statue, in front of the cradle of liberty, is a metal star which marks the spot where Abraham Lincoln stood to raise a new American flag during the Civil war. The body of Lincoln reposed in state in Independence hall during the period when it was being conveyed to its place of burial in Springfield. The bodies of Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams and others were accorded similar honor.—Detroit News.

> SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. There is a fight, in which Jack distinguishes himself.

"We didn't have no more trouble with them. I put one o' Boneses' boys on a hoss an' hustled him up the valley fer help. The wimmen captives was bawlin'. I tol' 'em to straighten out their faces an' go with Jack an' his father down to Fort Stanwix. They were kind o' leg weary an' excited, but they hadn't been hurt yit. Another day er two would 'a' fixed 'em. Jack an' his father an' mother tuk 'em back to the pastur', an' Jack run up to the barn fer ropes an' bridles. In a little while they got some hoofs under 'em an' picked up the childern an' toddled off. I went out in the bush to find Buckeye an' he were dead as the whale that swallered Jonah."

So ends the letter of Solomon Binkus.

Jack Irons and his family and that of Peter Bones—the boys and girls riding two on a horse—with the captives filed down the Mohawk trail. It was a considerable cavalcade of twenty-one people and twenty-four horses and colts, the latter following.

Solomon Binkus and Peter Bones and his son Israel stood on guard until the boy John Bones returned with help from the upper valley. A dozen men and boys completed the disarming of the band and that evening set out with them on the south trail.

It is doubtful if this history would have been written but for an accidental and highly interesting circumstance. In the first party young Jack Irons rode a colt, just broken, with the girl captive, now happily released. The boy had helped everyone to get away; then there seemed to be no ridable horse for him. He walked for a distance by the stranger's mount as the latter was wild. The girl was silent for a time after the colt had settled down, now and then wiping tears from her eyes. By and by she asked:

"May I lead the colt while you ride?"

"Oh, no, I am not tired," was his answer.

"I want to do something for you."

"Why?"

"I am so grateful. I feel like the king's cat. I am trying to express my feelings. I think I know, now, why the Indian women do the drudgery."

As she looked at him her dark eyes were very serious.

"I have done little," said he. "It is Mr. Binkus who rescued you. We live in a wild country among savages and the white folks have to protect each other. We're used to it."

"I never saw or expected to see men like you," she went on. "I have read of them in books, but I never hoped to see them and talk to them. You are like Ajax and Achilles."

"Then I shall say that you are like the fair lady for whom they fought."

"I will not ride and see you walking."

"Then sit forward as far as you can and I will ride with you," he answered.

In a moment he was on the colt's back behind her. She was a comely maiden. An authority no less respectable than Major Duncan has written that she was a tall, well-shaped, fun-loving girl a little past sixteen and good to look upon, "with dark eyes and auburn hair, the latter long and heavy and in the sunlight richly colored"; that she had slender fingers and a beautiful skin, all showing that she had been delicately bred. He adds that he envied the boy who had ridden before and behind her half the length of Tryon county.

It was a close association and Jack found it so agreeable that he often referred to that ride as the most exciting adventure of his life.

"What is your name?" he asked.

"Margaret Hare," she answered.

"How did they catch you?"

"Oh, they came suddenly and stealthily, as they do in the story books, when we were alone in camp. My father and the guides had gone out to hunt."

"Did they treat you well?"

"The Indians let us alone, but the two white men annoyed and frightened us. The old chief kept us near him."

"The old chief knew better than to let any harm come to you until they were sure of getting away with their plunder."

"We were in the valley of death and you have led us out of it. I am sure that I do not look as if I were worth saving. I suppose that I must have turned into an old woman. Is my hair white?"

"No. You are the best-looking girl I ever saw," he declared with rustic frankness.

"I never had a compliment that pleased me so much?" she answered, as her elbows tightened a little on his hands, which were clinging to her coat. "I almost loved you for what you did to the old villain. I saw blood on the side of your head. I fear he hurt you?"

"He jabbed me once. It is nothing."

"How brave you were!"

"I think I am more scared now than I was then," said Jack.

"Scared! Why?"

"I am not used to girls except my sisters."

She laughed and answered:

"And I am not used to heroes. I am sure you cannot be so scared as I am, but I rather enjoy it. I like to be scared—a little. This is so different."

"I like you," he declared with a laugh.

"I feared you would not like an English girl. So many North Americans hate England."

"The English have been hard on us."

"What do you mean?"

"They send us governors whom we do not like; they make laws for us which we have to obey; they impose hard taxes which are not just and they will not let us have a word to say about it."

"I think it is wrong and I'm going to stand up for you," the girl answered.

"Where do you live?" he asked.

"In London. I am an English girl, but please do not hate me for that. I want to do what is right and I shall never let anyone say a word against Americans without taking their part."

"That's good," the boy answered. "I'd love to go to London."

"Well, why don't you?"

"It's a long way off."

"Do you like good-looking girls?"

"I'd rather look at them than eat."

"Well, there are many in London."

"One is enough," said Jack.

"Don't call me that. If you would just call me Jack Irons I'd like it better. But first you'll want to know how I behave. I am not a fighter."

"I am sure that your character is as good as your face."

"Gosh! I hope it ain't so dark colored," said Jack.

"I knew all about you when you took my hand and helped me on the pony—or nearly all. You are a gentleman."

"I hope so."

"Are you a Presbyterian?"

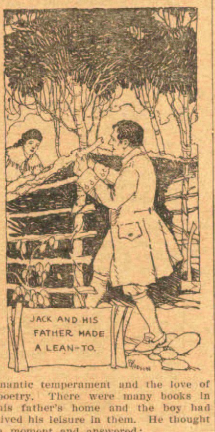
"No—Church of England."

"I was sure of that. I have seen Indians and Shakers, but I have never seen a Presbyterian."

When the sun was low and the company ahead were stopping to make a camp for the night, the boy and girl dismounted. She turned facing him and asked:

"You didn't mean it when you said that I was good-looking—did you?"

The bashful youth had imagination and, like many lads of his time, a romantic temperament and the love of poetry. There were many books in his father's home and the boy had lived his leisure in them. He thought a moment and answered:



JACK AND HIS FATHER MADE A LEAN-TO.

"Yes, I think you are as beautiful as a young doe playing in the water lilies."

"And you look as if you believed yourself," said she. "I am sure you would like me better if I were fixed up a little."

"I do not think so."

"How much better a boy's head looks with his hair cut close like yours. Our boys have long hair. They do not look so much like—men."

"Long hair is not for rough work in the bush," the boy remarked.

"You really look brave and strong. One would know that you could do things."

"I've always had to do things."

They came up to the party, who had stopped to camp for the night. It was a clear, warm evening. After they had hobbled the horses in a near meadow flat, Jack and his father made a lean-to for the women and children and roofed it with bark. Then they cut wood and built a fire and gathered boughs for bedding. Later, tea was made and beefsteaks and bacon grilled on spits of green birch, the dripping fat being caught on slices of toasting bread whereon the meat was presently served.

The masterful power with which the stalwart youth and his father swung the ax and their cunning craftsmanship impressed the English woman and her daughter and were soon to be the topic of many a London tea party. Mrs. Hare spoke of it as she was eating her supper.

"It may surprise you further to learn that the boy is fairly familiar with the Aeneid and the Odes of Horace and the history of France and England," said John Irons.

"That is the most astonishing thing I have ever heard!" she exclaimed. "How has he done it?"

"The minister was his master until we went into the bush. Then I had to be farmer and school-teacher. There is a great thirst for learning in this New World."

"How do you find time for it?"

"Oh, we have leisure here—more than you have. In England even your wealthy young men are overworked. They dine out and play cards until three in the morning and sleep until midday. Then luncheon and the cockfight and tea and parliament! The best of us have only three steady habits. We work and study and sleep."

"And fight savages," said the woman.

"We do that, sometimes, but it is not often necessary. If it were not for white savages, there would be no red ones. You would find America a good country to live in."

"At least I hope it will be good to sleep in this night," the woman answered, yawning. "Dreamland is now the only country I care for."

The ladies and children, being near spent by the day's travel and excitement, turned in soon after supper. The men slept on their blankets, by the fire, and were up before daylight for a dip in the creek near by. While they were getting breakfast, the women and children had their turn at the creekside.

That day the released captives were in better spirits. Soon after noon the company came to a swollen river, where the horses had some swimming to do. The older animals and the following colts went through all right, but the young stallion which Jack and Margaret were riding began to rear and plunge. The girl in her fright jumped off his back in swift water and was swept into the rapids and tumbled about and put in some danger before Jack could dismount and bring her ashore.

"You have increased my debt to you," she said, when at last they were mounted again. "What a story this is! It is terribly exciting."

They rode on in silence, feeling now the beauty of the green woods. It had become a magic garden full of new and wonderful things. Some power had entered them and opened their eyes. The thrush's song grew fainter in the distance. The boy was first to speak.

"I think that bird must have had a long flight sometime," he said.

"Why?"

"I am sure that he has heard the music of Paradise. I wonder if you are as happy as I am."

"I was never so happy," she answered.

"What a beautiful country we are in! I have forgotten all about the danger and the hardship and the evil men. Have you ever seen any place like it?"

"No. For a time we have been riding in fairyland."

"I know why," said the boy.

"Why?"

"It is because we are riding together. It is because I see you."

"Oh, dear! I cannot see you. Let us get off and walk," she proposed.

They dismounted.

"Did you mean that honestly?"

"Honestly," he answered.

"I was going to say something. It would have been most unmaidenly," she remarked.

"There's something in me that will not stay unsaid. I love you," he declared.

She held up her hand with a serious look in her eyes. Then, for a moment, the boy returned to the world of reality.

"I am sorry. Forgive me. I ought not to have said it," he stammered.

"But didn't you really mean it?" she asked with troubled eyes.

"I mean that and more, but I ought not to have said it now. It isn't fair. You have just escaped from a great danger and have got a notion that you are in debt to me and you don't know much about me anyhow."

She stood in his path looking up at him.

"Jack," she whispered. "Please say it again."

No, it was not gone. They were still in the magic garden.

"I love you and I wish this journey could go on forever," he said.

> "I, too, will wait," he answered, "and as long as I have to."

Once a clock saved a man's life by striking 13.

During the reign of William and Mary a man named John Hatfield was in the life guards. One night he was on sentry duty on the terrace at Windsor and was reported to have slept at his post. He would have been sentenced to death, but Hatfield pleaded that he was awake at midnight and heard the clock of St. Paul's strike 13. Several witnesses came forward to say that it did strike 13, and Hatfield's life was saved.

There was a good deal of discussion before the matter was settled as to whether a clock could strike 13, and also as to whether the clock of St. Paul's could possibly be heard at Windsor. In those days, of course, London was much quieter at midnight than it is now, and people were found who declared that when weather conditions were suitable they had heard it.

On the morning of March 14, 1861 Tom of Westminster, instead of striking 6, went on for 13 strokes. This caused great alarm to some people in the city, "it having always been considered that such an occurrence was of ill omen to the royal family." Their fears were realized, for the duchess of Kent, though perfectly well in the morning, died the same day.—London Tit-Bits.

Expensively Good

A matter-of-fact father of an embryo poet handed some of the lad's efforts to a distinguished author of verse, and asked for his opinion.

"Well, what's the answer?" queried the successful stockman.

"Alas!" sighed the real poet, "those things are so good, I'm afraid you'll have to support Henry the rest of his life."—Writer's Monthly.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Willis living west of North Adams on the Jonesville road, passed away at the home on Thursday of last week. Funeral services were held on Saturday at 2 o'clock, Rev. Hodgeboom officiating.

Rev. W. W. Gray and John Duguid attended the Albion district ministerial meeting at Jackson Monday. Nearly every charge in the district vas reresented, and a splendid meeting is reported. Bishop Henderson and Dr. Hugh Ken nedy of Detroit were present, also a number of laymen of the denomination.

We are pleased to note that inside the budget of Michigan's 1924 plan for good roads will be found the 3-mile stretch between Hillsdale and Jonesville which is to be paved with concrete the entire distance. Hillsdale can now get a little practical satisfaction out of the road building program since it has turned in her favor. Last fall the Governor put a kibosh on expensive road work in the state which brought forth censure from Hillsdale because it put a heavier tax upon the citizens to put in the Bacon street paving.

It is often a curious instance how names will repeat and yet the persons who own these names are entirely innocent of wrong doing in most cases. The Jackson Daily New contained a couple of stories on Wednesday which concerned the toting of liquor. Hoke Smith and James J. Davis were both convicted of liquor violation at Jackson the other day. We are hanpy to state however, that neither of these men were the original fellows. Hoke Smith served in one president's cabinet as postmaster general we think and everybody knows who James Davis is.

Jackson is noted for such char acters and quite often we see the item that a certain respectable person of the same name is not the one who has been con icted of a crime in the city courts. It is rather comical to read but very disconcert ing to the parties in the deal.

Three Generations of Musicians

Three generations were represented recently in a musical entertainment given in the Methodist church in Jonesville. The personnel of this unusual aggregation consisted of W. H. Snyder, saxaphone player, his daughter, Mrs. Carl Rock, pianist, and his grand-son, Wilfred Rock, vocalist.

The head of this trio, W. H. Snyder, has been connected with the Jonesville choir for approximately thirty years. For a number of years he was choir leader. In addition to his talents as a vocalist Mr. Snyder plays a 'cello and saxaphone with ability.

All three here mentioned sing well, and Master Wilfred aged 8, gives promise of exceptional musical attainments. His father, Carl Rock, sings well and also plays the cornet. Therefore it appears that the lad's instinct for music is highly developed thru both inheritance and environment and those who have heard him sing predict that his accomplishments later in life may result in something very unusual. The lad is a grand-son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rock of this village.

Shower

A very pleasant social function took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs, Albert Brown in Moscow township Saturday evening, Mar. 1, the occasion being a miscellaneous shower for Mr. and Mrs. Mel vin Hart who were recently married. House decorations were in pink and white. A. N. Brown announced to the guests that since they had not been privileged to witness the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Hart, the ceremony would be performed again to make sure the knot was securely tied. While the wedding march was being played by Margaret Kies the happy couple descended the stairs, proceeded by Owen Vickers, the little brother of the bride as ring bearer. V. J. Brown who performed the ceremony, Wilmer Morgan and Miss Harriet Clark as best man and bridesmaid They took their places beneath the wedding bells in a prettily decorated corner of the parlor, The ribbon bearers were the Miss es Doris Denning, Facelia Carpen ter, Alice Chilson and Freda Kies Congratulations and a dainty two-course luncheon followed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart received many beautiful gifts. The guests numbered thirty. The Misses Edith Travis and Josephine Poor of Hillsdale were in attendance. Mrs. Hart was formerly Miss Fedelma Vickers and a member of the class of '22 of J. H. S., while Mr. Hart graduated from North Adams high school. Their home will be at Addison.—Jonesville Independent.

The subject for the Epworth League lesson Sunday evening will be "The farthest reach of Divine Love;" Leader Myrtle Rogers, Read John 3: 16 Heb 1: 1 3; John 1: 1:5 9: 11. A contest for new members is now on with Lorita Wertz leader for the seniors and Ivan Shullz for the junior members.

Luren D. Dickinson recently told the Hudson editor that he had about decided to be a candidate for governor this year. He is of the opinion that Groesbeck's stock is flat as far as the farmers are concerned on account of his kicking their dog (the gas tax) around so severely last fall but in manufacturing centers it is same as ever.

William O'Meara, a resident of Hillsdale many years and highly respected business man, passed away at his home last week having been at the hospital for treatment. He was 63 years of age, an honored member of the city school board and previously an alderman, having been prominent in official capacities as well as mercantile life. Funeral obsequies were conducted from St. Anthony Catholic church and burial was in the Catholic cemetery.

There was a very good attendance at the L. A. S. meeting at the home of Mrs Julia Mercer last Tuesday, and working plans were made for a bazaar to be held the last of the year. Heads of committee were appointed as follows; Childrens Dept., Mrs Patton; Fancy articles, Edith Westcott; Rugs Mrs. Calhoun, aprons Mrs Williams; comfortables, quilts etc Mrs. Wolcott. The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Calhoun April 8th; work to be done for the hostess.

A moving picture entertainment was given to the students of the High school at the opera house on Tuesday afternoon. The films were furnished by the University of Michigan and concerned the heavy machinery of excavating operations such as steam shovels, power dredges, etc, showing these machines in operation. The films were of educational value and much enjoyed. By the way it might interest our citizens to know that the M. A. C. has installed a broad-casting radio station. WKAR is the official symbol and it operates 280 meter wave length.

Harry Roberts and family received the sad intelligence Wednesday of the death of Harry's father, Bruce Roberts, who has for several years been a resident of Battle Creek where he removed from North Adams in war times and accepted a position at Camp Custer. Mr. Roberts must have been about 75 years of age and had been rather indisposed of late. He is survived by the widow, one daughter, Mrs. Mable Roberts, two sons, Harry of near Pittsford and William of Hillsdale. As we go to press we learn the funeral will be held here at one o'clock and burial in the local cemetery, under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity on Saturday. Mar, 15th.

Prof. Perkins is considered one of the best conductors in the state. In addition to conducting the chorus he will render one or more solos. He's worth hearing. At the M. E. Church Mar. 21st.

Town Line Grange will meet this Friday night (March 14)for a little work. 3rd and 4th degrees will be conferred on 7 canidates. Pot-luck supper at 6:30 p. m. Radio program by Floyd Daniels immediately following initiation.

Gov. Groesbeck has returned we believe from Washington and upon being interviewed, stated the rumor that he is to be the next attorney general of the United States is all baldy-dash and he has no reason for expecting any appointment.

The subjects for discussion next Sunday at the M. E. Church will be in the morning "A Misrepresented Saint." and in the evening, "The Heavenly Vision." At the Sunday school hour plans will be formulated for the organization of a young women's and especially young mothers class, taking for their study "Life in the making." and all who are interested in such a class are earnestly requested to be present.

Reading Village voted on a similar proposition to what North Adams had not long ago on the light question viz: to keep the Village electric lighting plant running or not to keep it, and very sensibly voted to retain their own plant and run their own business which the citizens of North Adams did not seem to have the judgment to do. Reading is in bad the same as we are, having an indebtedness of over $10,000. The village Dads here tell us the indebteness is coming on fine --and we'd like to know just how fine. Again we wish to remind the Dads that Michigan state law explicity requires the financial condition of every incorporated village shall be published at least once a year, and any one who cared to take it up could make it real warm for village Papas who refused to comply with the rule.

Mrs. Bert Taylor received word from Hanover that her nephew 11 years old had been drowned in a small pond on the farm of Lyman Huston three miles west of Hanover village where three children had been playing on Wednesday about 12:30 p. m. It seems the Dunham boy with two girl playmates had gone to the pond to play as was customary, the children being students at the McNair school. A dog which was with them on the ice wanted to drink so they proposed to all stand on the ice to bring it down sufficient to get water, when the ice gave away and precipitated the children in five feet of water. The Dunham boy at once plunged in and brought Janice McMahon, aged 11 years, safely out, then returned for the other girl Dolores Clifton, but was overcome by the cold water and exhaustion and both sank. Meanwhile the McMahon girl had ran to a house for assistance, but the bodies were not rescued for about two hours. Sheriff Stoddard had been called from Jackson and he brought a pulmotor but all efforts to resusitate the children proved ineffectual. Stoddard made a run from Jackson in thirty minutes notwithstanding the bad roads. Mrs. Dunham mother of the Dunham boy, was buried the 4th day of last August. As we go to press funeral arrangements are not completed.

Cecile Kimball Married In Toledo

Nuptials for Miss Cecile Marie Kimball and Andrew Lawrence Miller, of this city, were held at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Toledo Wednesday morning at 8:30. Solemn high mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Arnoldi, assisted by Rev. Fr. Finsil and Rev. Fr. Wickman.

Miss Helen O'Meara, of this city, was bridesmaid and Mathew Arnoldi, of Toledo, acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller left for Chicago for a wedding trip, following which they will make their residence in Jackson until later in the spring when they will be at home at Pleasant View Hotel, Clark Lake.

A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herbal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Marshall—Frank H. Good, who for 65 years lived on his farm in Fredonia township near here, died last week. He was 83 years old.

Holland—A $350,000 club house will be erected at Ottawa Beach to take the place of the hotel which burned last fall, according to word received here.

Ann Arbor—Nearly one half of the $5,000 total set by the committee in charge of raising funds for the student friendship drive, on the University of Michigan campus, had been raised last week.

Lansing—"Private residences lose immunity from search warrants if they are places of public resort or if used for unlawful manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquor," the state supreme court ruled recently.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Carl V. Weller, of the medical school of the University of Michigan has been made a full professor in pathology in the school and assistant director of the pathological laboratory, it has been announced by Dean Hugh Cabot.

Lansing—The state administrative board has authorized Auditor General O. B. Fuller to poy back bounties on noxious animals and birds to 80 counties, amounting to $111,000. It is expected additional claims from the counties which have not submitted reports will run the amount up about $5,000.

Albion—Albion's 1924 city tax rate will be $1.40 on each $100 assessed valuation, or an increase of 15 cents over that of 1923, it was announced recently. Several extras, including $22,000 for poving and $18,000 for equipment and maintenance of a new city hospital are reasons given for the increase.

Lansing—The eighteenth annual convention of the Michigan Threshermen's Association was held in Lansing. Represented at the convention were farmers who had a part in the threshing of 81,840,000 bushels of grain, beans and clover seed in 1923. Besides the programs of addresses and business there were exhibits of machinery.

Detroit—Wayne county taxes collected during 1923 totaled $9,893,093.95 against a tax levy of $10,965,600.26, leaving a delinquency of $1,072,506.31, Godfrey Freiwald, county treasurer has announced. This establishes a new high record of collections, 90.211 per cent, Mr. Freiwald stated. The county paid to the state the sum of $3,500,000. Collection fees amounted to $12,572.29.

Lansing—Trucks traveling the trunk line and country roads of the lower peninsula, south of the line between Saginaw and Muskegon, will be limited to one-half the full carrying capacity until further notice. It has been ordered by Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner. The order was issued because rains and thaws have softened the roads in all that part of the state.

Monroe—Sister Mary Loyola, known by hundreds of Detroit women and others who are graduates of St. Mary's college here, died recently at the convent here. She had been a member of the congregation of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary since 1871. For 45 years she had been intimately connected with St. Mary's academy as the head of the department of expression.

Ann Arbor—More than 14,000 numbers of American newspapers of the eighteenth century and nearly 2,000 volumes of nineteenth century papers have been added to the William L. Clements library and the general library of the University of Michigan. The additions of these volumes makes the Clements library possess what probably is the most complete collection in the United States, outside of the Congressional library.

Detroit—After physicians at Receiving Hospital here had examined the injuries Frank Bugg, 51 years old, a structural iron worker, suffered when he fell three stories while working on the steel frame-work of the new Book-Cadillac Hotel, landing on a concrete pavement, Bugg announced he was going back to work—and he did. A lacerated scalp and contusions to his back and ribs were the injuries the doctors discovered. No bones were broken.

Marquette—Following an outbreak of rabies in Negaunee, Ishpeming, Republic, Champion and Michigamme the State Commissioner of Agriculture, at the request of the health department, has ordered a strict quarantine on dogs in Marquette, Ishpeming and Negaunee and 10 townships in Marquette County, and one township in Baraga County. Several persons in Ishpeming and Negaunee have been scratched and bitten by diseased dogs, but there have been no deaths.

Benton Harbor—Michigan's peach crop prospects for 1924 have been reduced at least 25 per cent, possibly 35 to 40 per cent by winter injury to buds, according to conservative estimates made here by growers and pomologists who attended the recent convention of the Michigan State Horticultural society. The other fruits grown in the state are not believed to have been injured. The peach situation was reported to be serious, especially in southwest Michigan where most of the orchards are located.

Benton Harbor—Hoping to educate consumers to the excellent qualities of Michigan apples, more than a score of growers have pledged themselves to contribute 10 bushels each to be given away at an apple and potato show in Detroit next December. Whether the apple and potato show is held in Detroit depends upon the willingness of business interests there to guarantee its financial success. Should the show fail to materialize, it will not be because the apple growers of the vicinity do not favor it.

Bay City—Melvin Lamont, of Bay City, has been appointed to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Port Huron—Mrs. Margaret McLean, 91 years old, who has resided in this city and vicinity for more than 40 years, died recently.

Marysville—Marysville electors recently voted to incorporate as a fifth class city, instead of continuing as an incorporated village. The vote was 296 to 188.

Hillsdale—Miss Dorothy Hulce and Lee Butterfield represented Hillsdale College at the State Oratorical contest held at Holland recently. Nine other colleges competed.

Muskegon—John Carlson, 75 years old, a retired lumberman, died here recently, as a clerk was fitting him with a pair of shoes. He had been a resident of Muskegon 38 years.

Buchanan—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the Bainton Bros.' flour mill at Buchanan recently. The mill was one of the few waterpower mills still to be found in Southern Michigan.

Muskegon—The Grand Rapids, Grand Haven & Muskegon Railway Co. has announced that one-hour service will be given in the future. Additional freight cars have also been added.

Lapeer—Charles H. Tuttle, pioneer of Michigan and founder of the First Baptist church of this city, died last week. He was born in 1862, just across the road from the home where he died.

Salem—Charles Henry Parezo, 63 years old, and a native of this village, died in Washington, D. C. recently. He was a veteran of the Civil war, a former railroad man and an inventor.

Manistee — Manistee Protestant churches have begun a campaign to get everybody to attend church regularly, especially during Lent. The campaign was started through the Manistee Ministerial Association.

Ann Arbor—Edward Raymond Turner, professor of European history at the University of Michigan, has been appointed professor of English history at Yale university, and assigned to the faculty of Yale college, it was announced here.

Sturgis—S. G. Boyer, recently appointed chief of police, has decided that the disused curfew ordinance shall be enforced. An amendment, making the hours of curfew 8 o'clock in winter and 9 o'clock in summer, is before the city commission.

Mikado—Henry M. Yokey, an Alcona County farmer, and prominent in lumbering circles, living near Mikado, was gored to death at his farm by a bull last week. He had gone out to the barn yard to put a bull in the barn when it turned on him.

Ann Arbor—Nine members of the faculty of the University of Michigan were raised to the rank of full professors by action of the board of regents. Seven members of the staff were made associate professors, one a clinical professor, and 18 to the rank of assistant professor.

Alpena — A co-operative weather station under the U. S. Bureau has been re-established at Harrisville on the grounds of the State Fish Hatchery with Frank A. Tubbs as observer and will be under the direction of Dewey A. Seeley, U. S. Meteorologist at East Lansing. New instruments and equipment have been set up.

Ann Arbor—Michigan possesses a mill stone which supposedly ground grain at the time of Christ through the action of the board of regents of the University of Michigan in accepting from the Michigan Millers' Association the gift of a Roman mill stone buried in the ruins of Pompeii in 79 A. D. The stone will be placed in the museum.

Lansing—Refunds of from $3 to $3,000 are being made by the secretary of state to corporations as a result of the recent supreme court decision directing that the tax be collected under the 1923 act rather than under that of 1921, according to Elbert V. Chilson, deputy. Approximately 400 returns, including all the building and loan associations, already have been made.

Ann Arbor—A general tax to raise $10,000, to be used in carrying out the Centennial celebration of Ann Arbor next summer may be made according to decision reached by common council. The question of raising money by taxation will be put before the voters at the election April 7. Efforts will be made to vie with the Centennial celebration staged by Ypsilanti last summer.

Lansing—Harry H. Jackson, commissioner of public safety, has been ordered by the state administrative board to check up on common carrier motor vehicles throughout the state. It was reported that many of them are operating without the required permit from the state public utilities commission. The board also decided to have railroad crossings with trunk line highways inspected to determine where safety devices are inadequate.

Lansing—State police are to be stationed in Monroe county to enforce the state law designed to prevent heavy trucks from cutting highways during "soft weather." Highway Commissioner Rogers has inspected M-10, the Dixie highway, and one of the heaviest travelled routes in the state. He announced that state police will be placed at the county line on both ends of the highway. They will be equipped with telephones, so that truck operators may inquire each morning about the condition of the roads.

Flint—Rep. Peter B. Lennon, of Genesee County, who has been named chairman of a committee of members of the Legislature representing various blocs with a view to settling their differences, has announced that he would call a conference for early in the summer of Michigan manufacturers and farmers. The purpose of the conference would be to see if methods could not be found for the farmers and manufacturers of the state to work together instead of at cross purposes on taxation matters in the legislature.

BEFORE BABIES WERE BORN

Mrs. Oswald Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Girardville, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my last two babies came. It keeps me in perfect health and I am on my feet getting meals and doing all my housework until an hour before the baby is born. A friend told me to take it and I have used ten bottles since I heard about it. I recommend the Vegetable Compound whenever I can. Just yesterday a friend was telling me how miserable she felt, and I said, 'If you start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's you will feel fine.' Now she is taking it."—Mrs. P. J. OSWALD, JR., 406 W. Ogden St., Girardville, Pa.

Mrs. Nicola Paluzzi Says

Mishawaka, Indiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness before my babies were born. I was weak and tired out all the time and it helped me. When I had inward inflammation the doctor treated me, but it did not help me, so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it helped me right away. I will always have your medicines." — Mrs. NICOLA PALUZZI, 415 E. Broadway, Mishawaka, Indiana.

OVER 68 YEARS OF SUCCESS

FARM POULTRY

POULTRY LIKE MASH AS ALL-YEAR FEED

"People who make money with chickens, feed mash the year around," declares James G. Halpin, poultryman at the University of Wisconsin.

"Don't think that the mash is not necessary," says Mr. Halpin, "just because the hens went into winter quarters and you have plenty of corn and small grain to feed.

"Hens are particular and they won't lay unless they are given the right kind of feed. The average farm does not produce all of the feeds that are needed by the laying flock and it is very poor management to get along with what feed you have when by buying a few pounds the profits of your flock can be greatly increased."

He regards the mash as essential for he says "Biddy not only likes it, but it furnishes the necessary protein. In the mash should be included some of the common by-products such as wheat bran, middlings, and gluten feed. It is an excellent way to feed animal protein for skim milk, buttermilk, or some form of waste can be mixed with the mash.

"In some sections many farmers feed their flocks fresh meat during the winter with excellent results. This meat consists of various animals, such as rabbits, muskrats (caught for their fur), calves not good enough to raise, worn out horses or a farm animal that has been accidentally killed, badly injured or that has died from some noncommunicable disease.

"In feeding such material care should be taken that the meat does not spoil," declares Halpin. "The best practice is to dress the animal just as though it were to be used for food, and if the animal is large, quarter it and hang it up in a shed where the meat will freeze solid and stay frozen until used. The best way to feed such material is to cut off a piece and run it through a bone grinder. This can then be fed with the mash.

"When fresh meat is not available, some meat scrap or tankage should be purchased in its place. Hens will not drink enough milk in cold weather to give the most profitable production."

Light and Ventilation Plan an Important Part

Plenty of light and ventilation in the poultry house will help to keep the flock healthy and the house clean and sanitary. The general appearance of the interior of a poultry house should be bright, light, and cheerful. Keeping the walls and ceiling sprayed with whitewash will produce this effect. When there are enough windows, the interior of the house will be sufficiently lighted even on sunless days.

Sunlight is the best-known germ destroyer, therefore all openings should be so located that the sun will strike every part of the poultry house at some time during the day. During the wintertime windows play an important part in keeping the birds active.

Both dampness and impure air are the result of poor ventilation. A damp house is one of the surest ways to cut down egg production and cause colds, roup and kindred ills. A curtain of unbleached muslin will allow fresh air to pass into the house and allow bad air to pass out and it will also prevent drafts. These curtains should be used only in severely cold weather and should always be open during the day, except when it is necessary to close them to keep out storms or heavy fogs.

One square foot of curtain to six square feet of floor space is a safe rule to follow. All openings should be far enough above the floor so that there will be no drafts directly upon the birds.

Early Maturing Pullet the One to Breed From

The pullet that takes eight months or more to mature is not as a rule a paying proposition. It not only costs more to keep her until she lays but the very weakness which made a late maturer of her prevents her from making a good record the rest of the year. In addition she misses the period of high-priced eggs. There are too many late developing pullets.

Early and late maturity are inherited. Don't breed from a late developer. Put a leg band on every bird that has begun laying to date. Then next September pull the bands from those that have moulted or which show very little egg capacity in the rear. These two trips to the hen house will save you a lot of trouble and guessing when you want to pick your breeders next year and will pay in the improvement of your stock.—O. C. Krum, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Fertility of White Eggs Greater Than Brown Ones

The result of tests show that white and brown eggs need the same temperature for incubation, as one is no warmer than the other, but brown eggs have a tendency to poorer fertility, more dead germs, more chicks dead in the shell, and produce fewer chicks than white eggs. Under ordinary conditions it is reasonable to expect white eggs to be 90 per cent to 92 per cent fertile and hatch 75 per cent of the fertile eggs.

Turkeys Lay Too Soon.

If any meat food is given the turkeys at this season of the year they will sometimes begin to lay before you will want the eggs for hatching. Usually it is best not to set turkey eggs until the green grass starts, though, of course, any that are laid should be incubated.

Money-Making Chickens.

Early hatching means money-making chickens. More chicks are now hatched in March than were formerly hatched in April.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Is Your Back Giving Out?

ARE you miserable with an aching back? Do you get up lame and stiff — lag through the day, tired, weak and worn out? Do you wonder why you are so run down? Many times this condition is due to weak kidneys. Winter's colds and chills are hard on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to slow up in their work of filtering body-poisons from the blood. These poisons accumulate. Then comes backache, with rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't risk serious kidney trouble! Use Doan's Pills — a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by many grateful people. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

C. A. Baker, carpenter, 237 Delina St., Marine City, Mich., says: "A cold settled in my kidneys and gave me a lame, aching back. Sharp, cutting pains shot across my right kidney and was fierce. This pain kept me from doing my work properly. After using a box of Doan's Pills the sharp pains left me and I felt much better. Doan's Pills are a good remedy."

Mrs. Louis Kirchner, 250 Market St., Marine City, Mich., says: "Sharp, stinging pains shot across my back when stooping over or straightening up. My kidneys were too frequent in action and dizzy spells would come over me suddenly. I felt weak and had to sit down until my strength came back. My ankles swelled considerably. Doan's Pills removed the pains, dizzy spells and regulated my kidneys."

Plan Farm Short Course Via Radio

A two weeks farm "short Course" under the general title of Spring Pointers, to be broadcast via radio for farmers of the state, is the unique bit of agricultural extension work announced here this week by R. J. Baldwin, director of the Michigan Agricultural College extension work.

This radio school, the first of its kind ever attempted in the state of Michigan, will be held from March 17 through 28, a half hour program being put on from seven until seven thirty, central time, each evening except Saturday and Sunday.

Extension specialists and professors from the agricultural division at M. A. C. will furnish the programs, two men talking for fifteen minutes each on each evening. The material will be of a strictly practical nature, according to Director Baldwin, aiming to give useful pointers for the farmer and home gardiner along seasonal lines.

Being absolutely new, the radio school is naturally something of an experiment. Definite figures as to just how many tillers of the soil have receiving sets, and how many will be interested in "listening in" are not available. The returns received sets on the two weeks program will determine, it is understood, the degree to which the college will develop the field.

All programs will be sent from the M. A. C. station, WKAR, which broadcasts on 280 meter wave length.

The program: Monday, March 17 7 P. M. R. J. Baldwin, director extension work at M. A. C.; 7;15 Prof. J. F. Cox. Tuesday, March 18 7. P. M. Prof H. H. Musselman; 7:15 Dr. V. R. Gardiner. Wednesday, March 19 7 P. M. Prof. G. A. Brown; 7:15 Dr Ward Giltner. Thurs. March 20 7:00 P. M. Prof. A. K. Chittenden; 7:15 Prof. O. E. Reed. Friday, March 21 7:00 P. M. Prof. R. H. Wed, March 26 7:00 P. M. Dr. E. A. Bessey; 7-15 H. C. Rather. Thursday, March 27 7:00 P. M. A. J. Patten; 7:15. W. E. Reddy. Friday, March 28 7:00 R. A. Turner; 7:15 R. S. Shaw, President of M. A. Ton Litter Entries To Close On April 1

Entries in the 1924 Michigan Ton Litter Club will close on April 1, according to annoucement made here this week by V. A. Freeman, secretary of the contest and extension specialist with M. A. C. animal husbandry department.

Two hundred and fifty farmers of the state entered the contest last year, which was won by a litter which reached a total of 2840 pounds in the six months period. A larger field of entrants this year and a higher weight total for the winning litters are predicted by managers of the contest.

The stimulus of the contest brings about better feeding practices, better care, and better all around handling of the litters. Cash awards and medals go to the winners each year.

Grower Sald Early Potatoes Are Chance

That there are good possibilties for Michigan growers in the early potato field, the market being very favorable from the middle of June until the middle of September each year, is the opinion expressed recently by H. C. Mocre, potato specialist with the M. A. C. extension division.

"A thousand cars or more of early potatoes are imported from other states into Michigan each year", says Moore. "More than 90 per cent of the state crop is composed of late varieties which do not reach the market until late September. During the summer months the prices of early potatoes are generally very good, ranging from $1.50 to $2.00 a bushel.

"Michigan growers located within trucking distance of city markets or summer resorts should find the growing of early potatoes a profitable business, while those in the more northern sections can find possibilities in supplying the certified seed trade.

Good Citizenship The Object Of Our Public School Training

Objections to such instruction by the state are based on false ideas of the functions of the state and the rights of individuals. It is both the right and the duty of the state to secure that measure of moral training which will make good citizens. To depend on the church to do this is not only hazardous but is also an attempt to shift one of its chief responsibilities from its own shoulders to the shoulders of an institution that has not the facilities nor the authority fcr reaching the entire population with a course of moral training.

Individuals and sects that object to the adoption of such a curriculum as the state may deem necessary to develop moral character have the right to their private judgment, but they have no right to veto or override the authority of the state. The state as well as the individual, has rights that should be respected and maintained. One of these rights is the right to train the youth in those moral and religious principles which are necessary to good citizenship. With this neither parents, churches nor associations of any kind have the right to interfere. "No influence should be permitted to keep from our youth an unbaised knowledge of the fundamental truths of religion in the broadest sense. To that end the home, the church, and the state may reasonably be asked to unite, since it involves not only the welfare of the child but the interest of the nation that he should be shaped for good citizenship. The state assumes the power to forbid child labor—citizens must be physically sound. It prescribes compulsory 'education citizens must be intelligent. It is not logical that the state should insist that citizens must be taught to be moral and lawabiding, and ready to serve their fellows and their country? What sort of citizens do we want? Irreligious, contemptuous of the Bible and of the laws of mortality? If not, the state must see to it that children grow up with reverence for God and His word and a sense of their own responsibility in the world."

The Kentucky State Court of Appeals, in affirming a judgment of the circuit court, used language, which ought to put an end to all objection to the Bible in our schools in every state in the union, since there is not a word in the constitution of any state to the contrary. It declared that "the Bible is not a secretarian book; that the reading of it in the common schools, without note or comment by the teacher is not sectarian instruction; that the use of the Bible does not make the schoolhouse a house of worship: and any particular edition of the Bible cannot be said to be sectarian because it has been adopted by any church.

Michigan's Oil Industry

During the past twenty years it has been customary and we might say desirable to probe the stubborn glebe of Michigan for the riches which lie in her substratas far below the surface. A crude petrolium which furnishes the basis of our gasoline, kerosine and by-products is found to underlie most of the Trenton formation in south-eastern Michigan, but only recently have we been able to develop anything of value

At Manistee oil well No. 2 is in the process of drilling while at Deerfield in Monroe county the drill struck oil at a depth of 2.338 feet and as we understand it the oil is flowing from this well—that is, there is sufficient pressure to force the oil to tho surface where it rises from a small pipe into the air. This phenomena demonstrates clearly there is oil in Michgan and in paying quantities. The Jackson County Oil and Gas Co. has drilled to date two wells and the third one is about completed. One proved to be a dry hole.

The Osseo Oil Co. has we believe been handicapped for proper machinery and expert services. We hope sincerely that the possibilities of an oil production in this county will be fully exploited. We remarked that it did not appear there was enough of the stuff in this county to oil a sewing machine, and we hope we shall be proven liars.

A movement is on foot to merge Isle Royal in Lake Superior into a public park for the state of Michigan. This Island lies near the Canadian shore and is covered with splendid primeval growth of hard wood and is inhabited by all kinds of game. There are on the island at present a herd of 1800 moose and 400 caribou, and this is about the only place in Michigan which is as yet untouched by the hand of man. It has taken thousands of years to grow this great timber and to have it fall into the hands of private enterprise and be stripped is considered a wanton sacrifice, which some people won't tolerate. The principal woods are spruce yellow pine, poplar, birch and hard maple.

Dog Travels 3000 Miles

Fiction is outdone by fact in the devotion of a collie dog that was lost somewhere in Iowa, followed his master's auto to Wolcott, Indiana, and not finding owner, returned to his home in Silverton, Oregon. The faithful collie literally traversed three states searching for his owner, and arriving at Indiana too late to overtake him, took the long hike back across the seven states to the Pacific Coast. He arrived in Silverton, Oregon, February 15, having traveled nearly three thousand miles, flanks worn thin, toe-nails worn to the quick ahd feet bruised from his long race to reach home.

The owner G. F. Brazie, a restaurant man, motored to Iowa to visit relatives, carrying the collie puppy along in his motor car.

The dog was lost in Iowa and the owner advertised extensively but could not recover him. When he entered the restaurant in his home town he gave a joyous yelp and made a leap for his astonished owner,

How he negotiated nearly three thousand miles over highway and bridges across rivers, streets, and viaducts in cities is a mystery The collie will be presented with a silver medal by the Oregon Humane Society.

Braaking Turkeys' Wings

A Chicago woman writes the Oregon Humane Society that each one of the last three turkeys she has bought has a wing broken during its life time in about the same place. The turkey she bought last Christmas came from Texas and the broken wing had not healed, the bones piercing the flesh.

Both Texas and Oregon are great turkey raising states, and she asks if it has not become a practice to break one wing. making them easier to catch for market.

If such cruelty can be established, humane people should be warned against buying turkeys from states that tolerate this form of cruelty to dumb creatures

Deaths From Diabetes Drop In 1923

A slight decrease in deaths from diabetes was noted during 1923 by the Michigan Department of Health Insulin, it is pointed out, may be the cause for the lowered death rate. The use of insulin has become quite general during the past year, and further reductions in death rates from diabetes may be expected. Many people have the wrong impression that insulin is a cure for diabetes, but it merely aids the afflicted to go on living. The use of this "reliever" must go hand in hand with restricted diets and other aspects of the care of diabetics.

Deaths from diabetes numbered 635 last year and this is slightly less than the 1922 figure, when the disease caused the death of 650 persons. The year 1922 marked the high point in four years of increasing mortality from diabetes. In 1919 559 persons died; in 1920 it was 577; and in 1921 there were 586 deaths.

Of the 635 persons that died of diabetes last year, 328 were women 307 men. Mortality from the disease was most severe for persons between the ages of 65 and 59. Fifty men and women respectively coming within this age group, died of the disease. Thirtynine men died between the ages of 70 74, while 39 women died between the ages of 55 and 59. Relatively few minors die of diabetes, as the 50 deaths, representing mortality of both sexes under 20 years of age; revealed last year.

Trunk Line Laws For Trunk Line Roads

The maximum use of roads can only come when they are made safe for maximum use. A dangerous road will always be less used than a safe one, and a road dangerously used by some will be less used by others than a road wisely used by all.

At the present time two States give licenses to drivers without any examination of any kind. Ask for it, pay a fee, and get it. Drive anyway safely, dangerously, drunkenly; these States apparently do not care! Ten States have no age limit on drivers; you can give a child of five a car and tell him to drive to town, without violating the law.

Naturally, these States do not have roads as safe as other States which insist on ability to drive before granting a license and recognize the fact that a ton and a half of steel at speed is no missile to put in the hands or the judgment of a small child.

One of the great benefits which will result from the establishment of national highways throughout the Nation will be uniform laws for their use. Such laws will not in anyway conflict with State laws, for the States through which the highways pass will have equal voice in the making of national highway laws. It is evident that when a road is national property the Nation is responsible for who shall and who shall not drive upon it and the speeds at which driving shall be done. More and more is it coming to be believed that great trunk-line highways must be more than single roads; that they must have a central span for fast going and other spans for slower going. The way to make speed safe is not to hold it down but to make a place for it. But the immediate question is not so much safety from speeding as safety from incompetence of road building, which permits the danerous curve, the unfenced bend near a bluff, the too narrow road the absence of illumination, etc.

These, and the problems of no laws or poor laws, may be solved in time, under any system, but will be solved speedily and solved well by the establishment of a system figuratively, of national highways, great trunk lines, built and forever maintained by the National Government, which will also supervise their use and police their length.

May 3 to 17, 1924, the great city of Drtroit will hold open house to the World, and she fully expects at that time that people from all parts of the state, the United States, Canada and from lands across the sea, will be in the city to view Michigan's Industrial Exposition. Next to the World's Fair at Chicago in 1905 this will be the largest aggregation of manufactured products ever assembled.

Another Letter From Harrington

The following communication was received from Eli Harrington writing from Tulsa, Oklahoma, where he has gone since we last heard from him. He is visiting his son Harley, who it seems is located at Tulsa instead of Kansas City. Harrington is pretty well along in years but he certainly is taking considerable of a trip which many younger men might envy: "Tulsa, Oklahoma Mar. 8

Friend Louis—

I am here in the land of oil derricks and K. K. K. Tulsa is a city of beautiful homes and nice public buildings with a population of over one hundred thousand.

The oil industry has made the city what it is but at the present time the low price of oil is making business somewhat dull but business men here seem to think the outlook for the future is very much brighter. They are beginning to drill new wells and starting to pump the old ones that have lain dormant for some time.

I started from Kansas City the 27th day of February at 10:45 p. m. and arrived at Tulsa in the morning at 8:00, so my trip was mostly in the night and I did not see any of the country until daylight, my first sight being the low level land with many oil tanks located here and there that were filled by pipe lines, for no wells were in sight for miles.

The first 50 miles of country in Oklahoma did not appeal to me when daylight came. The land was low and had many sinks filled with black looking water and no signs of cultivation any place. I was under the impression before I came here that Oklahoma was a level sandy state, but it is not so far as I have seen. Outside of Tulsa a few miles there is a high ridge of land covered with a scraggly growth of timber that extends out to the oilfields some 25 miles away.

I visited them one day and of all the desolate places you ever saw this is the worst. Hills, rocks and ravines is the make-up. It was mighty fine the All-wise Creator placed this oil underneath the land for nothing else could ever be gotten from it. You first see a few derricks—then more and more, until you can hardly count them, and in all kinds of places; at side of the road, in school and church yards and dooryards, in some cases only a few feet apart. Oil pipes are all over the ground and most of the wells were pumping but the oil followed the pipes so you could not see what the flow was. The houses of the workmen were little shacks eight or ten feet square and also there were stores and places to eat.

We stopped to get a lunch. Upon entering I found "a lady in attendance" I ordered 3 sandwiches and coffee. There were three of us and when the food was ready we had to go outside to eat as there was no room inside.

Passing through the oil belt we came to a level strip of land nearly ten miles wide that was cultivated and looked very productive. The buildings were fairly good; a few pieces of wheat looked green and nice; some small fruit trees such as peach, cherry and plum could be seen but no apple trees. The apples on sale here mostly come from the Ozark country of Missouri,

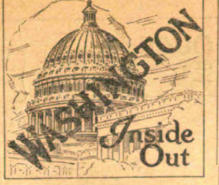
Tulsa city itself is quite hilly in places but the elevations are built up with large business blocks and apartments that make a snowy appearance, A 20-story hotel is being built about two blocks from where my son, Harley, lives, but will not be completed until next year. Harley has a nice business here, being manager of a large bakery which employs about seventy-five people and turns out 21,000 loaves of bread daily. $1,500 worth of cakes are made and both are sold entirely inside the city. Harley's salary is $5,000 per year, but he has a lot to look after. Tulsa has a negro population right around ten thousand but they live by themselves in one section of the city. One boy who delivers the bread has "niggertown"—that's what they call it—for his route, so I went with him one day, and it was as good as a circus. They have their own schools, churches and police—we might almost say their city. Some of them are shrewd business chaps but the most of them live in little shacks and own bootlegging as their business, and make their own "hootch'

A few years ago Harry Sinclair the oil magnate we read so much about, built an elegant home here in Tulsa on a fine location that commanded a nice view of the city Every modern convenience was his, even to a tennis court on the lawn with plenty of electric lights which made it bright as day. Sinclair sold it a few years ago and went after the Teapot Dome!

Tulsa is growing by leaps, the same as all western cities. Real estate men are buying large blocks of land outside the city limits and letting contracts for building bungalows — often as many as 50 to one contractor and these houses are sold mostly on contract as soon as finished.

The weather here is fine; a little cold nights but the sun shines every day. Good bye, with best wishes for your success.

Eli Harrington".



A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Harry Daugherty's enemies are finding it a harder job than they anticipated to kick him out of the Cabinet. The Attorney General intends to sit tight until the Senate finishes its investigation and he has had a chance to fight back. President Coolidge is of the opinion that Daugherty has committed no crime that would warrant his impeachment and believing that it would work great harm to the Administration to have its chief law officer retire under fire, he has hesitated to ask for his resignation. Paul Howland, a former Ohio Congressman, has been retained by Daugherty to take care of his defense while he is absent from the Capital.

No Government official goes to bed these nights without expecting to wake up the next morning to find his name emblazoned across the first page of the newspapers as connected with the oil scandal. The cast of characters is getting larger every day. Not everyone whose name is mentioned is placed among the principals Fall, Doheny, Sinclair, et al.--but the constant bringing in of new names before the public eye keeps everyone quaking in his boots for fear he is to be the next.

Considerable tea-table gossip has been aroused following the publication--on the will of the late Woodrow Wilson--of the signature of his widow, Edith Bolling Wilson. The first two names, Edith Bolling, were printed, resembling the type used in most newspapers. while the name Wilson, was written in an entirely different sytle of penmanship. The will was dated May 31, 1917--two months after the United States entered the World War.

Senator Norris, the Nebraskan Progressive. believes that at last there is a chance of putting over his plan for harnessing the Great Falls of the Potomac, twelve miles from Washington, and using the power to furnish electricity to the National Capital. The idea itself is as old as the country, for it was first conceived by George Washington, who saw the possibilities at Great Falls. The development of the water power project has been fought by private interests for these 150 years. George Washington also planned to connect the Potomac River and the Great Lakes with a canal and the old locks, now moss grown, which he built, can still be seen in the vicinity of Great Falls.

Congress has found an honest man--one who has not been bitten by the bug which makes bureaucrats out of minor officials. He is F. J. Bailey, Chairman of the personnel Classification Board. This board was created by Congress a year ago to classify the civilian positions of the Government in the District of Columbia. It has been the center of endless wrangles among Government employes, and its abolition has been suggested. Called before a Congressional committee and asked whether or not he thought the board should be maintained, Bailey said: "I have lost all the friends I ever had, but I must tell the truth. I believe the Personnel Classification Board should be abolished." The committee was astounded by such frankness and they gave Bailey a vote of appreciation.

Virginia the heart of the Old Dominion is not losing anything by having C. Bascom Slemp in the White House as the President's Secretary. Not as far as postmasters are concerned, anyway. Slemp's long experience in the House has given him all the information there is to be had about the postoffices of his native state, and the result is that every list of postmasters nominated by the President contains several names for Virginia towns. This fact has resulted in some comment in the Senate, but the Virginia nominations continue to roll in regularly.

The most northern point of the United States proper is 100 square miles in Beltrami county, Minnesota on the north-western shore of the Lake ot the woods. The tract is completely separated from the state of Minnesota by the lake and cannot be reached by land without traveling over Canadian territory. It came into the possession of the United States through a geographical error in the treaty of Paris signed in 1878 the original surveyors believing that this territory was south of the 49th parallel instead of north of it.

Poor Inventors Get Their Chance

Who has not met a poor inventor- the man who thinks he has an idea that will startle the world but who can't get anywhere because he hasn't the cash to go into production? He haunts the newspaper offices and the ante rooms of wealthy men. He carries blue prints and masses of statistics. Frequently he feels that the hand of the world is turned against his genius.

The Michigan Industrial Exposition has determined to do its bit to help inventors of this state, It will provide space in Convention Hall where inventors will be able to show their "stuff." This section will be devoted exclusively to the work of inventors. While it is expected that some of the ideas will appear absurd, the directors of the Exposition are hopeful that out of the collection will come something that may prove of great value to humankind.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vandue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

SAFE HIGHWAYS TO BE GOAL OF POLICE LEADER

SOME CHANGE IN EQUIPMENT

Commissioner Harry H. Jackson of the Department of Public Safety, in announcing his plans for the further improvement of the department, has decided to make the uniformed branch of the Michigan State Police a separate division and to give especial attention to highway matters. He finds that the improved roads of the state have become unsafe in many sections because of the increase in reckless and illegal driving.

"The uniformed force of the department, will be under one head" states Commissioner Jackson, "and will function as a separate part of the department. A very important part of its work will have to do with highway travel. There is need of strict repressive measures to make Michigan highways safe for the general public, and it is probable that before warm weather next year there will be a 'flying squadron' in being which will be under the command of one officer and will be moved from one part of the state to another to handle this highway work effectively. Naturally, the places where accidents are most frequent and speeding most dangerous will be cleaned up first. This squadron will co-operate with sheriffs and other local officers and welcome their advice.

Not Seeking Arrests.

"In dealing with violators of the highway laws, the point cannot be stressed too strongly that the policy will not be to make a great number of arrests for technical violations, but rather to warn and advise drivers and to resort to arrests only to the extent that such action is necessary to check recklessness, carelessness and disregard of the law and of the rights and safety of others.

"It is my opinion that the detachment posts now established for the uniformed men of the Michigan State Police should be retained and, perhaps, other posts added if the circumstances warrant. These posts serve a useful function in that they furnish a point from which men may be summoned in any emergency. Peace officers in the districts in which they are located know where these posts are and know that they can communicate with them when they require assistance.

Aid In Emergencies.

"In such unusual cases as sometimes develop, where a community whose police officers are sufficient in number to handle any ordinary situation, finds a condition suddenly created, necessitating the aid of a state force in order to maintain order and protect life and property, the Michigan State Police will, I am sure, always be equipped and ready for the duty."

"Conditions under which the Michigan State Police work have minimized the number of cases in which horses are required. However, it is not the present policy of the department to do away with horses entirely. There are occasions in which mounted men are able to do far better work than men on foot or on motorcycles.

"Some changes in the uniform and equipment of the State Police are under consideration. It is probable that for ordinary duty the men will not carry the large revolvers on army belts which are now regulation. This does not mean that the officers will be unarmed or that they will not use the heavier weapon when on duty requiring such equipment, such as night duty and other emergencies when dealing with persons who may be expected to shoot in resisting arrest."

NEW YORK COMMANDER LEAVES STATE POLICE

Lieutenant-Colonel George F. Chandler, who organized the New York State Police in 1917, has resigned his post in order to resume his practice as a surgeon. He had served under both Republican and Democratic administrations.

While known as one of the most successful surgeons in the East, Dr. Chandler had made a great success as a police commander. He used the same scientific methods in dealing with crime that he would have used in diagnosing disease. It was his theory that crime is largely due to mental disease of one form or another.

The New York State Police was increased this year from four to six troops. It was organized at about the same time as the Michigan State Police.

TROOPER WINS PRAISE

WESTERN PIONEER TELLS INTERESTING EXPERIENCE

Frank Rikert, well-known resident of North Sacramento, Cal., who came to the state from Illinois in a covered wagon in 1864, along with other hardy pioneers, recently exhibited a bottle of Tanlac, which he had just purchased, to a friend at his home and remarked: "If I thought this was the last bottle of Tanlac I would ever be able to buy, I wouldn't take one hundred dollars for it," thus proving the high valuation he places on the famous treatment.

"I believe Tanlac really saved my life when I took it after the Flu about a year ago," continued Mr. Rikert, "for the attack left me 20 pounds off in weight, and unable to turn over in my bed without assistance. I tell you, I thought my time had surely come.

"But, thanks to my wife's insistence, I kept on taking Tanlac till I was able to do all my work again, had back all my lost weight, and I've been feeling years younger ever since. I'm always telling my friends about Tanlac, and can't say too much for it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

"Keep Clean Inside" Say Physicians.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

> SYNOPSIS. — Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love.

She stepped closer and he put his arm around her and kissed her lips. She ran away a few steps. Then, indeed, they were back on the familiar trail in the thirty-mile bush. A moose bird was screaming at them. She turned and said:

"I wanted you to know, but I have said nothing. I couldn't. I am under a sacred promise. You are a gentleman and you will not kiss me or speak of love again until you have talked with my father. It is the custom of our country. But I want you to know that I am very happy."

"I don't know how I dared to say and do what I did, but I couldn't help it."

"I couldn't help it either. I just longed to know if you dared."

"The rest will be in the future—perhaps far in the future."

His voice trembled a little.

"Not far if you come to me, but I can wait—I will wait." She took his hand as they were walking beside each other and added: "For you."

"I, too, will wait," he answered, "and as long as I have to."

Mrs. Hare, walking down the trail to meet them, had come near. Their journey out of the wilderness had ended, but for each a new life had begun.

The husband and father of the two ladies had reached the fort only an hour or so ahead of the mounted party and preparations were being made for an expedition to cut off the retreat of the Indians. He was known to most of his friends in America only as Col. Benjamin Hare—a royal commissioner who had come to the colonies to inspect and report upon the defenses of his majesty. He wore the uniform of a colonel of the King's guard. There is an old letter of John Irons which says that he was a splendid figure of a man, tall and well proportioned and about forty, with dark eyes, his hair and mustache just beginning to show gray.

"I shall not try here to measure my gratitude," he said to Mr. Irons. "I will see you tomorrow."

"You owe me nothing," Irons answered. "The rescue of your wife and daughter is due to the resourceful and famous scout—Solomon Binkus."

"Dear old rough-barked hickory man!" the colonel exclaimed. "I hope to see him soon."

He went at once with his wife and daughter to rooms in the fort. That evening he satisfied himself as to the character and standing of John Irons, learning that he was a patriot of large influence and considerable means.

The latter family and that of Peter Bones were well quartered in tents with a part of the Fifty-fifth regiment then at Fort Stanwix. Next morning Jack went to breakfast with Colonel Hare and his wife and daughter in their rooms, after which the colonel invited the boy to take a walk with him out to the little settlement of Mill river. Jack, being overawed, was rather slow in declaring himself and the colonel presently remarked:

"You and my daughter seem to have got well acquainted."

"Yes, sir; but not as well as I could wish," Jack answered. "Our journey ended too soon. I love your daughter, sir, and I hope you will let me tell her and ask her to be my wife sometime."

"You are both too young," said the colonel. "Besides you have known each other not quite three days and I have known you not as many hours. We are deeply grateful to you, but it is better for you and for her that this matter should not be hurried. After a year has passed, if you think you still care to see each other, I will ask you to come to England. I think you are a fine, manly, brave chap, but really you will admit that I have a right to know you better before my daughter engages to marry you."

Jack freely admitted that the request was well founded, albeit he declared, frankly, that he would like to be got acquainted with as soon as possible.

"We must take the first ship back to England," said the colonel. "You are both young and in a matter of this kind there should be no haste. If your affection is real, it will be none the worse for a little keeping."

Solomon Binkus and Peter and Israel and John Bones and some settlers north of Horse valley arrived next day with the captured Indians, who, under a military guard, were sent on to the Great Father at Johnson castle.

Colonel Hare was astonished that neither Solomon Binkus nor John Irons nor his son would accept any gift for the great service they had done him.

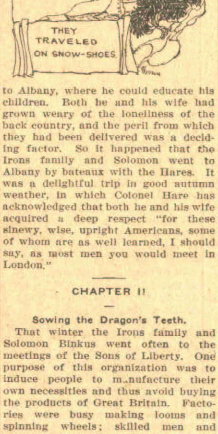
"I owe you more than I can ever pay," he said to the faithful Binkus. "Money would not be good enough for your reward."

Solomon stepped close to the great man and said in a low tone:

"Them young 'uns has growed kind o' lovesick an' I wouldn't wonder. I don't ask only one thing. Don't make no mistake 'bout this 'ere boy. In the bush we have a way o' pickin' out men. We see how they stan' up to danger an' hard work an' goin' hungry. Jack is a reg'lar he-man. I know 'em when I see 'em, which—it's a sure fact—I've seen all kinds. He's got brains an' courage, an' a tough arm an' a good heart. He'd die fer a friend any day. Ye kain't do no more. So don't make no mistake 'bout him. He ain't no hemlock bow. I cacalate there ain't no better man-timber nowhere—no, sir, not nowhere in this world—call it king er lord er duke er any name ye like. So, sir, if ye feel like doin' suthin' fer me—which I didn't never expect it, when I done what I did—I'll say be good to the boy. You'd never have to be 'shamed o' him."

"He's a likely lad," said Colonel Hare. "And I am rather impressed by your words, although they present a view that is new to me. We shall be returning soon and I dare say they will presently forget each other, but if not, and he becomes a good man—as good a man as his father—let us say—and she should wish to marry him, I would gladly put her hand in his."

At Fort Stanwix, John Irons sold his farm and house and stock to Peter Bones and decided to move his family to Albany, where he could educate his children. Both he and his wife had grown weary of the loneliness of the back country, and the peril from which they had been delivered was a deciding factor. So it happened that the Irons family and Solomon went to Albany by bateaux with the Hares. It was a delightful trip in good autumn weather, in which Colonel Hare has acknowledged that both he and his wife acquired a deep respect "for these sinewy, wise, upright Americans, some of whom are as well learned, I should say, as most men you would meet in London."



THEY TRAVELED ON SNOW-SHOES.

CHAPTER II

Sowing the Dragon's Teeth.

That winter the Irons family and Solomon Binkus went often to the meetings of the Sons of Liberty. One purpose of this organization was to induce people to manufacture their own necessities and thus avoid buying the products of Great Britain. Factories were busy making looms and spinning wheels; skilled men and women taught the arts of spinning, weaving and tailoring. The slogan "Home made or nothing," traveled far and wide.

Late in February Jack Irons and Solomon Binkus went east as delegates to a large meeting of the Sons of Liberty in Springfield. They traveled on snowshoes and by stage, finding the bitterness of the people growing more intense as they proceeded. They found many women using thorns instead of pins and knitting one pair of stockings with the ravelings of another. They were also flossing out their silk gowns and spinning the floss into gloves with cotton. All this was to avoid buying goods sent over from Great Britain.

The meeting over, Jack and Solomon went on by stage to Boston for a look at the big city.

They arrived there on the fifth of March a little after dark. The moon was shining. A snow flurry had whitened the streets. The air was still and cold. They had their suppers at the Ship and Anchor. While they were eating they heard that a company of British soldiers who were encamped near the Presbyterian meeting-house had beaten their drums on Sunday so that no worshiper could hear the preaching.

"And the worst of it is we are compelled to furnish them food and quarters while they insult and annoy us,' said a minister who sat at the table.

After supper Jack and Solomon went out for a walk. They heard violent talk among people gathered at the street corners. They soon overtook a noisy crowd of boys and young men carrying clubs. In front of Murray's barracks, where the Twenty-ninth regiment was quartered, there was a chattering crowd of men and boys. Some of them were hooting and cursing at two sentinels. The streets were lighted by oil lamps and by candles in the windows of the houses.

In Cornhill they came upon a larger and more violent assemblage of the same kind. They made their way through it and saw beyond a captain, a corporal and six private soldiers standing face to face with the crowd. Men were jeering at them; boys hurling abusive epithets. The boys, as they are apt to do, reflected, with some exaggeration, the passions of their elders. It was a crowd of rough fellows—mostly wharfmen and sailors. Solomon sensed the danger in the situation. He and Jack moved out of the jeering mob. Then suddenly a thing happened which may have saved one or both their lives. The captain drew his sword and flashed a dark light upon Solomon and called out:

"Hello, Binkus! What the h—l do you want?"

"Who be ye?" Solomon asked.

"Preston."

"Preston! Cat's blood and gunpowder! What's the matter?"

Preston, an old comrade of Solomon, said to him:

"Go around to headquarters and tell them we are cut off by a mob and in a bad mess. I'm a little scared. I don't want to get hurt or do any hurting."

Jack and Solomon passed through the guard and hurried on. Then there were hisses and cries of "Tories! Rotten Tories!" As the two went on they heard missiles falling behind them and among the soldiers.

"They's goin' to be bad trouble thar," said Solomon. "Them lads ain't to blame. They're only doin' as they're commanded. It's the pesky king that orto be hetchelled."

They were hurrying on, as he spoke, and the words were scarcely out of his mouth when they heard the command to fire and a rifle volley—then loud cries of pain and shrill curses and running feet. They turned and started back. People were rushing out of their houses, some with guns in their hands. In a moment the street was full.

"The soldiers are slaying people," a man shouted. "Men of Boston, we must arm ourselves and fight."

It was a scene of wild confusion. They could get no farther on Cornhill. The crowd began to pour into side-streets. Rumors were flying about that many had been killed and wounded. An hour or so later Jack and Solomon were seized by a group of ruffians.

"Here are the d—n Tories!" one of them shouted.

"Friends o' murderers!" was the cry of another "Let's hang 'em!"

Solomon immediately knocked the man down who had called them Tories and seized another and tossed him so far in the crowd as to give it pause.

"I don't mind bein' hung," he shouted, "not if it's done proper, but no man kin call me a Tory lessen my hands are tied, without gittin' hurt. An' if my hands was tied I'd do some hollerin', now you hear me."

A man back in the crowd let out a laugh as loud as the braying of an ass. Others followed his example. The danger was passed. Solomon shouted:

"I used to know Preston when I were a scout in Amherst's army fightin' Injuns an' Frenchmen, which they's more'n twenty notches on the stock o' my rifle an' fourteen on my pelt, an' my name is Solomon Binkus from Albany, New York, an' if you'll excuse us, we'll put fer hum as soon as we kin git erway convenient."

In the morning they learned that three men had been killed and five others wounded by the soldiers. Squads of men and boys with loaded muskets were marching into town from the country.

> "It means that war is coming. We might as well get ready for it."

PUEBLO INDIANS CARRY FETISH WHEN HUNTING

The favorite hunt-fetish among the Pueblo Indians was the mountain lion or cougar, which they deemed the king of animals. Every Indian carried a fetish when he hunted, and derived his power from it by putting its mouth to his own and drawing in his breath—"drinking the breath" of the image—and praying to it, or rather the animal spirit it represented, to help him.

The ceremony was indispensable at the beginning of a hunt. Then before following the trail the Indian imitated the roar of his patron beast, to terrify and bewilder the game. He firmly believed that without these superstitious ceremonials he would stand no chance at all in the hunt, but with them he was sure to succeed. The animals which were successful hunters themselves were the objects of reverence, and the Indian was careful to invoke their aid, that his own pursuit might be as fortunate as theirs.

The hunter, when he struck a trail, took a forked twig and placed it in front of a footprint, with the fork opening backward. This was to trip the fleeing game.—Detroit News.

Winning His Way

For the benefit of the young men in this vicinity we want to touch lightly on the life history of the late Alfred H. Smith, President of the New York Central railroad system, who met death so unexpectedly in Central Park, New York, last Saturday.

If ever there was a man of merit and push, that man was Mr. Smith. Smith is by far too common name for men of his class but we will say that rising from the bottom of the ladder was one characteristic which most of our famous men have shown to a large degree.

In 1879 Alfred Smith, then an unknown lad, began railroading as a messenger boy at Cleveland Ohio on the old Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, and from that time his rise was step by step, inch by inch, until he stood at the very head of the greatest railroad organization in the world He was first elected to this high office January 1, 1914. For the young men of the present generation President Smith was a creditable model—one whose footsteps many a lad would no doubt frankly admit he aspired to, but how many young chaps in this county will ever obtain the emoluments of such a career? The percentage is very small—not over one tenth of one per cent.

Smith's winning cards were stick-to-it-ive-ness and attention to business, and with this hand he attained the prize.

Young men and high school graduates find your vocation and stay with it! The usual fellow when he begins at the bottom of the list has dreamed and built castles in air until he imagines himself a better man than his superior; his sense of right relations with his employers is warped; it won't stand the test; he jumps the track; he is off the job because some superior has disciplined him. Result — another good man is lost to the business and has joined the Coxey aggregation. Think of the discipline Smith had to undergo during all those years! Wasn't the result well worth the try?

Mr. Smith was riding a horse and met his end in a sudden way but his memory should be emblazoned in the Hall of Fame as a concrete example of "attention to business."

Dennis Marvin, well known in our village, was taken to the University Hospital at Ann Arbor on Tuesday for an operation, by his sister, Mrs. Elnora Greening and his son-in law, John Foltz. Mr. Marvin has been disabled of late and ill since November. Dr. Mc Farland advised an operation.

Dr. McFarland received a hurry up call at 4:00 a. m. Monday morning from Moscow parties and accordingly he jumped into his runabout and started. He got along all right until about 1½ miles this side of Moscow near the George Durga farm where his machine stalled in a snow bank and all attempts to get out failed. Meantime the parties who had called telephoned back to North Adams asking why the doctor did not come. This thoroughly aroused the family and Otis Metcalf was called out of bed and with Mrs. McFarland started for Moscow. The doctor was assisted out of the predicament and went on his way. Otis says the garage business and medical work seem to go hand in hand. This is the second time he has been obliged to dig Dock out.

Graves & Ford of Jonesville we understand have purchased the Lumber and Coal Yards of M. Kempton & Son and are to take possession about April 1st.

The Alpha Chapter O. E. S. held a social evening Tuesday night March 18th and a splendid supper was served followed by cards and dancing, also some very good music was furnished.

The remains of Bruce Roberts of Battle Creek were brought here Saturday and interred under Masonic auspices about 2:30 p. m. L. J. Dutcher of Hillsdale went to Battle Creek and brought the body here.

We promise you something entirely new in the entertainment Friday night at the M. E. church. It's a male chorus of about thirty voices which have been under Prof. Perkins' direction since November,

Mrs. Mattie Travis of Hillsdale came to North Adams Saturday where she visited until Tuesday among relatives and friends. She reports that Mr. Travis has partially regained his health and is able to perform outdoor work.

Fred Rumsey has traded farms with Hiram Kane and Mr. Rumsey has removed already to the John Cutler place east of this village while Mr. Kane will remove to the Lane farm formerly owned by Mr. Rumsey. A. J. Pendell real estate agency made the deal.

The Greendale Dairy has installed a different pump from the one orginally put in when the plant was built. The old steam outfit had become too leaky and was not considered dependable. The stroke of the new one is longer and it is worked by means of a large gear and pinion and belted to an electric motor.

On Sunday morning next Rev. Gray will speak on the subject of "Reporters and Reports" and in the evening there will be "guests" present from the Epworth League of Hillsdalo; the young people will put on a pageant which promises to be very interesting to everybody. Let's treat our neighbors from Hillsdale royally by coming to their program. Regular church service hour. at 7:00 p m.

"Union Signal" day proved to be interesting at the W C T U meeting held on Friday with Mrs Westcott. A playlet and a pageant brought out the fact that temperance workers must be correctly informed if they are to combat successfully the propaganda issued by the Wets through the press, and showed that this national paper of the W. C. T. U. was the most reliable source of information, valuable alike in school or home. Several yearly subscriptions were taken. The annual meeting will be held April 11th at Mrs. Haight"s.

To night (March 21st) occurs the Brotherhood County Chorus concert at the Methodist church at 8:00. Most of our musical patrons are looking forward to this with pleasant anticipations as it is claimed the organization is probably unique in being the only one as far as known in the state, and with the training which has been given should be a winner. 30 male voices under the direction of Prof. Francis Perkins of Hillsdale is the attraction assisted by a reader. It has been some time since North Adams has been able to listen to as much for the money. Admission 25c and 35c. The best musical talent of the county is represented in this aggregation.

—Remember the community auction March 28.

M. Fitzgerald and family of Adrian spent Sunday in North Adams.

Don't forget the entertainment at the M. E. Church Friday night 8 o'clock, consisting of male choruses, quartettes, solos and readings. Tickets, 25 and 35.

Entertain on Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Benjamin very pleasantly entertained on Saturday March 15th, the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Moore of Hillsdale; Mr. and Mrs. Harley Spittler and two daughters Minerva and Wilma of Osseo; and Mrs. W. J. Heath of this village, this being the Benjamin's twenty eighth wedding anniversary. A fine dinner was served to the guests after which Mrs. Benjamin treated all to ice cream and cake. The day was very much enjoyed by those present.

Results of Caucus

Interest in politics in this vicinity are not flagging to any great extent judging by the attendance at Republican caucus which was held Saturday. Between two and three hundred were present and party lines didn't seem to cut in very deeply. For instance old bewhiskered Colonels who "whooped er up" for 16 to 1 Bill Bryan hobnobbed with Joe Cannon standpatters of early days and the voting was spirited. To everybody's surprise our supervisor, Giles Stevens, positively refused to be a candidate again, although as usual his votes skipped away from the other candidates quite perceptably.

Next man on the list happened to be Lawrence Kempton and so Mr. Stevens' toga fell on his shoulders. The chairman called upon the assembled crowd in behalf of Mr. Stevens' long faithful record, to give a rising vote of thanks, which was rendered with great gusto. After everybody had settled down and partially recovered from the shock, balloting was resumed and Frank Holcomb was nominated clerk; Howard Newman treasurer; Ernest Burd renominated highway commissioner. Mr. Stevens was importuned to accept board of review but objected. Fred R. Williams (the old standby) justice; Geo. Newman, Howard Fuller, Abe Smith and Andrew Pendell constables.

The official Democratic party of this township met on Monday and warmed up quite noticeably Some years ago the Democrats became so thin in Adams they almost passed the buck but things are looking up of late. The time required to propagate a Democrat and turn him loose is not so long! He must be thoroughly inoculated with Teapot Dome toxin. B. Reid Shepard was nominated for supervisor; clerk, Bert S. Taylor; treas Merton N. Wolcott; highway com Harley Fry; board of review, Mrs Fannie Fowler; justice, Jeptha Travis; constables, A. J. Calhoun, David Thompson, Parker Shepard Glen Mercer.

Letter From Bert Morehouse

Mrs. Mattie Travis of Hillsdale recently received from Bert Morehouse of Sterling, Illinois. a letter describing the Palmer School of Radio at Davenport, Iowa, where Mr. Morehouse states his daughter, Miss Nova, is now a musician employed by this radio broadcasting station in company with Prof. Bergh of Davenport. These concerts are broadcasted for a distance of 10,470 miles so that any one who cares to "listen in" here for Davenport can have the pleasure of hearing Miss Morehouse perform.

Bert states that about April 1 they will begin broadcasting concert stuff again from Davenport and his daughter will be heard. He says these sound waves travel one-half as fasf as light which would be approximately 93,000 miles per second, and can penetrate any known substance. Just to test this they stationed an orchestra 90 feet below the surface of the River at New York City in a steel subway tube without any aerial whatever, and it could be heard plainly.

This seems a little fishy but from all accounts it is quite true. Mr. Morehouse also enclosed programs of the First Methodist church at Rock Island and the First Congregational church at Elgin, Illinois, in which his daughter's name was featured in handling the huge pipe organ and in instrumental duets. He has been at Sterling for a number of years and his many well-wishing friends in Michigan are very glad to know he is prosperous.

This particular station at Davenport. Iowa, is known as WOC—184 meter length. Central standard time Sundays 9:00 a. m. 7:00 p. m., 7:30 p. m., 8:00 p. m.. 9:00 p. m. Week days continuous from 9:00 a. m. to 10:00 p. m.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP
Allays irritation, soothes and heals throat and lung inflammation. The constant irritation of a cough keeps the delicate mucus membrane of the throat and lungs in a congested condition, which BOSCHEE'S SYRUP gently and quickly heals. For this reason it has been a favorite household remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis and especially for lung troubles in millions of homes all over the world for the last fifty-seven years, enabling the patient to obtain a good night's rest, free from coughing with easy expectoration in the morning. You can buy BOSCHEE'S SYRUP wherever medicines are sold.

Hand Kissing in Italy

The hand kissing in Italy differs from the hand kissing in many European countries in having a sort of "delayed pass" effect. In France, Poland and elsewhere a gentleman seizes a lady's hand and conveys it to his lips in direct and manly fashion.

In Italy, however, the lady is never sure that she isn't going to be done out of the gracious act.

The gentleman takes the lady's hand, presses it warmly and bends over it. When halfway down, however, he appears to change his mind and begins to straighten up. Just as the lady begins to think that he is holding out on her he swoops again to the hand and plants a neat kiss on the knuckle of the middle finger.—Saturday Evening Post.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Ypsilanti—At the spring election, April 7, one of the propositions to be voted upon will be the appropriation of $8,000 for the new armory.

Albion—Two prominent Albion men died recently. They are Theodore W. Kimmer, 62 years old, retired farmer, and Eugene F. Fellows, 73 years old, former lumber man.

Alpena—Elizabeth Ramsey Eakins, wife of Dr. James Eakins, one of the most prominent physicians in Northern Michigan, died here last week, after two years' illness.

Grand Rapids—Organization of the Michigan Fruit Packing corporation, to control a merger of canning plants at Lawrence, Bloomingdale and Bangor in Van Buren counties, has been announced here.

Muskegon—Ethel Casper, forward of the Muskegon High school girls' basket ball team, after playing four years without serious injury, broke her right leg in the last game of the season with Traverse City.

Flint—Contract for the remodeling of the power plant of Hurley Hospital at a cost of $98,000, has been awarded by the City Hospital Board. The building will include a nurses' home and other additions to the hospital group.

Ann Arbor—The Michigan Union of the University of Michigan realized $3,000 from the recent fair held in the new Yost Field House, it has been announced. This amount will go toward the completion of the swimming pool.

Albion.—An accident occuring last November, when one leg was badly mangled beneath the wheels of a tractor on his farm, resulted in the death of Le Roy Bliss, 48 years old, prominent in various local farm organizations, here recently.

Cedar Springs—Falling from a step ladder while adjusting an awning at his meat market recently, Fred Hart was empaled on a meat hook suspended in front of his shop. The hook pierced him to the spine, suspending him in the air. His cries attracted passersby who rescued him.

Muskegon—Rats have undermined the foundation to the concrete highway along Mona Lake on the West Michigan Pike and it will take $10,000 to repair the damage according to the county road commission. In addition it will necessitate the county enforcing the wet weather load on this highway.

Vicksburg—More than a score of villages in Southwestern Michigan will benefit from a general reduction in electric rates announced here. The top rate of 13 cents per kilowat hour will b ereduced to 11 cents. The new rates will be 10, 8 and 5 cents per hour net, a reduction of approximately 1 cent an hour.

Cadillac—Managers of the local co-operative marketing associations, farm agents, potato growers and directors of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange and M. A. C. officials have decided to handle only products grown by members of the associations at a meeting held here. The question of length of pooling periods was left to the discretion of local managers.

Lansing—Lansing Board of Education has prepared to battle the city council for control over the schools. The council recently named 13 school buildings as voting places for a special election April 7 and the board resenting this action by the council refuses to dismiss classes to accommodate election booths, a resolution to that effect being adopted by the board.

Muskegon—Former Judge K. M. Landis, national baseball commissioner, will be the chief speaker at the annual convention of the Michigan department of the Americaan Legion, it has been announced here by local committees, arranging for the convention. Judge Landis has attended every annual meeting of the Michigan Legion since its inception, having taken special interest in the work of the organization.

Lansing—Plans have been completed here for a gigantic wool pool by Farm Bureau members of Michigan, Ohio and Indiana. The 1924 crop will be handled through a warehouse at Columbus, O. This will be the largest co-operative wool pool in the country. The arrangement will give growers a flat grading, handling and selling charges to warehouse. Handling charges have run as high as 6 cents in Michigan.

Lansing—A 12 per cent reduction in fire insurance premium rates on all fireproof buildings, effective immediately, has been ordered by the Michigan inspection bureau rate making body of the fire insurance companies doing business in the state. The new schedule of rates has been filed with Insurance Commissioner L. T. Hands. The new rate schedules, Commissioner Hands estimates, will save Michigan people several hundred thousand dollars.

Lansing—An inquiry into freight rates in Michigan on road building materials has been ordered by the state administrative board. The state public utilities commission was directed to attempt to secure radical reductions. Secretary of State Charles J. De Land called the attention of the board to the fact that Ohio has succeeded in getting reductions on cement, gravel and other highway materials. The utilities commission pr ably will petition the interstate c merce commission to lower pre schedules.

The Revivalist's Conclusion

A revivalist preacher, at all times forceful in his language, his religion being of the "shirtsleeve" order, had taken for his text "Vanity." To point his moral, he said:

"Now, if there is a woman in the congregation who didn't look in the mirror before coming to the meeting this morning, I want to see her; I want her to stand up."

A single woman rose and stood with meekly downcast eyes. To describe her in a kindly way one would say she was homely. The revivalist rested his earnest eyes upon her.

"Well, heaven bless you, sister," he said. "It certainly is a pity you didn't."—Boston Globe.

Learn Eyelid Talking

Detectives in Canada are being taught a code by means of which they can communicate with one another by dropping, raising or other movements of the eyes, and also how to "talk" secretly by means of finger touches, by twisting of a cigar, fingering of a mustache and twiddling fingers behind the back. This is being done so that they can transfer their thoughts when in the presence of criminals or prisoners. It is declared that communication with the eyelids can be as rapid as the ordinary man typewrites.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

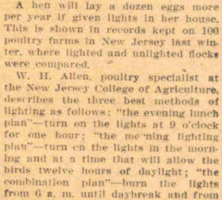
POULTRY

TRAP NEST TO TELL PROFITABLE FOWLS

One of the principal objections to the trap nest generally employed where individual records of hens are desired is that too much time is required to take the hens out of the nests and record their achievements, says Orange Judd Farmer. Many farmers and poultrymen who would like to know which hens are profitable and which not, in their flocks, will therefore welcome such a nest as pictured herewith.

As will be seen, the nest is an ordinary box. The front is provided with a very light door made of a shingle or other light wood, and swung on a pivot from the top. Near the middle of the right-hand side is shown a little bar, also pivoted where it touches the door. Toward the lower end of this little bar is a notch, which as the door is lifted engages on the latch on the side below.

When the hen enters to lay she lifts the door and disengages the latch.



Hen-Releasing Trap Nest.

As she passes through, the door drops again and closes the entrance. When she has laid she notices the opening at the back of the nest and passes into a different pen or alleyway. As soon as she does so she raises this back door, which is hung from the top on hinges, and a string which passes over two spools lifts the front door and resets the latch, so that another hen may then enter the nest.

The only objection to this method of trap nesting hens is that it is not possible to know which egg is laid by any one hen, but it is possible to know which hens are and which are not laying in the flock; and the hens can be credited with the number of eggs they lay, so that the poultryman may know which are the most profitable birds and can select them for the following year's breeding flock.

Artificial Lights Will Encourage Fowls to Lay

A hen will lay a dozen eggs more per year if given lights in her house. This is shown in records kept on 100 poultry farms in New Jersey last winter, where lighted and unlighted flocks were compared.

W. H. Allen, poultry specialist at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, describes the three best methods of lighting as follows: "the evening lunch plan"—turn on the lights at 9 o'clock for one hour; "the morning lighting plan"—turn on the lights in the morning and at a time that will allow the birds twelve hours of daylight; "the combination plan"—burn the lights from 6 a. m. until daybreak and from sunset until 6 p. m. Each of these methods has proved satisfactory. Electric lights are the easiest to regulate, but gasoline or oil lanterns may be used.

Good feeding practices must be followed when lights are used or the flock will get thin and sometimes molt. Fourteen pounds of scratch grain should be fed to 100 layers, feed 8 to 10 pounds in a deep, dry litter toward evening. This will insure against any possibility of the layers going to roost without a filled crop. The other four or six pounds should be fed about 8 a. m.

Mash must be kept before the birds at all times. A good mash to feed is the New Jersey dry mash, which consists of equal parts by weight of wheat, bran, cornmeal, flour middlings, ground or rolled oats and meat scraps. There should be at least one linear foot of mash hopper space for every eight birds.

One hundred pullets laying 35 eggs a day should eat approximately 25 pounds of feed a day, 14 pounds of scratch feed, 10 pounds of mash and some miscellaneous feed such as semi-solid buttermilk, mangels, sprouted oats, or cabbages.

Important Requirements in Winter Care of Hens

The important requirements in the care of the fowls in the winter are that they should take sufficient exercise, have succulent food, and be supplied with some form of protein, such as skim milk or beef scraps, to take the place of the insects which they consume in the spring.

Lice-Killing Powder Is Big Help to Turkey Hen

Always be sure that the turkey hen which is sitting on eggs has her plumage filled full of lice-killing powder twice or three times during the hatching, the last time not less than three days before the hatch is due. If the hen is too wild to approach, perhaps one dusting will do, given two or three days before the hatch is expected. If the work is done at night, the hen is less likely to be frightened and leave the nest.

Clean Brooders and Incubators.

Before incubators or brooders are used they should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected unless they are new this season, and in that case they should be thoroughly disinfected after each hatch in the incubators, and after each brood of chicks leaves the brooder.

Hens for Breeding.

Hens from which hatching eggs are obtained should not be overfat, although they should be in good condition.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

Oldest Artificial Leg Found in Tomb at Capua

The oldest artificial leg in existence is that in the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. It was found in a tomb at Capua, and is, of course, of Roman origin.

This artificial member accurately represents the form of the human leg. It is made with pieces of thin bronze, fastened by bronze nails to a wooden core. Two iron bars, having holes at their free ends, are attached to the upper extremity of the bronze; a quadilateral piece of iron found near the position of the foot is thought to have given strength to it. There is no trace of the foot, and the wooden core had nearly crumbled away. The skeleton had its waist surrounded by a belt of sheet bronze edged with small rivets, probably used to fasten a leather lining. Three painted vases lay at the feet of the skeleton. The vases belong to a rather advanced period in the decline of art, about 800 B. C.

German inventors have developed a process which has moved aluminum from the class of solely utilitarian purposes to that of use in the arts. The process is one by which coats of nickel, gold, silver or copper can be deposited upon aluminum by electricity—hitherto an impossibility. The metal's utilitarian value also has been enhanced through the invention, as it can be made usable now for marine purposes, the outer coating making it impervious to action by salt water.

Big Liners Use 5,000 Tons of Water on Trip

Few people would care to pay for a liner's drink for one voyage across the Atlantic, even in water at a penny per gallon. Very little change would be given out of a £500 note.

One of the big Atlantic liners has to carry about 5,000 tons of fresh water for all purposes for a single voyage from Southampton to New York. This tonnage alone is about two and a half times the weight of Nelson's old flagship H. M. S. Victory, says London Tit-Bits.

A passenger on one of these leviathans uses for drinking and domestic purposes about five gallons a day on the voyage. And as the ships average 3,000, passengers and crew, it means they have to carry, roughly, a week's water supply for a small country town in tanks, neatly stowed away along the sides of the ship.

But it is the giant boilers that have the greatest thirst. On one voyage the Berengaria used over 3,000 tons of water, or, at ten pounds to the gallon, roughly, 672,000 gallons.—London Tit-Bits.

Why Pay the Penalty of Lying Awake?

MANY people spend hours at night, restlessly tossing from side to side, waiting for sleep. All because they drink coffee with their evening meal.

If the caffeine in coffee irritates your nervous system and keeps you awake when you should be asleep, recuperating your energies, why not stop coffee and drink Postum?

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine or anything that can disturb health and comfort. Many prefer Postum for its delightful aroma and flavor.

If you want to know the truth, change to Postum for a month or so, and see how much better you will sleep and feel.

State's Industries Back up Exposition

So wide spread has been the support of manufacturers and other business men, that the Michigan Industrial Exposition, to be held in Detroit May 3rd to 17, has already secured a position where it can promise its patrons a wide diversity of display. The amazing scope of Michigan's industries already indicated in the space taken by the manufacturers includes leather, furniture, stoves canned goods, farm machinery, chemicals, electrical appliances, office furnishings, business devices, jewelry, candy, radio equipment, motor trucks, electric motors, copper and brass products steel tubes, motor car wheels, wheel chains, belt lacers, and paper products.

Meetings of business interests in various Michigan cities are now being held or have been held and municipal exhibits are being arranged for from the Upper Peninsula to the extreme South Eastern part of the State. Some of the municipalities have asked for reservation of as many as twelve booths, while others are seeking to arrange a combined showing in a single booth.

Says Production Of Ton Litters Is Easy

That it should be within the reach of any average Michigan farmer to fulfil the requirements of the Michigan Ton Litter swine club, producing his ton of pork from a single litter in the 180 day period, is the opinion of Prof, G. A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department at M. A.C.

"There is nothing mysterious or phenominal about the production of a ton of pork in the ton litter contest", says Brown. "Observance of recognized principles of feeding and handling, and selection of a sow of good breeding, will put any good farmer in the running for the honors of the contest. There are no rules surrounding the contest which cannot be met by any practical pork producer.

"Although the production of a ton litter of pigs is a comparatively simple matter; still a vast majority of our swine growers produce less than half of this amount, either as a result of poor breeding stock, lack of care and attention at farrowing time, or indifferent feeding. Three years ago it was a common statement that a ton litter from one sow at six months of age, could not be produced. Today progressive swine men are finding it a comparatively easy task."

Enrollment blanks for each sow that is to be entered in the ton litter club contest may be obtained from county agricultural agents or direct from the state leader of the project, V. A. Freeman, extension specialist in animal husbandry, M. A. C. East Lansing, Michigan. Entries close on April 1.

To Hold School In Use of Explosives

A special short course in Explosives, designed to train men for stump and rock blasting operations and for ditching work, will be held by the Agricultural Engineering department of the Michigan Agricultural College from April 14 to 19, according to announcement made here this week.

The course is being given in response to a demand for men trained to help make use of the 1,500,000 pounds of Sodatol, war salvage explosive, which will be placed in Michigan this year. It will be limited to the first 40 men who qualify for admission, this being the maximum number can be handled efficiently in the class.

L. F. Livingston, extension specialist in agricultural engineering with the college staff, and famous as a land clearing expert, will have charge of the explosive school.

"There is a mighty big field," says Livingston, "for the use of explosives in the southern part of the state in removing stones and stumps clearing up fields in order to make possible greater efficiency in the management and handling, and to avoid loss of time and labor."

Safety first, last, and all the time will be emphasized in the course. Mr. Livingston, who will be in charge, has had years of experience both in practical handling of explosive operations and also in conducting extension schools in land clearing.

Southern counties of the state are lined up to take big allotments of Sodatol this spring, according to N. A. Kessler, extension specialist who is working in the lower part of the state on explosives. Jackson, Kalamazoo, Lenawee, Branch and Eaton counties are among those which are already pooling orders for car lots.

Parents Scored for Diphtheria Rise

There is far too much diphtheria in Michigan. There need be none anywhere. Through the use of tox in anti-toxin diphtheria can be cut down as surely as vaccination drew the fangs of small pox. The worst feature of diphtheria is the heavy toll it levies on children—innocent youngsters who could be immunized as well as not. These are not the middle ages; where it took a century of untiring efforts to acquaint the world with the growth of vaccination, no difficulty would be encountered to-day in "getting across" the value of immunization against diphtheria. In view of this situaation the state health commissioner addresses an open letter to Wolverine residents.

"To the Parents of Michigan :

While realizing that recrimination is a negative form of argument, I nevertheless, feel called upon to remind you that as Michigan parents you are responsible for the deaths from diphtheria of children in the state. Children should be immunized against diphtheria with toxin anti-toxin. The state laboratories distribute both this and anti-toxin free of charge.

That early sore throat is an indicator which may cover a multitude of sins and among these is diphtheria. Every child that develops sore throat should have a doctor and the doctor when called, should take a throat culture immediately and send the same to the nearest laboratory. If found to be a diphtheritetic the child can be promptly treated with anti-toxin and isolated Anti-toxin should be also administered to suspicious cases, and cultures used for the control of quarantine. "Swift and incisive measures such as immunization and taking cultures of all sore throats would cut a big hole in diphtheria mortality. Its a challenge to the intelligence of any community to have deaths from diphtheria nowadays."

Smelling Out Dives

Over in the heathen countries of Africa they "smell out" thieves and witches—that is, a black man gets down on all fours like a dog and pretends to smell out offenders, and that's the way the dry sleuths are going to do soon. Detroit Saturday Night (probably a little soppy) gets off a number of jokes on prohibition officials, and the following is one:

"Every hungry school boy can tell by sense of smell before reaching the kitchen door, the mainstay for dinner. The grace of ginger bread, pumpkin pies, and fried cakes The aroma of coffee, jams, jellies and preserves in the making, and the odors from cooking cabbage, onions and turnips go beyond kitchen doors. So do the odors of brewing mash and fermenting wine mashes. Defendants in booze cases often overlook these facts and now to paraphrase the old saying, their remedy is to blame the brew and the ferment for betraying the safety furnished by the house door."

A wise court knows the odor of beer mash and wine mash. It is not for us to ask how he learned it. It may be that he has a good memory or it may be the result of purely scientific research. At any rate the court upheld the validity of the search warrant and the booze maker must take his medicine.

But their sacrifice shall not be in vain. Other homebrewers will benefit by their misfortune. The warning of the court is plain. The law cannot interfere with the home where beer and wine are made for private consumption if the odor does not get abroad.

But let the [illegible] beware. Men [illegible]ently be in demand by the prohibition forces. Amateur detectives, with olfactory nerves dedicated to the salvation of humanity, may even whiff their neighbor's breath from afar, and tear him from the bosom of his family.

Cloves or peppermint for the breath, sulphureted hydrogen for the keyholes. weather-stripping for the doors and windows, and all-around approaches to the house, off set wells as they say in the oil scandal, of burning rags and ripened eggs and decaying cabbage and moving cheese—these are the last defenses against the nose of the law for him who brews and drinks at home.

Home Brew Is Odoriferous

Home brew is no longer safe in Michigan, if it can be smelled outside the home, Judicial intrepretation of the law heretofore appeared to protect the home against prohibition search warrants. provided the home was not used for any kind of merchandizing in booze. But the Supreme court of Michigan now says in effect that the manufacture of anything with a kick in it subjects the home, to the prohibition search warrant, if the home exudes aught but the odor of prohibition sanctity. Let us explain.

In the city of Holland a first floor and basement were occupied by M. Schregardus and Louis DeWitt. A police officer swore that they were using the building as a place of public resort and for the unlawful manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor. Said he in his affidavit:

"I have been watching the place nights covering a period of 50 days having often smelled liquor on the premises, saw people going in and out late at night, generally from the rear; and one night saw two men come from there late in an intoxicated condition."

A search warrant was issued and 50 gallons of wine and two dozen bottles of home brew beer were found on the premises. Schregardus and DeWitt were convicted and appealed to the Supreme Court on the grounds that sufficient facts had not been disclosed to justify the issuance of a search warrant. But the Supreme court says:

"Brewing of beer and fermentation of ingredients into wine send forth odors all their own. A sleuth seeking evidence, may employ his sense of smell and if he sniffs liquor, follow his nose to the place the smell leads him."

And maybe he will get a drink If he is a reasonable sleuth he will get it for nothing. We have known of cases hereabouts where that has happened. But that is not the kind of a sleuth the supreme court is referring to.—Detroit Saturday Night

Inside Out

A Weekly Panorama Of Events In The National Capital

Secretary Mellon's tax reduction plan is as dead as slavery, but no Administration official from the President down will admit it-- officialy. The President decided to compromise income tax rates adopted by that body, but, on second thought, he changed his mind and the "compromised letter" was suppressed. When this began to be noised about the Capital, it was denied at the White House that the President had retreated one iota from his original position that the Mellon tax plan must be adopted "as is." Regardless of the President's attitude, Administration leaders at the Capital tell me that there is not a chance in the world of putting over the Mellon rates.

Some Amusement has been afforded this observer by the great attention which most of the correspondents have paid to the maximum surtax rate in the tax bill, without putting much emphasis on the rates which the average tax payer has to contend with —that is, nothing much is said about the rates on income below $5,000. It has been said repeatedly that, regardless of the high surtaxes fixed by Congress, they will not be paid, because the persons with annual incomes running close to a million dollars will find some way to get out of paying the tax. The man with a small income will have to pay, however, and no one seems to be interested in the rate affecting his income. Present indications are that the minimum rate will be two per cent--half as much as under the existing revenue law.

Information reaches us that Senator Walsh would like to drop the oil scandal investigation if any way could be found to call a halt gracefully. The difficulty is that the Democrats in the Senate are hopeful of getting more Republicans involved in the oil mess and the Republicans are just as hopeful of catching some more Democrats. So the game continues and the country is flooded daily with mysterious code telegrams [illegible] intimations involving officials, past and present, but having nothing whatever to do with the leasing of naval oil reserves to private interests.

Some there are hereabouts who say that the naming of President Coolidge in the oil scandal has killed all his chances for election in November, but Republican leaders in the Senate declare that the excitement will die out during the summer and that "Cal will pull through." It is now generally understood that some kind of a search for scandal will be in progress here from now until the presidential election.

The newest group in Congress is the "beer bloc." It is composed of members pledged to vote for liberation of the Volstead Act. Their hopes are high, but thus far they have not been able to round up enough votes to command a majority.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee. which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorney fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon; and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

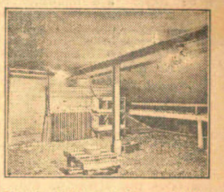
HENS GET BOTH HEAT AND LIGHT

Jersey Poultryman Reaps Practical Benefit From Modern Luxuries for His Chicks.

Comfort for the hens! And, although they probably don't realize it, an inducement to scratch harder, exercise more, lay a larger number of eggs in the dull season of the year.

This is what has been accomplished on the Maplewood Poultry Farm of Henry M. Reeve, at Maplewood, N. J., by the use of electric lights and steam heat in the hen house. The hen house is 20 by 20 feet and provided with a steam radiator for use during the early spring brooding period. This prevents the newly hatched chicks from catching cold before they have begun to approach maturity.



Electric Lights and Steam Radiator in Scratch Pen

Mr. Reeve does not contend that by using electric lights the egg yield of each hen is increased per year, although this may be the case, but he does find that the egg yield is more evenly distributed throughout the year, so that at no season is he short of eggs. The lights are turned on beginning about October 1 and are continued every evening until about the middle of March.

He keeps the hens on a regular twelve hour schedule by means of the electric lights. Whatever period of time the natural day lacks of being twelve hours he makes up with the electric lights. If there are only ten hours of natural light he turns on the electric lights for two hours. If daylight lasts eleven hours, then he turns on the lights for one hour.

The effect of the lights, he has found, is apparently to shorten the moulting period of the hens and thus prolong the egg laying period. Chickens which would ordinarily be in a heavy moult by October 1 have continued laying eggs through December if placed in a hen house lighted by electric lights.

Before making use of electric lights Mr. Reeve estimated his egg yield on January 1 of each year as about 33 1-3 per cent. With the aid of electric lights he estimates that his egg yield on November 1 is now about 40 per cent, which continues throughout the winter season, when normal production would be low. If the egg yield in the summer remains normal, he secures a certain increase in production for the year and also a steady rate of production, the egg yield in the winter tending to approach that of the summer.

The lights in the scratch pen consist of two fifty-watt Mazda lamps with shallow dome porcelain enamel reflectors.

MINNESOTA EXPERIMENT

Trial Power Line at Red Wing Is Working, With Many Uses for Electricity.

Engineers, educators and agricultural workers who are backing the experimental farm transmission line extending from Red Wing, Minn., five miles into the country, are planning an exceedingly broad program of electrical applications to farming, which will be studied by means of this transmission line. The line itself is now in operation, and the investigation which it makes possible has just begun.

Several distinct phases of electricity on the farm are being worked out under the leadership of Prof. E. A. Stewart, project director of the University of Minnesota Agricultural College. The application to be made of electricity to poultry raising is typical as to thoroughness.

The investigators will attempt to demonstrate electrical poultry raising by means of the electric incubator, electric brooder, electrically-lighted henhouse and electric refrigerator. The program includes the application of electricity to preparing the ground, planting the grain and raising the feed for the chickens, as well as the harvesting of the crops and preparations of the grains after harvesting.

The Northern States Power Company, which has built the experimental line, has now built a second line in South Dakota under a similar arrangement and for the same general purpose. The South Dakota co-operative committee in charge consists of J. W. Batcheller, president, South Dakota Farmers' Union; C. W. Pugsley, president, South Dakota College of Agriculture, Brookings; E. W. The "*W*et Aggregation" in Washington is a pretty raw bunch of chicks. The other day some Jackdaw congressman who is moist tried to get a resclution for light beer and wine before the house, and all the poor sucker could get was 7 or 8 votes which shows how popular the crowd is (with themselves) Anti saloon inen and Anti Saloon action has about put them out of commission. Notwithstanding a League official like Anderson of New York is occasionally found to be "rotten" and railroaded to the penetentiary, yet the dry battle is not materially injured. The whole country is little better than Russia was in the days of Czar Nicholas as regards graft, but there is a day coming when some of the grafters will be sent to their reward. Newberry and his band played at the Michigan State Fair for three seasons. They also filled engagements in Flint, Bay City, Caro, Cass City, Ionia. Greenville, and Ithaca. They recently completed a successful season at various Florida winter resorts.

Hidden Foes In Seed Potatoes

"Hidden Foes in Seed Potatoes," a new one reel motion picture just released by the United States department of Agriculture, takes a veil from some of the diseases that lurk in seed potatoes and that do not manifest their presence until their harm has been done.

The film was produced with the object of stressing the importance of using seed potatoes free from degeneration diseases as a means of preventing the large reductions of yield now charged to the use of diseased tubers. Symptoms of the more important diseases are shown in close ups. The subject matter is presented in connection with a conversation between two farmers, one of whom is harvesting a fine crop. The other farmer has not been so fortunate, and it develops that he followed all measures of disease prevention except one the use of seed tubers from fields selected during the growing season for freedom from disease.

"Hidden Foes in Seed Potatoes" will be circulated through the educational film service of the Department of Agriculture and the cooperating State institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods, the only cost being for transportation, or may be bought by authorized institutions at the laboratory charge.

On January 7 this great Petition, over two and one-quarter miles in length, containing 345,516 names of farmers, asking for a reduction in governmental expenses which would permit a reduction in taxes, was presented to Congress. The picture shows the great Petition being explained to Speaker Gillett of the House of Representatives, who is shown on the left. He is deeply interested. In the center is Congressman George P. Darrow, of Pennsylvania, who presented the Petition. Charles F. Jenkins, of The Farm Journal, stands next. Speaker Gillett declined to count the names and took Mr. Jenkin's word for it that they were all there. It looks so, does it not?

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Henry Ford Is Dry

"He was willing to talk, and that right vehemently, about the enforcement of the Volstead Act.

"As usual his opinions were unique and his solution rather direct and original.

"What would you suggest as the best way to enforce the Volstead Act as long as it is a part of the Constitution of the United States of America, Mr. Ford?

"Turn it over to the Army and Navy. Smith is right to that extent, that it is a federal job to enforce the law. The Army and Navy haven't enough to do in peace times anyway. Why not give them something to do?

"Do you think they could enforce the laws?

"They are the only men who can. See how the war made booze unpopular. If our Army and Navy would handle the rum-running situation as they handled the problems of the Panama Canal, they should have the job. Give some bright West Pointer a commission to clean up a district, and he would do it. There are some mighty fine executives in our Army and Navy. I know it because I have worked with them.

"Since we're talking about booze, Mr. Ford, would you mind telling me your personal attitude toward it?

"I'll be glad to tell you what I think of it. Booze never did anybody any good in any place at any time. That's the way I feel about it.'

"That's pretty strong Mr. Ford but not one bit too strong, a personal stand to take. What about your industry?

"No industrial leader with any sense allows it in his shops. That was stopped long before the Volstead Act. It was stopped because it hurt business. I have noticed a great difference in our plants since the prohibition law went into effect.'

"But talking about the Volstead Act it will be enforced as soon as the people want it enforced.

"Do you think that America is likely to take a backward step in prohibition.

"No I don't. We can't have liquor and automobiles too. If the war had not come, the automobile would have forced the people to protect themselves from fools who think that they can drink and drive too. There is a slang saying you know, that gasoline and liquor do not mix.

"Do you think that Governor Smith's act will force the question into a political issue in the coming campaign for the election of a president of the United States?

"No, not any more than it has been heretofore. Why should it become a political issue? It is already a law and a part of the Constitution of the United States. It ought to be enforced, just the same as any other law and that's all there is to it!

"Do you think that conditions in the way of law enforcement are any better now than they were at the beginning?

"Yes. They are getting better all the time. The people will become educated after a while, and, just as in any social problem when the truth is known, the law enforced. You have to have public opinion back of the law to give it validity and the way to get public opinion back of prohibition is to educate the people."—Henry Ford.

Careful Polls show that there are more than enough votes in both the Senate and House to pass a soldier's bonus bill over a presidential veto, but the game in Congress now is to pass a bonus bill that will meet with the approval of the President. Many Republicans who would vote for a bonus the first time might be found among the missing when it became necessary for them to go on record against the Administration. The trend is away from a straight cash bonus, with the majority favoring a plan whereby the veterans will get paid up insurance policies.

"Jackie Coogan" Enters Charity

Jackie Coogan will forsake the movies for ten weeks this summer in order to lead a modern "Children Crusade" throughout the United States in an appeal to the children of America for a million dollar shipload of foodstuff for the destitute orphan children of the Near East and then will sail in person to deliver the gifts to the Near East orphans in Greece, Palestine and Syria, it became known here today when Charles V. Vickery, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, made public a letter from Mr. John H. (Jack) Coogan, Jackie's father, giving his consent to the trip.

"For two reasons," wrote Mr. Coogan, I am glad to know Jackie is to represent the American children in this deserving cause.

"The first, of course, is that I feel the Near East Relief is doing one of the greatest pieces of child welfare work in the world, in which I am proud to have my son assist.

"But I have another reason too, a more selfish one perhaps I want Jackie to see and realize some of the hardships and suffering other children of his age have to endure and I am sure that the sight of these thousands of destitute, fatherless and motherless children for whom your organization is caring cannot fail to bring home to him a realization of the common duty of all mankind to one another."

Jackie will start his campaign with a series of Condensed Milk appeals in the Pacific Coast cities as soon as he finishes work on his present picture, "A Boy of Flanders." Similar campaigns for carload lots of milk, flour, clothing and quinine will then be held across the continent.

Churches, Sunday Schools, public schools, moving pictures, theatres, clubs and fraternal societies, together with children's organizations generally, throughout the nation will cooperate in the conducting of the campaign.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

Highway Building Is Progressing

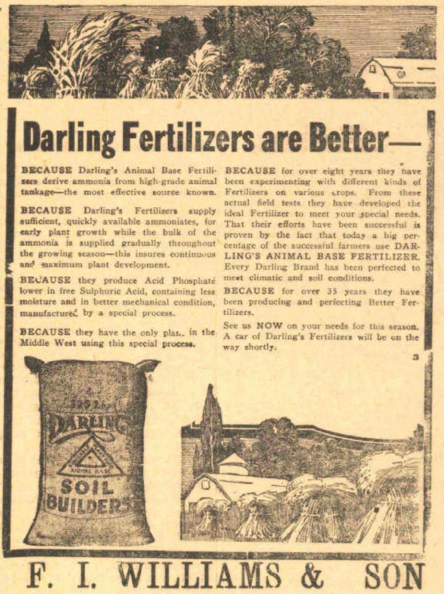
One of the factors retarding road development is lack of appreciation of the modern science of highway building and using. "We know too many things about roads which are not so!" We might also incidentally remark that we know far too many things about roads that are so!

Many of our highway ideas are way behind the times. That's right It's cusromary now to build dyed in the wool 16-foot all gravel roads without using any gravel at all! The enormous sums of money invested in them is therefore a loss.

Roads do not wear out. The surface of a good road wears of course.—Sure, that's right—when they wear out depends largely upon the gravel which they failed to put in. The roof of a house wears out but as a general thing it stays longer than some roads built by a contractor. The surface of a road is its roof, If the roof wears out it don't necessarily follow the foundation or the grade is gone, Oh no! Where the contractor built a grade the grade is still there barring a few deep ruts that extend to the foothills of China when you get off the road bed a trifle to pass a rig.

Trucks destroy roads. Therefore trucks should pay for the roads! That too, is a fallacy. Any fool knows that roads are destroyed in the process of building by the absence of gravel and brains! Sure a truck don't do it; its the baby carriages and perambulators that raise the deuce with our modern gravel-clay Appian Ways.

"There isn't money enough to pay for our National highways." Quite right! The farmer and town dweller alike have mortgaged most that they own to pay road assessments which cost $6,000 a mile. Of this blood money the contractor takes a cool $2,000 clear profit and if any surplus remains the county road board naturally needs it for gas while running around O, K. ing gravel pits. Results are the money is gone; 'twas ours, tis their's, and when last fall's potatoes are gone we shall [illegible] upon grass until [illegible]



Darling Fertilizers are Better—

BECAUSE Darling's Fertilizers supply sufficient, quickly available ammoniates, for early plant growth while the bulk of the ammonia is supplied gradually throughout the growing season—this insures continuous and maximum plant development.

BECAUSE they produce Acid Phosphate lower in free Sulphuric Acid, containing less moisture and in better mechanical condition, manufactured by a special process.

BECAUSE they have the only plant in the Middle West using this special process.

BECAUSE for over eight years they have been experimenting with different kinds of Fertilizers on various crops. From these actual field tests they have developed the ideal Fertilizer to meet your special needs. That their efforts have been successful is proven by the fact that today a big percentage of the successful farmers use DARLING'S ANIMAL BASE FERTILIZER. "MY BELOVED HERO"

SYNOPSIS. — Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston.

Jack and Solomon attended the town meeting that day in the Old South meeting-house. It was a quiet and orderly crowd that listened to the speeches of Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and Samuel Adams, demanding calmly but firmly that the soldiers be forthwith removed from the city. The famous John Hancock cut a great figure in Boston in those days. It is not surprising that Jack was impressed by his grandeur, for he had entered the meeting-house in a scarlet velvet cap and a blue damask gown lined with velvet and strode to the platform with a dignity even above his garments. As he faced about the boy did not fail to notice and admire the white satin waistcoat and white silk stockings and red morocco slippers. Mr. Quincy made a statement which stuck like a bur in Jack Irons' memory of that day, and perhaps all the faster because he did not quite understand it. The speaker said: "The dragon's teeth have been sown."

The chairman asked if there was any citizen present who had been on the scene at or about the time of the shooting. Solomon Binkus arose and held up his hand and was asked to go to the minister's room and confer with the committee.

Mr. John Adams called at the inn that evening and announced that he was to defend Captain Preston and would require the help of Jack and Solomon as witnesses. For that reason they were detained some days in Boston and released finally on the promise to return when their services were required.

They had a hearty welcome at the little house near the King's Arms, where they sat until midnight telling of their adventures. In the midst of it Jack said to his father:

"I heard a speaker say in Boston that the dragon's teeth had been sown. What does that mean?"

"It means that war is coming," said John Irons. "We might as well get ready for it."

These words, coming from his father, gave him a shock of surprise. He began to think of the effect of war on his own fortunes.

Solomon sent his furs to market and went to work on the farm of John Irons and lived with the family. The boy returned to school. After the hay had been cut and stacked in midsummer, they were summoned to Boston to testify in the trial of Preston. They left in September, taking with them a drove of horses.

"It will be good for Jack," John Irons had said to his wife. "He'll be the better prepared for his work in Philadelphia next fall."

Two important letters had arrived that summer. One from Benjamin Franklin to John Irons, offering Jack a chance to learn the printer's trade in his Philadelphia shop and board and lodging in his home.

The other letter was from Margaret Hare to the boy, in which she had said that they were glad to learn that he and Mr. Binkus were friends of Captain Preston and inclined to help him in his trouble. "Since I read your letter I am more in love with you than ever," she had written. "My father was pleased with it. He thinks that all cause of complaint will be removed. Until it is, I do not ask you to be a Tory, but only to be patient."

Jack and Solomon were the whole day getting their horses across Van Deusen's ferry and headed eastward in the rough road. Mr. Binkus wore his hanger—an old Damascus blade inherited from his father—and carried his long musket and an abundant store of ammunition; Jack wore his two pistols, in the use of which he had become most expert.

They came to wagon roads improving as they approached towns and villages, in the first of which they began selling the drove. When they reached Boston, nearly a week later, they had only the two horses which they rode.

The trial had just begun. Being ardent Whigs, their testimony made an impression. Jack's letter to his father says that Mr. Adams complimented them when they left the stand.

There is an old letter of Solomon Binkus which briefly describes the journey. He speaks of the "pompy" men who examined them. "They grinned at me all the time an' the ol' big wig jedge in the womern's dress got mad if I tried to crack a joke," he wrote in his letter. "He looked like he had paid too much fer his whistle an' thought I had sold it to him. Thought he were goin' to box my ears. John Addums is erbout as sharp as a razor. Took a likin' to Jack an' me. I tol' him he were smart 'nough to be a trapper."

The two came back in the saddle and reached Albany late in October.

CHAPTER III

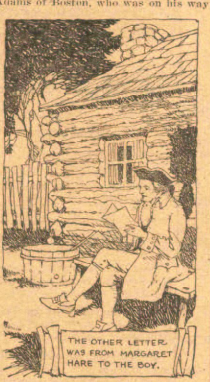
The Journey to Philadelphia

The New York Mercury of November 4, 1770, contains this item:

"John Irons, Jr., and Solomon Binkus, the famous scout, arrived Wednesday morning on the schooner Ariel from Albany. Mr. Binkus is on his way to Alexandria, Va., where he is to meet Major Washington and accompany him to the Great Kanawha river in the Far West."

Solomon was soon to meet an officer with whom he was to find the amplest scope for his talents. Jack was on his way to Philadelphia. They had found the ship crowded and Jack and two other boys "pigged together"—in the expressive phrase of that time—on the cabin floor, through the two nights of their journey. Jack minded not the hardness of the floor, but there was much drinking and arguing and expounding of the common law in the forward end of the cabin, which often interrupted his slumbers.

He took the boat to Amboy as Benjamin Franklin had done, but without mishap, and thence traveled by stage to Burlington. There he met Mr. John Adams of Boston, who was on his way to Philadelphia. He was a full-faced, ruddy, strong-built man of about thirty-five years, with thick, wavy dark hair that fell in well-trimmed tufts on either cheek and almost concealed his ears. It was beginning to show gray. He had a prominent forehead, large blue and expressive eyes and a voice clear and resonant. He was handsomely dressed.



THE OTHER LETTER WAS FROM MARGARET HARE TO THE BOY.

Mr. Adams greeted the boy warmly and told him that the testimony which he and Solomon Binkus gave had saved the life of Captain Preston. The great lawyer took much interest in the boy and accompanied him to the top of the stage, the weather being clear and warm.

When Jack was taking leave of Mr. Adams at the Black Horse tavern in Philadelphia the latter invited the boy to visit him in Boston if his way should lead him there.

Jack went to the house of the printer, where he did not receive the warm welcome he had expected. Deborah Franklin was a fat, hard-working, illiterate, economical housewife. She had a great pride in her husband, but had fallen hopelessly behind him. She regarded with awe and slight understanding the accomplishments of his virile, relentless, onpushing intellect. She did not know how to enjoy the prosperity that had come to them. It was a neat and cleanly home, but, as of old, Deborah was doing most of the work herself. She would not have had it otherwise.

"Ben thinks we ortn't to be doin' nothin' but settin' eroun' in silk dresses an' readin' books an' gabbin' with comp'ny," she said. "Men don't know how hard 'tis to git help that cleans good an' cooks decent. Everybody feels so kind o' big an' independent they won't stan' it to be found fault with."

Her daughter, Mrs. Bache, and the latter's children were there. Suddenly confronted by the problem of a strange lad coming into the house to live with them, they were a bit dismayed. But presently their motherly hearts were touched by the look of the big, gentle-faced, homesick boy. They made a room ready for him on the top floor and showed him the wonders of the big house—the library, the electrical apparatus, the rocking chair with its fan swayed by the movement of the chair, the new stove and grate which the doctor had invented. That evening, after an excellent supper, Jack suggested that he would like to have a part of the work to do.

"I can sweep and clean as well as anyone," he said. "My mother taught me how to do that. You must call on me for any help you need."

"Now I wouldn't wonder but what we'll git erlong real happy," said Mrs. Franklin. "If you'll git up 'arly an' dust the main floor an' do the broom work an' fill the wood boxes an' fetch water, I'll see ye don't go hungry."

Jack went to the shop and was put to work next morning. He had to carry beer and suffer a lot of humiliating imposition from older boys in the big shop, but he bore it patiently and made friends and good progress. That winter he took dancing lessons from the famous John Trotter of New York and practiced fencing with the well-known Master Brissac. He also took a course in geometry and trigonometry at the academy and wrote an article describing his trip to Boston for the Gazette. The latter was warmly praised by the editor and reprinted in New York and Boston journals. He joined the company for home defense and excelled in the games, on training day, especially at the running, wrestling, boxing and target shooting. There were many shooting galleries in Philadelphia wherein Jack had shown a knack of shooting with the rifle and pistol, which had won for him the Franklin medal for marksmanship. In the back country the favorite amusement of himself and father had been shooting at a mark.

Jack forged ahead, not only in the printer's art, but on toward the fullness of his strength. Under the stimulation of city life and continuous study, his talents grew like wheat in black soil. In the summer of 'seventy-three he began to contribute to the columns of the Gazette. Certain of his articles brought him compliments from the best people for their wit, penetration and good humor. He had entered upon a career of great promise when the current of his life quickened like that of a river come to a steeper grade. It began with a letter from Margaret Hare, dated July 14, 1773. In it she writes:

"When you get this please sit down and count up the years that have passed since we parted. Then think how our plans have gone awry. You must also think of me waiting here for you in the midst of a marrying world. All my friends have taken their mates and passed on. I went to Doctor Franklin today and told him that I was an old lady well past nineteen and accused him of having a heart of stone. He said that he had not sent for you because you were making such handsome progress in your work. I said: 'You do not think of the rapid progress I am making toward old age. You forget, too, that I need a husband as badly as the Gazette needs a philosopher. I rebel. You have made me an American—you and Jack. I will not longer consent to taxation without representation. Year by year I am giving up some of my youth and I am not being consulted about it.'

"Said he: 'I would demand justice of the king. I suppose he thinks that his country cannot yet afford a queen. I shall tell him that he is imitating George the Third and that he had better listen to the voice of the people.'

"Now, my beloved hero, the English girl who is not married at nineteen is thought to be hopeless. There are fine lads who have asked my father for the right to court me and still I am waiting for my brave deliverer and he comes not. I cannot forget the thrush's song and the enchanted woods. They hold me. If they have not held you—if for any reason your heart has changed—you will not fail to tell me, will you? Is it necessary that you should be great and wise and rich and learned before you come to me? Little by little, after many talks with the venerable Franklin, I have got the American notion that I would like to go away with you and help you to accomplish these things and enjoy the happiness which was ours, for a little time, and of which you speak in your letters. Surely there was something very great in those moments. It does not fade and has it not kept us true to our promise? But, Jack, how long am I to wait? You must tell me."

"The letter to Dr. Franklin was in his pocket."

FLOUR IS MANUACTURED FROM THE SUGAR BEET

An important additional use for the sugar beet is found in the manufacture of flour therefrom. Indeed, it is reported that this kind of flour is turned out in considerable quantities at Suresnes, in France, where an enterprising person has built a large drier for the purpose. The first part of the process consists in chopping up the beets and drying the water from them. They contain, to start with, about 72 per cent of water, nearly all of which is removed by evaporation. By this means 100 pounds of dry material are obtained from 357 pounds of beets. The dry material contains more than 70 per cent of sugar—that is to say, there will be more than 70 pounds of sugar in every 100 pounds of the evaporated product. Accordingly, the latter, on being ground to a fine meal, is exceedingly sweet and well adapted for the making of cakes and puddings. It is estimated to contain something like 82 per cent of pure nutriment. The expectation is that this sort of flour will eventually come into extensive use, particularly in the manufacture of cakes and sweet bread. It is said to be not only very nutritious, but guaranteed to be germ free by reason of the high temperature to which the raw material is exposed in the process of evaporation.

Over on the pike the other day we saw an auto. Not that it is strange to see an auto but this had a young fellow in it who gave us a smile a yard wide. Not that it is strange to have a young fellow give us a smile, but he was a total stranger to us and that made it seem strange. And the auto was decorated from head to foot with flags and streamers and as it went by we noticed a sign on the rear end which read "Just married" and of course that explained the flags, the streamers and the smiles "And they lived happily" until one or the other found a soul mate or an affinity or a representative of some Oriental philosophy and then every thing was changed. But such is our modern christian civilization so called.

Hillsdale College Sets Limit

By unanimous enactment of the Prudential Committee of Hillsdale College the number of students to be permitted in attendance in any one semester is limited to 500 of which one-half may be women and one-half men, according to a chapel announcement before the student body on Thursday.

Special provision is made for those students who return to complete their course and for sons and daughters and near relatives of the Alumni, trustees and benefactors of the College, providing their scholarship standing is above the lower one-third of their class in High School.

It was announced as the clearly defined policy of the College to furnish the finest possible facilities for liberal arts study and to this end the governing body has accompanied its new rule of numbers by an authorization for the placing of new buildings on the campus of which the gymnasium is to be the first unit.

Registration for next fall will begin at Hillsdale on April 1st.

The Students Are Raw

Dr. Leroy Burton President of the University of Michigan last Friday made a strong plea for a betterment of morals at the College In other words Prof Burton made a few straight from the shoulder cracks at the student body urging them to change their ways and stiffen up the backbone of decency. He said in part "Things have transpired recently that are as raw as anything that has happened in my fifteen years of administration experience." Dr. Burton told the 4,000 students and members of the faculty.

"You students are lazy, you loaf, you gamble, you spend the week ends in big cities, and you wonder why we don't want you here. We don't want loafers here and we will get rid of you as fast as we find you out. Student evils in this University must go.

"We must have students who are men. They must believe in honesty plain decency, must be chivalrous, must respect themselves and be industrious.

"Self restraint is the first requirement of a student.

"Whether we like it or not the co-ed question at the University is settled. As long as we are a tax supported institution the co-eds will be here, and we are delighted to have them."

President Burton referred among other things, it was understood by his hearers, to the publication recently of a paper filled with stories based on sex appeal.

"Some one has slaved and suffered and given life blood for you and to make this university what it is, and you come here and prevert the whole cause. I'd rather see you die of hard work than merely sit back and rot out. I believe that every publication on the campus should exclude any story based on the sex appeal.

"I am amazed at the things unmarried men and women will talk about. There are so many things in this world that we need not pander to the lower things of life to enjoy companionship between sexes."

Honored Citizen Passed Away

Benjamin J. Glasgow of Jackson passed away at Foote Memorial Hospital in that city on Tuesday morning March 18th. Death was due to a fractured skull sustained while crossing the interurban tracks near Jackson in an automobile. Mr. Glasgow's brother was driving the machine and attempted to cross in front of the on-coming electric car. Both men were badly hurt but John Glasgow it is thought will recover. Some children were riding in the rear seat and they were not much injured. Mr. B. J. Glasgow for many years has been a prominent business man of Jackson and mayor at one time He was highly respected by all having conducted a large dry goods store in partnership with his brother.

Andrew J. Walters died at his home in Somerset township Sunday March 23 of appoplexy. He was 74 years of age and had been ailing for six years. Funeral was held from late home and burial was in Aldrich cemetery.

A large delegation of young people from the M. E. church of Hillsdale were present last Sunday evening and presented the Pageant "The Story of the Cross," in a very beautiful and impressive manner at the church hour at the church here.

Mrs. Rachel Wood who resided near Jerome, passed away last Friday night. She was 81 years of age and is survived by two daughters and one son, Lewis Wood, of this village. Funeral was conducted Monday at 2:00 p. m. and interment at Aldrich cemetery.

Another mention of the loss of the book "Four Square" by Grace Richmond, is made at this time. If anyone has the book, or knows who has, it would be appreciated if the fact were made known at the Library. Some other books have been mislaid or forgotten and should be handed is.

The Parent-Teacher's meeting at the congregational church on Wednesday evening drew quite a crowd of people. The address of the evening was made by Prof. W. D. Henderson of the U. of M. and his subject was "Dollars and Sense in Education" A movie film entitled "Morgan Park" was enjoyed by the assemblage.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mergenthaler very pleasantly entertained ten couples at Five Hundred Saturday evening, the high honors going to Mrs. C. E. Parsons and Dr. Fred Kline and low to Mrs. L. K. Feigner and Andy Adams. A lovely luncheon was served by the hostess and a general good time enjoyed.—Litchfield Gazette

Frank Hoover of Hillsdale a veteran of the Civil war died at the home of his daughter Mrs. Dr, Stoner in Durham, North Carolina on Monday and his body was brought to Hillsdale on Wednesday. Funeral services were held at the United Brethren church at Ransom, after short services at the home of his son on Thursday in Hillsdale. He is survived by three sons and four daughters and was quite well known in this vicinity.

The Litchfield Gazette remarks that many people from out of town come to Litchfield to trade in preference to other towns nearer to them and one merchant in Litchfield reports customers in one day in his store from Concord, Jackson, Pulaski, and Clarendon. These folks told the merchant they could buy much cheaper at Litchfield than at any of these other places. Now then, what do you think of the idea Mr. North Adams merchant? Can we liven things up a bit here by doing some specializing in prices and spotting a little printing ink occasionally? Selling good goods cheap is a mighty good reputation for a town to get and wide-awake merchants are always after that kind of dope. cheap prices is "the long arm of Mannister" that reaches out to the countryside aud rakes 'em in!

Former North Adams Boy Marries

Ervir. R. Vreeland and Miss Nadia Durfee were married March 10th by Rev. George of Mt. Hope Methodist church at Lansing. The couple made a short trip to Indiana. The groom is a graduate of the North Adams high school in the Class of 1919 and has a good position at the Reo Automobile plant in Lansing where they will be at home to their many friends after April 15 at 413 West Barnes Avenue.

Death of Charles Collins

Charles Collins, brother of Eli Collins of this vicinity, and eldest of seven children born to Sylvester and Betsy Collins, passed away March 16 at the home of his daughter, Alice Holding, in Chickasha, Oklahoma, at the advanced age of 92 years. He was a veteran of the Civil war and very well known in North Adams where he made many visits after taking up his residence in the west. He is survived by two daughters, three sisters, Mesdames L. H. Locklin, of this vicinity, E. D. Buck of Hillsdale and Mrs. Ophelia Ingham of Detroit besides one brother, Eli. Burial was in Oklahoma.

Brotherhood Concert a Success

Notwithstanding the inclement weather the Brotherhood concert at the Methodist church Friday evening. March 21st, was greeted by a comfortably filled house. The director, Frank Perkins of Hillsdale is well known in this vicinity and his achievement in organizing and training such a chorus is commendable. Howard Haskell of West Adams and Mr. DeGreene gave readings which were very good. Mr. Haskell rendered "The Daughter of Jarius" in a touching manner. Mr. DeGreene specialized in humorous selections. Solos were given by Rev. Harry Henry and Mr. Mack of Hillsdale and both gentlemen showed marked results of training

Mr. Perkins rendered two of his incomparable solos and was enthusiastically encored. Mrs. Lulu Wells of this vicinity is the accompanist of the chorus.

Marshall Fields of Frontier is another soloist of ability, his piano technique and touch being excellent. He was encored. The baritone voice of Mr. Mack is certainly very commendable in solo work.

JOYS OF MOTHERHOOD

Often Prevented by Female Trouble

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brings Joy to Homes by Removing Cause of Trouble

Brooklyn, N.Y.,—"I was working after I got married and the young lady who worked next to me asked me if I had any intentions of having a child. I told her I would be the happiest woman on earth if I could become a mother, but I always had terrible cramps, backaches and headaches. She then told me of a woman she knows who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the same troubles and it helped her greatly. I took about a half bottle and found that the following month I did not suffer any pain, so I kept on taking it. I have a wonderful baby boy six months old and he is as strong and fat as any one could wish a baby to be. I still take the Vegetable Compound regularly because I have looked fine all the time and felt fine and my mother told me that was the reason. I will be glad to have you publish my testimonial with my name and address."—Mrs. EDWARD WERBECK, 1824 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Free From Old Trouble

Auburn, Maine.—"I suffered with inward weakness for ten years and had doctored all this long time but never got any help. One day I saw my sister and she told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I went and got me a bottle of it. I took two bottles and a half and I was just as free from my old troubles as I could be. I had only one child and I was afraid that I could never have any more, for I had been told that I never could have a living child for I was not strong enough to carry one. But they were mistaken and I had a nice baby boy and now I have five children. I can't praise your medicine enough. My youngest sister has taken it, too, and praises it."—Mrs. G. L. WISWELL, 43 Mechanics Row, Auburn, Maine.

These cases are similar to many others reported to us. It is well for women to carefully consider such statements and to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It may bring great joy to your home.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a medicine for women.

Shortest Electric Wave Is Only Ten Meters Long

Complete electric waves only ten meters long, believed to be among the shortest ever produced, have been developed by an electric oscillator invented by J. P. Barton, a sophomore student at the University of Minnesota. The electrical engineering department is beginning experiments to determine whether this current is practicable in radio communication.

The waves compare with ordinary lengths of from 100 to 24,000 meters used in radio communication, while wave lengths in power transmission are frequently several thousand miles long.

One advantage of the short waves is that they can be used more effectively in classroom demonstration than longer ones can.

The Burton oscillator generates pronounced "standing" current so that at one point on a wire several amperes are measured, while a few feet away no current is perceptible. Another of its freaks is that short circuits on the wire do not seem to affect it.

Waves from the new oscillator have the unusually high frequency of 30,000,000 cycles per second.

Mme. Mustache Famous Character of Deadwood

One of the famous and mysterious characters who thronged the streets of Deadwood, in the Black hills, in the latter seventies was a fine-looking, plump, little French woman of about forty years, called Mme. Mustache, from a dainty little hirsute adornment gracing her upper lip.

For 15 years she had followed the railway and mining camp, conducting gambling houses "on her own," dealing her own game, handling the faro box like a veteran and maintaining "order" (as it was known) in every establishment she owned.

Nothing was known of her antecedents, except that she was of a degree of culture superior to her environment and was a good sport and a square dealer.—Detroit News.

Aroused by commercial interests' hauling away sand from the dunes surrounding the harbor at Grand Haven, destroying what is held to be one of the city's best summer resort advertisements, the Grand Haven Women's club has petitioned the city council to preserve these natural beauty spots. One of these dunes, known as the Harbor Avenue Hill, already is half cut away. Club members will also circulate petitions among the citizens, it is announced, in the hope of saving the dunes.

Twenty-eight and one-tenth per cent of all deaths in Michigan are caused by cancer, Dr. Frederick C. Warnshutz, secretary of the Michigan State Medical Society, declared before the Kent County Medical Society here recently. "One out of every eight deaths of women past the age of 40 is due to cancer," he said. "The average of men past the age of 40 who died of cancer is one of every 14. Between the ages of 35 and 55 is the time when cancer is most likely to appear."

The annual high school band tournament at Michigan Agricultural College will be held May 24 under the auspices of the M. A. C. Varsity Band, according to announcement by Prof. A. J. Clark, director of the band. Nine high schools were represented in the tournament last year, which was the first after a lapse of several years, and more than 12 are expected this year, several inquiries having been received already.

A campaign for membership in the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange, which began at Traverse City recently will extend through the whole potato growing area of Northern Michigan before it is completed next summer. At that time it is hoped 50,000 acres of potatoes, or 50 per cent of the State acreage north, east and west of Saginaw, will b tied up by contract with the exchange.

Work has been started on the Dowagiac River drain which has remained uncompleted since conspiracy charges were brought two years ago against the contractor and local officials, including the county drain commissioner. Resumption of the work was prompted by floods which have inundated the farms belonging to several property holders living in the vicinity of the drain.

Owners of buildings on the right of way of the D., T. & I. railroad at Maybee, Scofield, Carleton and other places, have been notified by officials of the railroad to remove them a certain distance from the right of way, according to word received here. It is understood that steps are being formulated to double track the line and work will be started in the spring.

Rev. Johannes Green, 59 years old, for 19 years pastor of the Eastern Avenue Christian Reformed church at Grand Rapids, and a leader in the councils of that denomination, died recently at his home in Los Angeles, Cal. He retired from the local classes November 1, 1919, after 20 years in the ministry, during which he served only two congregations.

Approval by the board of education of the plan to re-establish the Manistee County Normal School assures that institution at Manistee again next fall. Lack of sufficient patronage caused its closing six months ago but the additional requirements of teachers have revived the need.

Mrs. August Puist, 40 years old, was instantly killed by a falling tree at Bergmann's Camp near Bark River last week. She was watching her husband, who is employed in the camp, fell the tree, when it suddenly toppled and crashed to the ground, pinning her under it.

H. J. Klaake, student at the Central Michigan Normal School at Kalamazoo, has been chosen superintendent of schools at Mancelona for next year. Although a student at present, Kaake has had several years of experience as a teacher.

Funeral services for Eliza A. Runyan, who died at the age of 103 years, were held last week at the farmhouse of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Primley, near Berrien Center. She is believed to have been the oldest resident of Southwestern Michigan.

James S. Kenney, 91 years old, who for 60 years was resident of Alpena, died after three hours' illness at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. J. Lalonde, recently. He was in the employ of the Gilchrist Lumber Co. continuously for 33 years.

A new two-story factory building erected inside the prison yard at Marquette last summer, will be used for the wood working plant, plans for which were approved by the State Prison Commission in Jackson. The building was finished early in the fall and machinery can be installed without delay.

State offices here will go on Eastern standard time, beginning March 31, it has been decided by the state administrative board.

So far as can be learned chop suey was unknown in China until quite recently. It is purely the creation of English-speaking Chinese restaurant keepers in the United States. The origin of the word "chop suey" is uncertain. Most authorities believe it is composed of English "chop" and Chinese "sui," meaning bits, fragments or fine pieces, for chop suey is only a hash or mixture of fine bits of various meats and vegetables.

There seems to be no connection between "chop" in "chop suey" and in "chopsticks." In the latter word "chop" means "quick," and probably refers to the celerity with which natives of China habitually handle the chopsticks. One lexicographer thinks "chop" may come from the Cantonese word "sap," which means to enter the mouth.—Detroit News.

POULTRY •FACTS•

POULTRY SPECIALIST SAYS NO BEST BREED

Which is the best breed is a question often asked us. In answer we have to say that there is no best breed. You can find good and poor layers, large and small birds comparatively in every breed. It is the strain more than the breed that is really the more important thing to consider.

There are three recognized general classes of poultry, the small birds or so-called egg producing class, the medium-sized bird, or the so-called dual purpose class, and the extremely large or the meat class. There is no great distinction between the egg class or the dual so far as the egg production is concerned, for many of the medium meat breeds are good egg layers. And in the small sized birds which are considered for egg laying only, there are oftentimes found individuals that will weigh from five to five and one-half pounds, and these would make a fairly good meat bird.

In regard to the breed you would like to have, it is suggested that you decide upon whether you want eggs primarily, or whether you want general purpose breeds. When you have made this decision, pick out the breed which you like best, because this is the breed with which you will get the best results. Then after you have picked the breed that you like best, buy your stock or eggs from a breeder whom you know has bred for the thing that you desire. This may be egg production, or it may be show purposes, or it may be a combination. You can find many breeders who have bred for egg production, but their stock may not be worth very much for show purposes. You can find breeders who have bred for show purposes and their stock, in turn, may not be worth very much for egg production. You can find a small per cent of breeders who have combined these two qualities and, of course, their stock would naturally be worth more because of this combination.

Just as a parting caution be sure you know the breeder from whom you are buying your stock and be sure that he has the strain of birds which have the qualities which you desire.—H. Embleton, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

"Hatch Early" and Get More Eggs From Poultry

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Profits in poultry raising depend to a large extent on the earliness in the season that chickens are hatched. Because of this fact a slogan of the United States Department of Agriculture has been "Hatch Early."

The earlier in life a pullet commences laying the greater the number of eggs produced during the first laying year, department poultry experts say. Pullets should be in laying condition the first part of October, if good winter egg production is to be expected. The more eggs laid during November, December and January, the greater are the annual profits.

The department points out that in order to commence laying in October, pullets of the Plymouth Rock, Rhode Island Red, Wyandotte and similar breeds should be hatched the latter part of March or the first part of April. Pullets of the Leghorn, Ancona and similar breeds should be hatched the latter part of April or the first part of May.

Late-hatched chicks are rarely as profitable as early-hatched ones. When hatched late, they are not able to make as good growth during the hot summer months and do not mature in time to start laying in the early fall. There is little danger of farmers hatching chicks too early.

POULTRY NOTES

Wet brooder floors have caused the death of thousands of little ducklings.

• • •

• • •

Any bird lacking vigor and constitution should be removed from the breeding pen. Unhealthy birds have no place there. Aiming for quality rather than quantity gets healthier chicks.

• • •

A good dry mash, fed by means of hoppers, should be before the hens all the time. In the morning feed your grain in deep straw litter and again at night, but let the hens eat all the mash they want.

• • •

A good-sized breed is usually considered best for the farm in spite of the fact that the small breeds may lay a few more eggs per year.

• • •

Incubator failures are usually the fault of the operator, but skill comes with practice and following the instructions accompanying the machine.

• • •

Early spring is nature's most favorable growing season. Early hatched chickens have the advantage of this favorable growing season and a longer growing period.

• • •

The perch poles should be made removable and should be carried out and sunned every two months. Kerosene is a very good perch disinfectant to kill lice and mites and destroy germs.

• • •

Nothing like plenty of sunlight to "thaw out" the hens at this season of the year, increasing the egg yield and producing strong-germed eggs. See that plenty of it is admitted into the house.

Wasp Was the First to Make Paper From Pulp

The principle of paper making from wood pulp has been in use by the humble wasp for several thousands of years.

The ordinary wasp's nest is constructed of papier mache. In its construction the queen of the swarm utilizes the "modern" method of converting woody tissue into thin sheets.

She constructs a cluster of five or six cells from the frayed fiber from weather-beaten boards or dead trees, or even bits of man-made paper. This cluster she provides with a waterproof paper umbrella.

Then she lays her first batch of eggs and proceeds to build another tier of cells to the bottom of the suspended pyramid, doubling the number of cells in the second tier, and adds correspondingly to the outside protective wall which is made up of alternate layers of paper and dead air, like the thermos bottle.—Detroit News.

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital

Gaston B. Means is by far the most popular witness among the Senate investigators. In his two trunks full of the records his spectacular career, Means claims to have enough information to put most of the officials in Washington behind the bars, and his sensational charges involving members of the Harding Coolidge Cabinet in graft and corruption seems to indicate that the famous private detective is not bluffing. Born on a North Carolina cotton plantation, Means is one of the most picturesque characters in American public life. He has been charged with every known crime, but never convicted, and he continues his merry way, striking terror to the hearts of those who come beneath his eagle eye. Means they think will put them on the right track.

Regardless of whether anything is proven involving Attorney General Daughtery in this or that scandal, his days in the Cabinet are numbered. Daugherty holds to the belief that nothing will ever be proved against him, but even if the committee fails to find anything in its investigation, the Attorney General will step down and out about April 15th. If damaging evidence to bear out the charges against him is produced, President Coolidge may demand his resignation before that time.

Investigation of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's Interna Revenue Bureau is being directed by Senator Jim Watson of Indianal though the probe was started by another Jim--Couzens of Michigan. Those who are aware of the ill-feeling that has existed for a long time between Watson and Mellon are expecting some interesting fireworks.

Hardly anyone is taking seriously the statements that certain Senators are in danger of being assassinated because of their attacks upon public officials. The charge was made openly by Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama, who intimated that the bullet which recently hit Senator Greene of Vermont, was really intended for him. Greene was supposed to have been shot during a pistol battle between bootleggers and federal agents.

William S. Kenyon, former Senator and now a federal judge, refused to become Secretary of the Navy in the Coolidge Cabinet because he is aiming higher. Kenyon would like to be Attorney General, and he also has an eye on the Presidency. It is possible that Coolidge would offer him the Attorney Generalship, but to that there would considerable opposition, as Kenyon would go into office with the idea of making the fur fly, and that might not be so pleasant to some of the gentlemen on the inside.

The oil probe is about finished. Senator Walsh and those associated with him in the investigation have concluded that they have accomplished about all they can, in view of the suits filed in California and Wyoming to cancel the Sinclair and Doheny leases, so they will retire to the background while the Daugherty and Mellon probes occupy the spotlight.

Coolidge continues to keep cool in the face of all the serious charges and allegations that are being hurled at his subordinates in the course of the various investigations at the Capital. The President is assured by his Campaign managers in the Middle West that there is no doubt that he will be nominated at Cleveland on the first ballot.

The candidacy of William G. McAdoo does not appear to be gaining much headway in this part of the country, but the former Secretary of the Treasury declares that he has the Democratic nomination cinched. It is too early to forecast the result of the Democratic race, as Senator Underwood is just as optimistic as McAdoo, while in some quarters there is talk of a "dark horse" such as Royal Copeland of New York, Carter Glass of Virginia or Sam Raiason of Indiana.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

We Need The Roads

One of the factors retarding road development is lack of appreciation of the modern science of highway building and using.

We know too many things about roads which are not so!

Many of our highway ideas are twenty years behind the times. We haven't caught up with the engineer.

For instance, "all roads wear out. The enormous money invested in them is thus a capital loss."

Roads do not wear out. The surface of a good road wears, of course. So does the roof of a house. But replacing the house roof doesn't mean that the rest of the house isn't good. The surface of a road is its roof. If it wears out it must be replaced. But that doesn't mean that the right of way, the grade, foundation, and all the material is any less valuable than at first.

"Trucks destroy roads. Therefore trucks should pay for roads!" That, too, is a fallacy. A truck no more destroys a road, when truck and road fit, than a baby carriage destroys a garden path. It is lack of maintenance which destroys roads, it is allowing too light a road to be built for the traffic it will bear, which destroys roads; it is failure to enact wide tire and maximum road laws which destroys roads.

"There isn't enough money to pay for national highways. We will all be bankrupts!" More fallacy. There are fourteen million cars in the United States. If they are worth on an average of $500 each (which is an underestimate), they represent an investment of $7,000,000,000. Did we get bankrupt buying them? We did not! Why should we get bankrupt buying seven billion dollars worth of roads. and the interest on seven billions will build today more national highways than we have as yet engineers and machinery to build.

Transportation has been, for us Americans, nothing but rail and water for all our history. Now we are compelled to translate the word into "highways" and "motors." Motors we understand highways, as yet, we only partially comprehend, and "motor transport," as a whole, is yet a sealed book to most of us.

The first step in opening it is to get rid of fallacious thinking; to realize that what used to be, is no more true today, than what is proper road width and cost today, will fit condition fifty, a hundred years hence!

When the Chicago World's Fair began its work, it took a good two years to put it into show-shape. Since those days, the science of of show building has advanced so far that it is possible to take an empty hall, such as Convention Hall, Detroit, where the Michigan Industrial Exposition is to be held in May, and completely transform it into a scene of organized beauty and intensive activity in a few days Booths, decorations, power lines, gas and all the other requirements of a large expositinn are so constructed that a complete service can be given in almost a matter of hours.

FARMS USING RADIO NEAR 150,000 MARK

Survey Reveals Its Value in Agriculture—Stations Broadcast Special Farm Information.

The rapidity with which radio has spread in farming communities is revealed by a recent survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture. County agents estimate that there are approximately 40,000 radio sets in 700 counties. This is an average of fifty-seven sets per county. Applying the average to 2,850 agricultural counties, a total of more than 145,000 sets on farms throughout the country is estimated. The survey covers every state in the Union.

Radio broadcasting stations, and there are now about 600 licensed stations in the country, devote part of their programs to the interests of the farmer. WGY, the General Electric Company's station at Schenectady, N. Y., reads daily produce market quotations, weather reports and gives out other information of value to the farmer. During the month of July a special harvest weather report was sent out each noon, and Arlington time signals are broadcast daily at noon.

A new feature of interest to farmers has just been announced by WGY. On the last Monday evening of each month there will be a special talk on farm bureaus and farm information, which will be given from 7:15 to 7:45 o'clock, eastern standard time. This has been arranged in co-operation with the New York State Farm Bureau Federation.

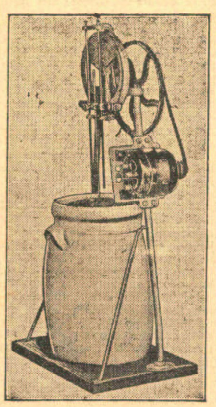
That the farmers appreciate the broadcast reports is daily brought to the attention of the management of WGY through letters. H. A. Williams, living on R. F. D. No. 1, Bethel, Vt., recently wrote as follows: "I beg to advise you that your weather forecasts are valuable to a farmer like myself, as they enable us to govern our harvesting movements more successfully than we could do if we did not have a general idea of weather prospects Your reports give us from 24 to 36 hours advance information. We appreciate the benefits we receive in this way."

Lynn Brown, a farmer at Roseboom, N. Y., wrote: "We are farmers and greatly enjoy your program. We also like the weather report as it keeps us informed as to the weather for haying. This is especially important when help is scarce and the radio weather report helps out a lot."

FARMING BY MOTOR

Churn Is One of Modern Farm Devices That Has Been Electrified.

When grandma and grandpa started housekeeping on the old farm, young and lusty in years, it didn't seem such a terrible job to churn four or five gallons of cream, working the handle of the churn up and down, with the cream getting stiffer every minute. But as time went on and the multitude of other farm chores piled up the churning frequently became one more muscle-acher, the prospect of which didn't always bring smiles.



When Electricity Makes the Butter

There are farms today where hand churning is never known. Butter is produced in large quantities and in quick time, with unfailing regularity, but no muscles feel any the stiffer for it. The secret lies in the presence of that little black motor that takes care of all the muscle work and never grows tired or feels used up after hours of work.

The electric motor has entirely altered the aspect of this particular chore, as it has also done in the case of many other farm duties, some of them much heavier than that of churning. The electrified farm can take full advantage of this ingenious arrangement, which helps to save time, and thereby make the farm family a family of leisure. And someone has defined leisure as being simply "time to live."

PLAY BASEBALL AND FOOTBALL AT NIGHT

Electric Floodlights and Searchlights Successfully Applied to Popular Outdoor Sports.

Baseball and football at night under the light of powerful floodlights and searchlights was successfully played last fall on the illuminated athletic field of the General Electric Company at West Lynn, Mass. The entire field was excellently lighted, so that both players and spectators were enabled to follow the ball, even when it was high in the air, without trouble.

Night baseball was so successful that a permanent installation of the lights has been made for this purpose, and games after dark will be part of a regular schedule in the spring.

Could Follow High Flies

Twenty floodlighting units and three eighteen-inch General Electric incandescent searchlights were used for the illumination. The incandescent lamps employed for both floodlights and searchlights were 1,000 watt, 110 volt, and at the last moment three additional searchlights were added for the purpose of throwing a complete canopy of light into the air over the field. These were the lights which made it possible to follow high flies. The other lights were depended upon largely to illuminate the ground.

The lights represented a combined strength of four million candlepower. The game lasted from about 8:15 to 9:45.

The permanent illumination plan for night baseball consists of five lighting stations. One station is located 100 feet back of the home plate, one each opposite first base and third base, 125 feet on a line from home plate, and one each back of the right field foul line and the left field foul line, 175 feet from a line drawn through the home plate. The lights are mounted on platforms, supported forty feet above the ground by poles.

Football Game Floodlighted

Night football followed swiftly on the heels of night baseball. The engineers designed a somewhat different lighting plan for football, consisting of eight instead of five lighting stations. Two of these were placed 35 feet back of each goal line and 94 feet apart. Two more were located 100 feet back of the side-lines on each side and 150 feet apart.

Fifty floodlighting units, each equipped with a 1,000-watt Mazda lamp, were used, and eight of the eighteen-inch searchlights, also having 1,000-watt Mazda lamps. This made a total of 58 units, giving a combined light volume of five million candlepower. A regulation four-period game was played under these lights, with several thousand spectators.

KGO OPENS ON PACIFIC COAST

New Radio Station of General Electric Co., Finely Equipped, Works on 312 Meters.

On the western edge of the United States at Oakland, Cal., two steel towers have arisen and from the antenna, on January 8, a new radio voice vibrated on the air. This voice, now heard regularly three nights every week, is that of KGO, the second link in a chain of three super-broadcasting stations planned by the General Electric Company. The first is WGY, at Schenectady, N. Y., now completing two years of popular broadcasting, and the third will be erected at Denver, Col.

For the first time in the brief history of radio broadcasting, an entire building has been constructed to house a great station and its equipment.

The Oakland station in its studio, control room and power station embodies the latest developments in the art. Its power and antenna systems, a thousand feet away from the studio building, include all the mechanical and technical refinements that have marked the new achievements in broadcasting. The engineering resources of a great electrical organization have been brought into the problem of making this station one which every listening radio fan may enjoy.

The Pacific Coast station is located on East Fourteenth street, Oakland, a site selected because of its technical advantages, the availability of musical talent and the nearness of San Francisco. It is a two-story brick building. On the first floor is the office of the studio manager, the correspondence room, and attractive reception room and the ladies' rest room.

On the second floor are two handsomely appointed studios, one large enough to accommodate a chorus or orchestra, and the other for the broadcasting of solos or addresses. The use of two studios makes continuous broadcasting possible, as the performer can prepare to broadcast while the preceding number is being given. Adjoining the studios is a "silent" room, where those taking part in the program await the call to the studio. There is also on this floor a control room, where operators listen to the broadcasting with headphones at ear.

The power house and antenna system are a thousand feet from the studio building. The station operates at 1,000 watts, and 312 meters.

KGO will be in the air every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night.

For fifty cents a day—a mere half dollar—O. H. Caldwell, of Bronxville, N. Y., operates an all-electrical home in which every possible function is done electrically. Fifty-five operations in his home are so performed.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122, and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortnage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

Law Suits Are Quite Expensive

Just to illustrate the fallacy of the human family and its tendency to "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel" we want to call your attention to a lawsuit which is being staged at Hillsdale wherein a couple of farmers listed their property with a real estate firm for sale and the results were so unsatisfactory they have since attempted to prove in court that somebody lied. In all up to date 21 witnesses have been sworn in the case and the end is not yet. It is likely that when this case is through the lawyers will have the property, the litigents will have the experience and the general public will have its opinion of the whole bunch. Any man who expects to go to law and beat the lawyers at their own game is extremely; paradoxical. In the first place you can go to Hillsdale engage whom you will for counsel and the chances are about ten to one before you are through you will find you are not only dealing with your own lawyer but with every other last legal gentleman on the case—therefore keep clear of lawsuits unless you are a millionaire.

Michigan Crop Tests Show Poor Seed Corn

Seriousness of the seed corn situation in Michigan this spring, and the unusual need for careful selection and testing of the seed stocks to be planted in the state, has been brought out strikingly this week in a report of germination tests made with corn raised by a selected group of the state's best corn growers.

Of sixty-five members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, whose corn crop proved satisfactory in the field last season, only fifteen could pass for final certification on the association's certified seed corn lists, in spite of the fact that this group represented the best corn growers of the state and those who had taken better than average care of their seed stocks.

"If this condition exists in the seed corn stock of growers who have taken special care, the vitality of the general run of seed cornthroughout the state is indeed low," says H. C. Rather, M. A. C. specialist and secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association.

"Teachers of agriculture in many of the high schools of the state have been running tests which indicate a germination of less than fifty percent for the aver age seed of their communities, while county agricultural agents have been getting similar results. Corn is going to be a safe and profitable crop during the coming season only for those who plant carefully dried seed which has been tested and gives a high germination.

High moisture content at harvest time last fall if held responsible for the poor condition of the state's seed corn supply. The fifteen growers who qualified for the crop improvement association certification are said to have available enough of this choice seed to plant about ten thousand acres. All of it comes from Michigan's leading varieties, germinates 95 percent or better, and has been dried to a safe moisture content, according to Mr. Rather.

—The Advocate and Michigan Farmer both one year $2.15. This is the leading farm combination and you will find the two newsy.

"A special news bulletin on clover seed shortage, issued recently to the agricultural press by the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers Association, contains the statement that the Michigan seed produced 2.48 tons, Chilian 2.52 tons, French 2.25 tons. other European seed 2.18, and that the clover grown from Michigan seed made a stronger second growth

Prohibition Has Come To Stay

Address delivered at a citizenship conference in New York City by Warren S. Stone, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers :

"You may think it a far cry from organized labor to the question of prohibition. Perhaps many of you in my audience do not believe in organized labor. Be that as it may, you are more vitally interested in the organization I have the honor to represent than I possibly could be as its executive officer, an organization of 90,000 men employed on the 2,768 railroads of the North American Continent, handling the transportation of three great countries. United States, Canada and Mexico, Every time you make a railroad journey you ride behind one of the men I represent. You want to know they are skilled men, keen, bright, wide-awake men of the highest type, men who can act and think quickly; men with nerves of steel. You are vitally interested in all of this because into their keeping you trust all that you hold dear on this earth, the lives of your loved ones: they bring them back to you again and die at their post of duty as many of them do each year. There is not a case on record where one of them betrayed his trust. There are hundreds of cases on record where they went down to death that the people entrusted to their care might live.

When you realize that on these limited trains an engineer must pick up and interpret at least three signals per minute on the average, each of which spells the difference between safety and disaster, you can understand why every sense must be alert. We who have spent most of our lives in the cab of a locomotive know the infinitesimal fraction of a second that means safety. That alcohol does slow down brain action is conceded by all. so ten years before the church began preaching prohibition, years before even the railroad officials began issuing orders about drinking, the Brotherhood of Engineers were fighting the drink evil. A law of the organization that has been in effect during the 20 years I have been the executive, reads as follows:

"The use of intoxicating liquors either on or off duty is prohibited. It shall be the duty of his division (lodge) to investigate any violation of this rule and if the member is found guilty he shall be expelled. Any division (lodge) failing to enforce this law, shall have its charter suspended by the Grand Chief Engineer."

You could not put it much stronger than that, and I can say to you without fear of contradiction that this law is rigidly enforced. Again the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at its international convention in 1917 with 902 voters present. by a unanimous vote of all delegates declared in favor of nationwide prohibition.

We hear much at the present time about personal liberty of the individual and the infringement upon his personal rights by the enactment of the prohibition law. All law is the will of the majority and is enacted for the beuefit of the majority, and the minority obeys, a technical violation of the personal liberty of the individual perhaps, but all civilization rests upon the principle of laws enacted for the repression of the interests of the few for the benefit of the interests of the great majority; in other words the greatest good for the greatest number."

The Macfadden girls who will appear in physical culture dances during the Michigan Industrial Exposition at Detroit in May, have probably been more constantly before the public than any two young ladies in the country. They began their career of being photographed, interviewed and written about while they were still a few days old, and their physical training began long before most babies learn to creep.

Although slender, pretty, modest and extremely girlish, their muscular development has been so cunningly arranged and wrought that a strong man would have difficulty in competing with them in most forms of sport.

The decorating of the interior of Convention Hall, Detroit, where the Michigan Industrial Exposition is to held in May, is seemingly a good job for a sharp shooter rathe than a regulation painter.

The painting is all done with a pistol. This gun is attached by a small tube to a barrel of paint, but for all that it looks exactly like the modern automatic firearms. The ammunition is compressed air.

When one knows that there are hundreds of thousands of square feet of space to be covered, one realizes that an army of ordinary painters would be required to cover this great area.

Rickets Caused By Natural Deficiencies

Recent experiments on rickets prove that it is caused by improper diets and deficiency in sunlight. This is quite pertinent today for a large percentage of children show signs of the disease. "In my opinion, if food containing plenty of lime salts were accompanied by glandular foods in the diets of children, our rickets problem would solve itself,"stated Dr. R. M. Olin, State Health Commissioner. "Meals should include milk, fruit, vegetables and whole cereals. for those build strong teeth and bones".

Contrary to general supposition the sunlight theory has not been thrust in the shade. While a deficiency in the sunlight, it is pointed out, does not outweigh the evils of improper diet in causing rickets, the value of sunlight in curing and preventing rickets is on a par with the best of diets including cod liver oil. Grounds for controversy are offered by certain tribes of Eskimos who seldom see the sun, yet who are entirely free from rickets due to their raw-food and fat diets. Inversely, rickets is unknown in the tropics where sunlight prevails a plenty.

Rickets appears in breast-fed babies as well as the bottle-fed variety, but in a lesser degree. Negro children almost all have rickets and most of them are breast fed. It's a matter of diet deficiency acquired from mothers Teeth and bones begin forming during prenatal life and proper foods eaten by mothers during pregnancy, would help to cut down rickets in children.

Rickets at one time was thought to be geographically determined peculiar to certain climates and races. But the theory was dispelled in the light of investigation which showed the lack of bone development to follow the trend of civilization. While rickets is essentially a disease of infancy and early childhood, "late rickets" develops in exceptional cases. Since the war this has become very common among the children of Central Europe due to post war conditions.

Partial Clover Seed Reports Misleading

That certain out of state seed companies are misrepresenting facts regarding the relative merits of Michigan and imported clover seed by giving only partial statements of the results of Michigan experiment station tests, is brought by Prof J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

"Experiments at the M. A. C." says Proffessor Cox, "show that Michigan grown red clover seed and red clover seed from other northern states, neighboring corn belt states, and Canada is best adapted and most dependable. In comparative tests Italian seed gave very inferior results under Michigan conditions, the first crop being sparse and the second crop a total failure. French seed, while not injured to as great an extent as the Italian, shows considerable winter killing and injury from anthracnose, and a large percentage of the plants died after the first cutting.

"While seed from northern Europe (and in some instances Chile) gave good results, it is nevertheless true that much seed from France and Italy is being shipped to northern European ports. Therefore, as a class, imported is exceedingly unreliable.

"Alsike, of which there is a good supply at relatively cheap prices, alfalfa, and sweet clover, are much better crops to plant than to take a chance with imported seed under present market conditions, if adapted red clover seed cannot be obtained.

"The Crabbs Reynolds Taylor Company, of Crawfordsville Indiana, states in its advertising matter that at Lansing five lots of French seed gave 2 25 tons and four lots of South American seed gave 2.5 tons. If Michigan data is to be used, farmers should also know that Michigan seeds in these tests gave a total yield of 4.53 tons. In other words, the Michigan seed is far superior to the French seed, which suffers from winter killing and gives a poor second crop.

Darling Fertilizers are Better—

BECAUSE Darling's Fertilizers supply sufficient, quickly available ammoniates, for early plant growth while the bulk of the ammonia is supplied gradually throughout the growing season—this insures continuous and maximum plant development.

BECAUSE they produce Acid Phosphate lower in free Sulphuric Acid, containing less moisture and in better mechanical condition, manufactured by a special process.

BECAUSE they have the only plant in the Middle West using this special process.

BECAUSE for over eight years they have been experimenting with different kinds of Fertilizers on various crops. From these actual field tests they have developed the ideal Fertilizer to meet your special needs. That their efforts have been successful is proven by the fact that today a big percentage of the successful farmers use DARLING'S ANIMAL BASE FERTILIZER. Every Darling Brand has been perfected to meet climatic and soil conditions.

Pigeons in the Desert

An interesting application of carrier pigeons to useful peace-time work is soon to be tried by the national park service in the opening up of the large region east of the Grand Canyon National park. New roads have been opened through this section, uninhabited except for wandering bands of Navajo Indians. Touring cars will take passengers across the desert to points of interest. To guard against delays from breakdowns, and to keep park headquarters informed of them, carrier pigeons will be carried in these cars and released in case of difficulty. This service may be increased to include private messages from passengers.

> SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin.

This letter went to the heart of the young man. She had deftly set before him the gross unfairness of delay. He felt it. Ever since the parting he had been eager to go, but his father was not a rich man and the family was large. His own salary had been little more than was needed for clothing and books. That autumn it had been doubled and the editor had assured him that higher pay would be forthcoming. He hesitated to tell the girl how little he earned and how small, when measured in money, his progress had seemed to be. He was in despair when his friend Solomon Binkus arrived from Virginia. For two years the latter had been looking after the interests of Major Washington out in the Ohio river country. They dined together that evening at the Crooked Billet and Solomon told him of his adventures in the West and frontier stories of the notorious one-legged robber, Micah Harpe, and his den on the shore of the Ohio and of the cunning of the outlaw in evading capture.

Solomon read the girl's letter and said:

"If I was you I'd swim the big pond if nec'sary. This 'ere is a real simon pure, four-masted womern an' she wants you fer captain. As the feller said when he seen a black fox, 'Come on, boys, it's time fer to wear out yer boots.'"

"I'm tied to my job."

"Then break yer halter," said Solomon.

"I haven't money enough to get married and keep a wife."

"What an ignorant cuss you be!" Solomon exclaimed. "You don't 'pear to know when ye're well off."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that ye're wuth at least a thousan' pounds cash money."

"I would not ask my father for help and I have only forty pounds in the bank," Jack answered.

Solomon took out his wallet and removed from it a worn and soiled piece of paper and studied the memoranda it contained. Then he did some ciphering with a piece of lead. In a moment he said:

"You have got a thousan' an' fifteen pounds an' six shillin' fer to do with as ye please an' no questions asked—nary one."

"You mean you've got it."

"Which means that Jack Irons owns it hide, horns an' taller."

Tears came to the boy's eyes. He looked down for a moment without speaking. "Thank you, Solomon," he said presently. "I can't use your money. It wouldn't be right."

Solomon shut one eye an' squinted with the other as if he were taking aim along the top of a gun barrel. Then he shook his head and drawled:

"Cat's blood an' gunpowder! That 'ere slaps me in the face an' kicks me on the shin," Solomon answered. "I've walked an' paddled eighty mile in a day an' been stabbed an' shot at an' had to run fer my life, which it ain't no fun—you hear to me. Who do ye s'pose I done it fer but you an' my kentry? There ain't nobody o' my name an' blood on this side o' the ocean—not nobody at all. An' if I kin't work fer you, Jack, I'd just erbout as soon quit. This 'ere money ain't no good to me 'cept fer body cover an' powder an' balls. I'd as leave drop it in the river. It bothers me. I don't need it. When I git hum I go an' hide it in the bush somewhars—jest to git it out o' my way. I been thinkin' all up the road from Virginny o' this 'ere gol demnable money an' what I were a-goin' to do with it an' what it could do to me. An', sez I, I'm ergoin' to ask Jack to take it an' use it fer a wall 'twixt him an' trouble, an' the idee hurried me erlong—honest! Kind o' made me happy. Course, if I had a wife an' childern, 'twould be different, but I ain't got no one. An' now ye tell me ye don't want it, which it makes me feel lonesomer 'n a tarred Tory an' kind o' sorrowful—ayes, sir, it does."

Solomon's voice sank to a whisper.

"Forgive me," said Jack. "I didn't know you felt that way. But I'm glad you do. I'll take it on the understanding that as long as I live what I have shall also be yours."

"I've two hundred poun' an' six shillin' in my pocket an' a lot more hid in the bush. It's all yourn to the last round penny. I reckon it'll purty nigh bridge the slough. I want ye to be married respectable like a gentleman—slick duds, plenty o' cakes an' pies an' no slightin' the minister er the rum bar'l.

"Major Washington give me a letter to take to Ben Franklin on t'other side o' the ocean. Ye see ev'ry letter that's sent ercrost is opened an' read afore it gits to him essen it's guarded keerful. This 'ere one, I guess, has suthin' powerful secret in it. He pays all the bills. So I'll be goin' erlong with ye on the nex' ship an' when we git thar I want to shake hands with the gal and tell her how to make ye behave."

That evening Jack went to the manager of the Gazette and asked for a six months' leave of absence.

CHAPTER IV

The Crossing.

There were curious events in the voyage of Jack and Solomon. They sailed on or about the eleventh of October, 1773. Their ship was the Snow which had arrived the week before with some fifty Irish servants, indentured for their passage. The food was of poor quality, the cooking a tax upon jaw, palate and digestion, the service unclean. When good weather came, by and by, and those who had not tasted food for days began to feel the pangs of hunger the ship was filled with a most passionate lot of pilgrims. It was then that Solomon presented the petition of the passengers to the captain.

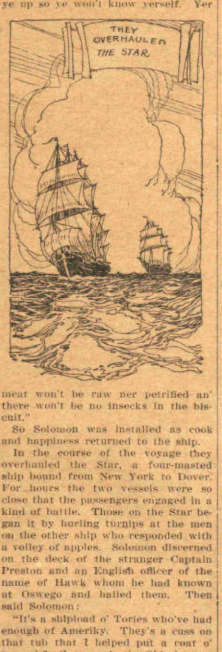
"So'm I," said the captain. "This 'ere man had a good recommend an' said he could cook perfect."

"A man like that kin cook the passengers with their own heat," said Solomon. "I feel like my belly was full o' rocks. If you'll let me into the galley, I'll right ye up an' shift the way o' the wind an' the course o' the ship. I'll swing the bow toward heaven 'stead o' hell an' keep her p'inted straight an' it won't cost ye a penny. They's too much swearin' on this 'ere ship. Can't nobody be a Christian with his guts a-b'ilin'. His tongue'll break loose an' make his soul look like a waggin with a smashed wheel an' a bu'sted ex. A cook could do more good here than a minister."

"Can you cook?"

"You try me an' I'll agree to happy ye up so ye won't know yerself. Yer meat won't be raw ner petrified an' there won't be no insecks in the biscuit."



So Solomon was installed as cook and happiness returned to the ship.

In the course of the voyage they overhauled the Star, a four-masted ship bound from New York to Dover. For hours the two vessels were so close that the passengers engaged in a kind of battle. Those on the Star began it by hurling turnips at the men on the other ship who responded with a volley of apples. Solomon discerned on the deck of the stranger Captain Preston and an English officer of the name of Hawk whom he had known at Oswego and hailed them. Then said Solomon:

"It's a shipload o' Tories who've had enough of Ameriky. They's a cuss on that tub that I helped put a coat o' tar an' feathers on in the Ohio kentry. He's the one with the black pipe in his mouth. I don't know his name but they use to call him Slops—the dirtiest, low-downdest, d—n Tory traitor that ever lived. Helped the Injuns out thar in the West. See that 'ere black pipe? Allus carries it in his mouth 'cept when he's eatin'. I guess he goes to sleep with it. It's one o' the features o' his face. We tarred him plenty now you hear to me."

That evening a boat was lowered and the captain of the Snow crossed a hundred yards of quiet sea to dine with the captain of the Star in the cabin of the latter. Next day a stiff wind came out of the west.

Because he had to take off his coat while he was working in the galley, Solomon gave the precious letter into Jack's keeping.

About noon on the twenty-ninth of November they made Dover and anchored in the Downs. Deal was about three miles away and its boats came off for them. They made a circuit and sailed close in shore. Each boat that went for passengers had its own landing. Its men threw a rope across the breakers. This was quickly put on a windlass. With the rope winding on its windlass the boat was slowly hauled through the surge, its occupants being drenched and sprinkled with salt water. They made their way to the inn of the Three Kings where two men stood watching as they approached. One of them Jack recognized as the man Slops with the black pipe in his mouth.

"That's him," said the man with the black pipe, pointing at Solomon, whereupon the latter was promptly arrested.

"What have I done?" he asked.

"You'll learn directly at 'eadquarters," said the officer.

Solomon shook hands with Jack and said: "I'm glad I met ye," and turned and walked away with the two men.

Jack was tempted to follow them, but feeling a hidden purpose in Solomon's conduct went into the inn.

So the friends parted, Jack being puzzled and distressed by the swift change in the color of their affairs. The letter to Doctor Franklin was in his pocket—a lucky circumstance. He decided to go to London and deliver the letter and seek advice regarding the relief of Solomon. At the desk in the lobby of the Three Kings he learned that he must take the post chaise for Canterbury, which would not be leaving until 6 p. m. This gave him time to take counsel in behalf of his friend. Turning toward the door, he met Captain Preston, who greeted him with great warmth and wished to know where was Major Binkus.

"I expected it," said Preston. "So I have waited here for your ship. It's that mongrel chap on the Star who got a tarring from Binkus and his friends. He saw Binkus on your deck, as I did, and proclaimed his purpose. So I am here to do what I can to help you. I cannot forget that you two men saved my life. Are there any papers on his person which are likely to make him trouble?"

"No," said Jack, thinking of the letter lying safely in his own pocket.

"That's the important thing," Preston resumed. "Binkus is a famous scout who is known to be anti-British. Such a man coming here is supposed to be carrying papers. Between ourselves, they would arrest him on any pretext. You leave this matter in my hands. If he had no papers he'll be coming on in a day or two."

"I'd like to go with you to find him," said Jack.

"Better not," Preston answered with a smile.

"Why?"

"Because I suspect you have the papers. They'll get you, too, if they learn you are his friend. Keep away from him. Sit quietly here in the inn until the post chaise starts for Canterbury. Don't let anyone pick a quarrel with you, and remember this is all a sacred confidence between friends."

"I thank you and my heart is in every word," said Jack as he pressed the hand of the captain. "After all, friendship is a thing above politics—even the politics of these bitter days."

He sat down with a sense of relief and spent the rest of the afternoon reading the London papers, although he longed to go and look at the fortress of Deal Castle. He had tea at five and set out on the mail carriage, with his box and bag, an hour later. The road was rough and muddy, with deep holes in it. At one point the chaise rattled and bumped over a plowed field. Before dark he saw a man hanging in a gibbet by the roadside. At ten o'clock they passed the huge gate of Canterbury and drew up at an inn called the King's Head. The landlady and two waiters attended for orders. He had some supper and went to bed. Awakened at 5 a. m. by the sound of a bugle, he arose and dressed hurriedly and found the post chaise waiting. They went on the King's road from Canterbury and a mile out they came to a big, white gate in the dim light of the early morning.

A young man clapped his mouth to the window and shouted:

"Sixpence, yer honor."

It was a real turnpike and Jack stuck his head out of the window for a look at it. They stopped for breakfast at an inn far down the pike and went on through Sittingbourn, Faversham, Rochester and the lovely valley of the River Medway, of which Jack had read.

At every stop it amused him to hear the words "chaise an' pair," flying from host to waiter and waiter to hostler and back in the wink of an eye.

Jack spent the night at the Rose in Dartford and went on next morning over Gadshill and Shootershill and Blackheath. Then the Thames and Greenwich and Deptford, from which he could see the crowds and domes and towers of the big city. A little past two o'clock he rode over London bridge and was set down at the Spread Eagle, where he paid a shilling a mile for his passage and ate his dinner.

Such, in those days, was the crossing and the trip up to London, as Jack describes it in his letters.

> "She is a lovely girl, Jack. I congratulate you."

FISHERMEN SEE GOLDEN CROSS OUTLINED IN SKY

Hall Caine, in "The Master of Man," the scenes of which are literally the Isle of Man, a British island in the Irish sea, says that the herring shoal, which in the early summer comes down from Norway to the western coast of Man, drifts eastward as the year advances, on its way back to the frozen seas.

The fishermen, going south to their fishing ground in the evening of the day, go down on their knees on the decks of their boats to pray to St. Marguerite and St. Patrick to send them safely home in the morning with a full cargo. The fishermen claim that when they rise from their knees, after their rough hands have been held close to their eyes, and look back at the castle as they sail past Castleton they sometimes see a golden cross plainly outlined in the sky above it. Perhaps it is only a Manx superstition, but it seems, it is said, to bring a certain inspiration to their simple hearts for all that.

Cautious

George had taken his country cousin Jim to look over the airdrome. When he had seen all there was to see, George said to his companion:

"Now we'll go for a joy ride in one of the machines."

"I may be old-fashioned, but I don't care very much for going on a trip in one of these new-fangled things," replied Jim.

"Oh, don't be a fool!" laughed the other. "Why, you may live to see airplanes running like omnibus services!"

"Yes, I may, if I keep out of them," was the cautious reply.

Franklin's Thrift

We hear a great deal of Benjamin Franklin as the great exponent of thrift. Historians, recall, however, that the great scientist-statesman was not always thrifty enough. In his refusal to patent his famous stove, he was wasteful of his own and the public's profit. He wished his ideas to be given free to the world, and so did not protect his invention; an Englishman made some changes for the worse in the Franklin fireplace, secured a patent on it and reaped a fortune from the sales.

Experience as Nurse Causes Mrs. Fleming to Endorse Tanlac

Practical Nurse for 16 Years Tells of Recovery Thanks to Tanlac — Recommends It to Patients.

"I would never have believed any medicine on earth could help me like Tanlac did," is the precise statement of Mrs. Celia Fleming, 1915 Addison St., Berkeley, Calif., a practical nurse of sixteen years' experience.

"In 1904 a serious operation weakened my system so I never saw a real well day until I took Tanlac three years ago. I never seemed to be hungry, my stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a thing I ate, and I lost weight till I was almost a shadow. I was very anemic, and shattered nerves and sleepless nights contributed even more to my already miserable state.

"Tanlac built up my appetite and digestion wonderfully, and every single ailment went away. Then, with returning strength came a 32-pound increase in weight, and from that day three years ago my health has been splendid. I recommend Tanlac to many of my patients, for it is indeed a remarkable medicine."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 40 million bottles sold. Accept no substitutes.

Fish Hear Dinner Whistle

Additional evidence that fish are able to hear has been produced by a German scientist. He fed blind fish to a musical accompaniment. After the sixth day of this treatment, the fish always came up to the surface when the whistle blew. Once learned, the trick was never forgotten, the fish always appearing on time during the 30 days of the test. Another fish, evidently not quite so bright, took 25 days to learn, but never failed afterwards.

Good Looks Throughout Life If You Keep Clean Internally

Cleanliness Demands More Than Bathing

"Regular as Clockwork"
Nujol

Health and good looks

—the reward of internal cleanliness

HEALTH and good looks go hand in hand. If you do not keep clean internally, your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks, and insomnia—each of which saps your health and vitality. Soon much more serious conditions follow.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation.

Physicians Favor Lubrication

The lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

TWINS TO HEALTH

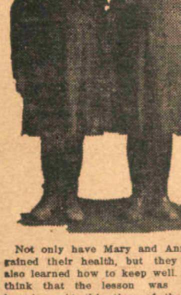
MARY AND ANNA GAIN 14 AND 16 POUNDS IN FOUR MONTHS

PREVENTORIUM AIDS CHILDREN

Christmas Seal Money Is Sole Support of the Educational Campaign Against Tuberculosis.

When Mary and Anna first went to Sunnybanks Preventorium, Grand Rapids, the little twins were frail, listless children badly undernourished and in imminent danger of contracting tuberculosis. After a stay of four months at the preventorium Mary showed a gain in weight of 14 pounds and Anna tipped the scales 16 pounds heavier than she did on entering the institution. Both girls are now bright eyed, rosy cheeked little children with health and happiness showing in every look and action.

Merry Christmas



Not only have Mary and Anna regained their health, but they have also learned how to keep well. They think that the lesson was worth learning. At this time of the year Christmas seals are sold all over the country in order that more people may be benefited as Mary and Anna were. Every seal bought helps to finance the educational program that has already caused preventoria and sanatoria to be erected for the care of Michigan's tuberculous ill. Tuberculosis killed 2,654 Michigan people in 1922.

BANKER-FARMER MEETING NOTES

A conference of bankers and farmers of the Fifth Federal Reserve District held recently at Raleigh, North Carolina, under the auspices of the American Bankers Association Agricultural Commission, adopted the following principles:

"In order to encourage and promote a safe, sane and constructive system of farm practices, the Banker and Farmer Conference of the Fifth Federal Reserve District would make the following recommendations with reference to the activities of farmers and bankers on which to concentrate efforts during the coming year:

"1. Encouragement of loans by bankers to bright and deserving young men and young women who wish to go to college to study agriculture and home economics.

"2. Promote in a rational and conservative way the economic increase in the productiveness of the soils of the district so that a larger unit of crop production may be secured. Small unit yields of necessity are expensive while moderate to large yields of crops are generally the cheapest. Larger yields per acre coupled with a reduction in the acreage, when advisable, should and usually will be more profitable and when handled properly will not lead to an over-production.

"3. Encouragement of a proper system of diversified farming in which farmers will grow as far as practical all the food and feed crops necessary for feeding the family and livestock of the farm, and to keep on the farms the requisite kinds and amounts of livestock best to meet the economic needs of farming.

"4. To formulate and put in motion definite plans for carrying out this program, it is urged that the Agricultural College of the District put a county agent in every county and that a banker-farmer conference be called to meet early in the fall at the agricultural college of each State."

NATION'S SAVINGS PLANT TRIPLED

Savings banks and banks having distinct savings departments, not counting branches, have grown in numbers in the United States from 5 376 in 1912 to 16,709 in 1922 or an increase of about 210 per cent in ten years, says the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers Association. Savings deposits, it is pointed out, now comprise about one half of all bank deposits of every description.

A Record For Growth

When the first gas street lamp was lighted at Wall street and Broadway. New York City, the crowd that gathered to witness the ceremony kept at a respectable distance because of the fancied danger of an explosion. The first gas container of this old New York company had a capacity of 18.000 feet of gas. Now the same company has gas holders having a capacity of 15,000,000 cubic feet of gas each In those early days the price of gas was $10 a thousand cubic feet. Last year there were made and sold in the United States nearly 400 billion feet of manufactured gas.

Would Mean Southern Development

That the South. particularly the people of the small towns and rural communities in northern and eastern Mississippi, will benefit greatly and industry will receive anew impetus if the offer for the Muscle Shoals is accepted, is generally predicted. A far-reaching transmission system with light and power available at reasonable cost will be the inevitable result as well as the manufacture of fertilizer.

In the manufacture of fertilizer these companies have agreed to use the new method for bringing about the union of oxygen and hydrogen, claimed by scientists to be the greatest chemical achievement of the century.

Michigan Happenings

Bitten by a dog, Peter Webb, 56, of Detroit, died of hydrophobia. According to Health Commissioner Henry F. Vaughan, the case is the second to be reported this year. The other victim also died. Another warning issued by the health department against mad dogs in Detroit. Since Jan. 1, the department has examined 47 dogs suffering from rabies. In a similar period in 1923 rabies was discovered in four dogs and in 1922, in seven. The Pasteur treatment, administered by the health department, is an absolute preventative of rabies in human beings if resorted to soon after infection.

Eight bus lines, operating out of Detroit, are cited before the public utilities commission in orders issued to show cause why they should not be forced to quit operations. They will have to answer charges of excessive bus speed. The commission recently checked up on the lines. In some cases it was reported the buses traveled 45 miles an hour. Thirty miles is the limit placed on buses by the commission. Also it was found some drivers have driven 16 hours a day. The commission's rules is 10 hours as the maximum. The evidence was secured by state police.

Ten thousand dollars in war risk insurance and a Distinguished Service Cross await the heirs of Edward G. Mason, born in Detroit Dec. 16, 1899, and killed in action in France, Nov. 10, 1918, according to word received by Theodore W. Kolbe, department adjutant of the American Legion. Mason's heirs have been sought by the United States Veteran's Bureau and the adjutant-general's office for five years without success.

Judge Alfred Murphy has refused the Detroit United railways a new trial in the case of John Nagl, a war veteran, who was awarded $30,000 damages a few weeks ago by a jury. The railroad company contended the amount was excessive and that Nagl's injuries were due to his own negligence. The veteran was struck by a street car. His left leg was crushed, both arms broken and his back injured.

Frank E. Mills, 54, of Mancelona, former convict, who has not been heard of for several years, can obtain $25,000 by reporting to Ralph E. Hughes, of Harrison, state inheritance tax examiner. Hughes has communicated with the clerk of every county in the state in his search for Mills and is now starting a nation wide hunt for him.

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly." — Mrs. I. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

It Was There

He had gone into the manager's office to inquire if he could have the Saturday morning off for the purpose of digging up his garden.

"But, my good man," said the manager, "Jones told me a day or so ago that you hadn't a garden."

"Well, some one must have taken it off the window sill, then," came the reply.

CHEAPEST FEEDS TO PRODUCE MOST EGGS

When the farmer's wife wants to make a good showing on eggs, she at once wants a good variety of feeds from which she can prepare the dry mash and scratch feeds for the flock. Sometimes there are feeds in our rations that cannot be included because of expense in some parts of the state, or availability in others. The cheapest ration which will produce the most eggs is our aim, rather than the best ration regardless of price. Here are some suggestions by L. E. Card, University of Illinois:

"For example, wheat mixed feed or ground whole wheat may replace bran and middlings in the mash if local prices for these latter are too high. Standard middlings will occasionally be cheaper than the combination of bran and flour middlings and may be substituted for these. Hominy feed may replace corn meal.

"Tankage or crackling meal may replace meat scrap if the latter is too costly. However, meat scrap is much more readily eaten and it is therefore usually unwise to replace it with tankage unless there is a considerable difference in price. A difference of ten dollars a ton between meat scrap and tankage means a difference of only one to two cents a day in the cost of feeding a flock of one hundred hens. One extra egg daily will pay for this small difference.

"Any change in the ration should be made gradually rather than abruptly for the reason that marked changes suddenly made are almost certain to cause a drop in egg production and may cause the birds to molt."

Mature Turkey Gobbler for Breeding Purposes

The mature turkey gobbler, or tom as he is more rightly called, often attains a weight of from thirty-five to forty-five pounds when two years old or over, says a writer in the Successful Farming. He is fat, clumsy and awkward and not as active as a cockerel or a yearling.

Under no condition should a tom of the weights given above be used on females weighing less than twenty-five pounds and even then the spurs should always be clipped off and the sharp ends of the toenails removed with a file. If this is not done, he is likely to tear the skin over the backs of the hens in such manner as to cause death. This is especially true if the hen is very fat. Some breeders protect the hens when using a heavy tom by placing a cloth over the back during the breeding season.

Well-developed cockerels and yearling toms are usually very satisfactory for breeding purposes. With most varieties of turkeys one tom to twelve or fifteen females is quite enough for safety in breeding. In flocks where two or more toms must be kept, it is advisable to allow only one tom with the flock at a time, due to the fact that they will often fight and injure one another badly enough to interfere with their breeding ability.

Rearing of Chickens Is Most Difficult Problem

Unfortunately many people seem to think that when the chicks are hatched in an incubator the worst of the work is over. Such, however, is not the case. With a first-class incubator, good hatches are comparatively easy and sure, but rearing the chicks is a more difficult matter.

Besides proper feeding and care, the right kind of brooding is necessary. That means that plenty of warmth, plenty of circulation of pure air so that foul air does not collect under the hover and poison the chicks, is absolutely necessary. To bring off a nice lot of chicks and then try to brood them "by hand" in a makeshift brooder is to invite trouble and loss.

A good brooder will last a good many years and therefore is not expensive, even if the purchase price does seem a little high.

Poultry Hints

Good hens are scratching out a good living for many poultry raisers. Why not for you?

* * *

Never frighten the turkeys. If you have occasion to drive them, do it slowly so as not to scare them.

* * *

Poultry raisers must learn that the best hen medicine is sanitation and must give big doses of it regularly.

* * *

Sour and moldy food should never be fed to poultry. The health of the fowls is worth more than the saving on the cost of the feed.

* * *

There ought to be more geese. We find them the most economical poultry to keep and fine eating.

* * *

Chaff and straw and hay should be used liberally on the poultry house floor. They suggest leaves and seeds to the hens and are valuable in promoting exercise.

* * *

Any unhealthy looking fowl should be removed from the rest of the flock and the trouble and a remedy sought. Sick birds should never be kept with the healthy ones.

* * *

It never pays to crowd, especially on the roosts. A little unoccupied space is better than to have the perches so crowded that the fowls have to try to sleep on top of one another.

* * *

The fowls should be kept in good healthy condition at all times. A dose of epsom salts, one pound to 100 birds is a good conditioner. Permangnate of potash added to the drinking water is also good to prevent colds and roup.

Coast Guard Measures Amount of Salt in Sea

When the United States Coast guard cutters are on ice patrol duty they take periodic measurements of the saltiness of the sea water to determine the shifts of the sea currents and the approach of icebergs. The saltier the water, the more readily it will conduct electricity. The water near a melting iceberg or floe is always less salty than that farther away, for the ice is fresh and as it melts, dilutes the salt water surrounding it.

A new device has recently been developed by the bureau of standards whereby the electrical conductivity of water is measured and indicated in terms of saltiness. This new application of electricity to the safety of those at sea is expected to be of great value in giving definite warnings of the proximity of icebergs and averting accidents like that which caused the loss of the Titanic.

Trichinosis, a painful and often fatal disease, is caused by a small parasite that is sometimes present in pork. The trichina parasite is so small that it can only be seen with a microscope, and hogs harboring it show no symptoms nor does the diseased pork appear different from pork not diseased. All pork should be thoroughly cooked before eating, as that is the only sure way of ridding the meat of the disease.

"These are for the lovesick," suggested the salesman gently.

Playing Your Part in Your Community

What will your community be ten, fifteen or twenty years from now? Will it be more prosperous, more beautiful—a more desirable place to live and work in than today?

It will, if you play your part.

Look around you. Somewhere you have seen the magic of concrete roads—the tonic effect of concrete streets. Have seen business improved through buildings made firesafe, sanitary and permanent with concrete. Have seen the greater sense of security and pride that comes from concrete schools, churches, theaters and homes.

If you are boosting for similar advantages in your own community—your home town—you are truly playing your part.

Portland Cement Association service helps anyone to play his part well.

It is a free service for the owner, the builder, the architect, the contractor, the engineer — for everyone interested in getting the greatest value from concrete construction.

The cement industry has made this service possible through the Portland Cement Association. It is a service, offered without any obligation.

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital

Investigations continue apace The fact is that these inquiries are Washington's chief news and diversion just now—with no end in sight. It has become fashionable for ladies of the "official sets" to form "box parties" to attend the hearings.

Montana has the distinction of furnishing both of the Senate's most relentless investigators: Thomas J. Walsh and Burton K. Wheeler. Wheeler is not such an experienced hand as Walsh, but he is the main cog in the machine that is tearing into the Department of Justice and Attorney General Daugherty; and the other day when he had a cold in the head all his fellow probers got cold feet, at least, they did not go far with the investigation until he was back on the job again to take charge.

Sight-Seeing busses have added to their itinerary the "little green house on K street" where so many secret conferences took place in the early days of the Harding Administration between Daugherty, Jesse Smith and other officials and hangers-on. The house is of green stone and there's few like it in the capital, where red brick is the favorite building material. It stands three doors from the home of Mrs. George Dewey, widow of the Admiral. The green house was the meeting place of the "Columbus crowd" when they moved into the capital in the Spring of 1921. Here it was that Howard Manninton, friend of Harding and Daugherty, had his headquarters and dealt in liquor permits and transacted other legal business with those on the inside.

The first week in June has been set as the time for winding up the affiairs of the 68th. Congress. At the earnest behest of the President, Administration leaders in both houses are working toward that end. They want to have everything cleaned up before the national political conventions get under way. For the House it will be easy, but the Senate is a hopeless jam, having turned most of its attention thus far to investigating instead of legislating.

William Jennings Bryan's bombardment of Oscar Underwood leads many observers here to the conclusion that the Alabama Senator is the strongest candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. When McAdoo looked like the best bet, Bryan trained his guns on him, but as soon as McAdoo's name was brought into the oil scandal, Byran decided the former Secretary of the Treasury was done for, and started after Underwood. Bryan doesn't want anyone to go into the national convention with the nomination sewed up. He is not an out-and-out candidate himself, but admits that he is in a "receptive mood."

Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals received quick and easy approval in the house, but delays are cropping up in the Senate. Southern Senators are demanding that the legislation be brought out on the floor and given a chance to pass, but powerful interests are exerting every influence to defeat the Ford bill. Then, too, Senators like Norris of Nebraska believe that the Alabama nitrate and power plants should never pass out of the hands of the Government and they want to organize a great federal corporation to operate the project in peace time and to have it ready for war emergencies.

White House officials plan to put a ban on persons who use the President for publicity purposes. Mr. Coolidge has been embarrassed a number of times by callers whose only purpose in calling upon him was to make capital of the fact that they had been received by the President of the United States. All Presidents have had the same problem to contend with. It is a problem that would not arise in any other country. but in the United States where the Chief Executive maintains a close contact with his fellow citizens, making it difficult to draw the line to determine who shall be barred from the White House and what conditions.

Jim Davis, the Secretary of Labor is the first Cabinet officer to take the stump in Coolidge's pre-convention campaign. He is speaking in South Dakota, where the Johnson and LaFollette influence is strong. Davis, by the way, is about the only member of the Cabinet who has not been touched by some sort of scandal.

Michigan Eggs Win New Jersey Honors

Michigan eggs, entered in a national egg show held under the direction of the New Jersey Agricultural College late in March, won high honors, proving the state's "Hen fruit" is surpassed by none.

Four entries were made in the contest from the eggs being produced in the Michigan Laying Contest, conducted at the Michigan Agricultural College, and three of the four won places. The entries, which were made in the experiment station class, included two Brown and two White entries.

First place in the White class, with a score of 98.5 out of a possible 100, and the silver cup for best dozen, came back to Michigan. Second and third places in the brown egg class, from among a large field of entries, were won by the two local entries in this division.

A hundred pens, most of which are entered by Michigan breeders, are competing at M. A. C. now in the second yearly egg production contest. While the primary aim of this test is quantity production, it is interesting to know that the state eggs can also more than hold their own in quality.

Potato Growers Lose Million On Quality

It is estimated that Michigan potato growers lose more than a million dollars annually by placing on the market potatoes of poor quality, according to H. C. Moore, potato specialist with the Michigan Agricultural College extension division.

"The market demands high quality stock", says Moore, "and our producers must grow the kind the market wants. Profitable potato production depends upon securing high yields of good quality stock. More better potatoes to the acre, should be the goal aimed at by the producer."

Nine fundamental points in improving the market quality of the state potato crop are given by Moore: 1. Plant potatoes on an alfalfa or clover sod. 2. Apply stable manure and complete fertilizer. 3. Fit the seed bed early to conserve moisture. 4. Plant late varieties earlier so they will mature before frost. 5. Plant the hills closer together. 6. Plant certified seed. 7. Give careful cultivation. 8. Spray with arsenicals and bordeaux mixture. 9. Aim to secure a uniform and uninterrupted development during the whole season.

Run Short Of Cow Testers Once More

There is once more a shortage of cow testers to carry on official testing work in Michigan's eighty active Cow Testing Associations, according to word given out this week by the diary department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Herdsman and farm boys with good dairy experience and further training in feeds and feeding can find good openings in this service and are asked to communicate with the dairy department, M. A. C., East Lansing, Mich.

Rapid increase in the number of associations in the state has brought about the shortage of trained workers, it is said.

Survivor Of Sad Catastrophe Again In Michigan

Not many of our younger set of folks will remember that sad day August 1, 1876 when a small crude steamer on Baw Beese Lake loaded to the gunwales with happy care free pleasure seekers sank with all on board and eight of the unfortunates perished in the waters of the lake. A party of fourteen young folks from Coldwater were having a picnic and had been warned not to load the make-shift boat too heavily. They carelessly crowded to one side of the craft and capsized it. It was soon reported at Hillsdale that all had been drowned and the stores all shut up at once, but later this report was found to be considerably exaggerated. The Hillsdale Daily says that Mrs. Ella Hoban of New York City was passing through the city Saturday on her way to Coldwater and requested the conductor to tell her when Baw Beese Lake was passed which he did. Thus the story came out that Mrs. Hoban is one of the survivors of the disaster. Taken all together a large number of people have met death in this beautiful little lake since the early days but it is a far too suitable site for a pleasure resort to be left in idleness the year round as is now the case. The city of Hillsdale if it were wise would have taken part of the money which has been used for other projects that turned bogus in years past, and put it into Baw Beese park where they should had all kinds of pavillions and amusements and there is no reason in the world why Baw Beese could not be made to yield a splendid dividend to the city. The location is far more ideal than Vandercook or Clark Lake being adjacent to the main line of the New York Central. We believe the day is coming when a man with the proper amount of brains in his head is going to strike this proposition with a magic wand and it is going to spout forth streams of profit.

Coolidge Is Enlightened on Farm Situation

President Coolidge has recently been let into some of the affairs of the American sarmer in a way that ought to open his eyes to the danger of our rural population going to the doldrums in a hurry from excessive taxing.

T. C. Atkinson, representing the Natioual Grange at Washington reported to President Coolidge a few days ago that if all the farms in the United States were owned by one person he would not derive enough from their operation to pay his taxes. He cited as an evidence of the shrinkage of values on farms of the country that a flock of lambs that he sold to another farmer for $20 per head a year ago had subsequently been sold for $3 per head

Other visitors to Washington within the past two weeks have declared that many farms which three years ago were profitable to their owners are now being sold for taxes. Missouri, Michigan, Nebraska, Minnesota North and South Dakota and Montana were some of fhe states in which this condition is reported.

The farmers are without funds or credit; they can make no repairs or improvements, purchase no new machinery or implements cannot afford to hire labor, have exhausted their resources of all kinds, and are reduced along with their wives and children to wear garments they cast off two or three years ago.

Notwithstanding all their hard work and thrift the farmers are unable to make a living and pay their taxes. Meantime while the prices of products are steadily decreasing, the cost of their needs of every kind is rising.

This kind of talk has been poured into hie ears ever since he has been in public life but is none the less true, and we are afraid the officials of this government, Coolidge included, do not realize the calamity which stares us in the face if the farmers are put out of commission.

Balloon Tires To Help Roads

The balloon tire is as yet too new to tell its own story, but some of the facts urged against it by its opponents do not seem warranted by facts. Misled perhaps by the undoubted fact that the pneumatic tire caused great destruction to the common type of hard road, the water bound macadam, conservatives now state the balloon tire with its greatly increased size of wearing surface, will cause damage to roads other than cement or brick surface.

This is not borne out by facts already recorded of other wide tires. Heavy trucks equipped with double wheels and flat solid tires do no damage to the surface of the highway whether it is oil-treated, tar-impregnated stone. sand, clay. shell, concrete, brick or cement. Road damage done by such vehicles is from blows or pressure and not from surface wear. It is with the modern road almost always the blow which damages the road and not the abrasion. Accordingly the balloon tire should preserve rather than injure roads since its lessened air pressure increases the elasticity of the cushion between the road and its weight.

Most of the claims of course made for balloon tires will be repudiated because when it comes to wear these new tires with their spongy make-up and constant flexing of side-walls are going to be mighty short-lived. They bid fair to make good business for the maker but mighty poor business for the man who buys them in other words they are the millionaire's equippage exlcusively. If a dealer tries to sell you a balloon tire on the same mileage bas is as the old hard tire consign him to the Ananias Club at once. He is spoofing you!

Common sense and the unavoidable laws of nature say nay. We are of the opinion that if a tire were made of sheet-iron it would not stand up under these conditions.

World Court

What we are asked to join is no world court, no court at all. The President says of it in his message:

> "The court is merely a convenient instrument of adjustment to which we would go but to which we could not be brought."

This is the expression of its futility If we could not be brought to it, it is obvious other nations could not be brought before it. No wrong doer can be haled before it. No wrong can be remedied by it. Great nations have refused to submit to its compulsory jurisdiction. If an exploiting nation in Europe seizes the territory of its neighbor, this so-called court could not take cognizance of the act, could not remedy the wrong. Already, we have treaties of arbitration with nearly all of the nations of Europe. The Hague permanent tribunal site for the purpose of determining the controversies thus arising. It functions with a wider jurisdiction today than the misnamed League of Nations Court. It exists under our written contracts and our arbitration treaties Our entry into the League of Nations' court can only be for one reason, that we may ultimately be taken into the League. It is a part of the League, functions by the League, derives its power from the League, its constitution is that of the League. The internationalists who desire to take us into Europe know full well that once we enter the so-called court, we'll be a part of the League, and gradually will be taken into the League. The recent agitation in this country makes this increasingly apparent. I insist that if we are to go into the League of Nations, we go in with the knowledge of our people. I resist this course with all my power, but I resist even more the effort cunningly to foist this course upon our people by subterfuge.

It is nonsense to talk about the aloofness of this country. We are not isolated, and never will be isolated in business, in finance, socially or commercially. We are not isolated from Europe and we have never been There is just one sort of isolation, which has been ours, and which we wish to maintain, and our opponents would destroy. It is isolation from the quarrels, and controversies the selfishness and intrigue, and the wars of Europe. No other isolation has ever been attempted by us. And this kind of isolation should continue, not only for our own security and progress, but for the benefit of all humanity.

EGGS 10 MILLION YEARS OLD FOUND

Nest Made by Dinosaur Discovered in Mongolia by Members of American Expedition.

Pekin.—Dinosaurs, the colossal reptile creatures of a prehistoric era, laid eggs five to six inches long. They had nests like any gentle domestic fowl of today.

The early mammalian beasts of Asia and America were kin and roamed across the two continents on the land bridge that joined them in those remote times.

These are some of the discoveries announced by the third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History on its return here after five months on the Mongolian plains.

Nine Tons of Fossils.

The party was in Peking recently with what its members termed the largest find of the remains of prehistoric animals in the history of paleontology. Nine tons of fossils have been collected and will be shipped to America.

One of the leaders of the expedition, Henry Fairfield Osborn, the paleontologist, said the fossil beds found in Mongolia were the largest known to science. For the first time, he explained, explorers had at their disposal terrestrial deposits of enormous extent, still preserved in their pristine grandeur, thus enabling the reconstruction of much of the life in the middle period of the reptilian age.

The adventurers of science returned with the opinion that they had proved the Mongolian plateau to have been the center of dispersion of the most ancient animals traced.

Eggs 10,000,000 Years Old.

Dr. Osborn and Roy Chapman Andrews, the naturalist, consider a spectacular feature of their discoveries the twenty-five fossilized dinosaur eggs which they found in several nests in sedimentary strata among the skeletons of medium-sized dinosaurs of a species known as protocerators andrewsis. These are the first dinosaur eggs to be revealed to science, according to members of the expedition, who said that hitherto it had not been known that the dinosaur laid eggs. The eggs are elliptical, five to six inches in length, their shells now covered with a buff-colored coating. Their age is estimated at 10,000,000 years.

The explorers brought out seventy-two skulls and twelve complete skeletons of these "terrible lizards," as the two Greek words forming the term dinosaur describe them. The dinosaur nests were situated at longtitude 102 east, latitude 44 north.

The expedition also found numerous remains of mammals, principally of a giant rhinoceros-like beast, which is said to prove kinship among the earliest fauna of Asia and America. The scientists explained that a land bridge joined the continents in those dim yesterdays.

The party traveled in motor cars, but carried the supplies by a caravan of seventy camels.

Former Soldiers Study Everything but Warfare

Sacramento, Cal.—How conditions have changed.

Six years ago hundreds of thousands of men sought to increase their proficiency in the science of warfare. But not so in 1923.

Eight hundred ex-service men began school training this fall, according to E. R. Caughey, educational supervisor of the state veterans' welfare board. Virtually every known trade or profession has its quota of applicants except study in warfare. Not one of the 800 has applied for entrance to a college of military training.

Thirty of the World war veterans who seek educational rehabilitation throughout the state expect to become ministers of the gospel, said Caughey, while 100 will train for dentists, thirty for physicians, 100 for lawyers, fifteen for artists, five for newspapermen and scores for teachers.

Public Lands in Four States Open for "Vets"

Washington. — Approximately 111,100 acres of public lands in the states of California, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah were recently thrown open to ex-service men of the World war, it was announced at the Department of the Interior.

The exact date for filing on the lands will be made public later by the local land officers in the various states in which the tracts are located. The largest allotment of public domain to be opened for homestead entry is in Utah, where 73,000 acres were thrown open.

Boy Coughs Out Twig From Lung.

Wilmington, Del.—A coughing spell saved the life of William Hayden, ten, who for a month had been ill with congestion of the lungs, due to having swallowed a piece of birch twig, which stuck in his left lung. For two weeks his condition has been critical and he has been under care of Dr. Chevalier Jackson of Philadelphia.

Berlin Women Law-Abiding.

Berlin.—Women break the law in Berlin only one-sixth as much as men, according to Berlin police statistics for June, which have just been made public. The total number of arrests was 14,979 and of these only 2,583 were women.

Paying For Roads

That which serves all the people should be paid for by all the people. That which is paid for by all the people should be under the control of all the people.

These are self evident truths. We act by them vhen we build a Panama Canal, set aside and care for an area of naturrl beauty as a public park, give land to a trancontinental railroad, establish and run an Army and a Navy, and conduct a Postal System.

The entire Nation pays to build and maintain a Navy to protect New York and other seacoast cities. The people of a great many States never see a battleship during their entire lives. There is no valid objection to this, because everyone realizes that the capture and ruin of the seacoast cities would affect the whole Nation.

The same principle holds in the construction of a national system of good roads. The whole Nation will benefit vastly from good roads in increased prosperity, better education, and development of natural resources.

The money spent on rivers is all paid by Federal Government from general taxation, yet this traffic is only a small fraction of the traffic along our improved highways, and its benefits are proportionately small.

To the farmer, a hard road means more than any other Federal activity, even to the Postal Service. It is a convenience to get his mail promptly, but a good road makes it possible for him to run his farm or dairy at a much higher rate of production and greater profit, gives him and his family more of the comforts and luxuries of life, helps his children to get a better education, and raises his entire standard of living.

Why contend that roads, a public utility for all people, should be left to different groups of people to develop, when Postal Service, Army Navy, and the projected superpower system are admitted to be national affairs?

An Argument For Church Attendance

Our late Selden B. Ford who was pastor of the North Adams Methodist church last year, has written an article for his town paper, The Maple Rapids "American" which will be read with interest by not only Maple Rapids people but by every church denomination in Michigan. We clipped it from the "American:"

"Why Go to Church?"

And first I answer because of what the church stands for and the work it is doing in the community, and in this connection I want to give the estimate of some of the great statesmen and thinkers:

President Coolidge said: "It would be a great and lasting benefit to the government if weekday religious instructions were faithfully given by all religious bodies."

Warren G. Harding said: "The future of the nation cannot be entrusted to the children of America unless their education includes their spiritual development."

Ralph Waldo Emerson said: "The true test of civilization is not the census, nor the size of its cities, nor the crops, but the kind of men the country turns out."

George Washington said: "We can preserve our liberties only by religious education of the youth."

Theodore Boosevelt said: "Instruction in things moral and spiritual is necessary to the making of the highest type of citizenship

These things being true as everybody knows they are; and as the church is the only organized work of religious education in the community, every man, woman and child is under moral obligation to attend and support the services of the churches in the community.

The church stands for and teaches Integrity, Industry, Faith in God and man, and Christian Brotherhood.

For our personal needs as well as our personal influence every one ought to be in the place of public worship at least once each week. March 30th, has been designated as "Go to church Sunday" for Maple Rapids and vicinity. It will be a splendid encouragement to the pastor and workers to see many new faces at the services on that day.

S. B. Ford."

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

PROHIBITION HAS COME TO STAY

From Address of Warren G. Stone chief of Engineers' Brotherhood

"I am sure the wildest exponents of the theory of personal liberty would not agree that the engineer I represent would have the right to exercise his personal liberty and take two or three drinks before starting from the terminal with the limited.

Every law abiding citizen who loves his country and is interested in its welfare is vitally interested in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. In my opinion the future of the country depends entirely upon the enactment of fair laws and their enforcement. As a matter of fact all laws should be rigidly enforced and should we by chance happen to have a bad law or laws, the thing for everyone to do is to obey such law or laws, and work with all our might through legal channels to have such laws abolished. Civilization and civilized nations can only exist so long as the people of a country obey its laws. If the people of a country are permitted to disregard or dis obey certain laws it is sure to have the effect of bringing all laws into contempt. The utter disregard of the prohibition law in some localities has a very bad effect, for those who openly violate the prohibition law will have no hesitancy in violating or breaking any other law or laws that does not happen to suit them. I believe that if this country takes a rigid stand in the enforcement of the prohibition law, it will have a great influence on all the people of the United States. If the fact is brought home to the American people that it is the intention of our state and national officers to rigidly enforce the prohibition law, I am certain it will create a more respectful attitude toward the general laws of this country.

Our nation will never reach the heights to which it can go until we have rigid law enforcement, and universal obedience to the law. Every law breaker, regardless of his social position, or whether he be rich or poor, should be required to pay the penalty of the law hehas violated, and when every violater is made to pay the judgment or penalty of the broken law, it will not be very long until the American people will have a more wholesome respect for our laws than they have at the present time.

There are some people who are laboring under the delusion that they are going to have the prohibition law modified or abolished. Some one should wake them from their Rip Van Winkle sleep. I wish they could go with me for thirty days as I travel over this hroad land of ours, ond see the homes being erected everywhere note the accounts being opened in the savings banks: see the families all out together in the parks recreation and community centers; see the children taken out of the sweat shops; see them well fed, wearing shoes and warm clothing and in schools; see them in prosperity and sunshine where formerly there was only squalor and misery. All this is the resul of prohibition—why, they had just as well talk about stopping waves from beating on the shore or the sunlight descending from heaven, as to imagine they can stop the onward march of the prohibition movement, We are not going back to the old condition of things, with the misery. want and poverty. Never again! Prohibition has come to stay!"

Consumption is Still Rampant

In Monroe county between the years 1914 and 1924 33 children were carried away by tuberculosis. Those children spent a total of 275,58 years in school and at their death the county lost $12849 without chance of recovery.

Hillsdale county suffered a loss of 28 children over the same period which has cost the county a total of $15,770. Lenawee county between the same years paid out $31,530 for 50 children who died of tuberculosis before their period of production started.

These figures represent actual cash money out of the taxpayers pocket. Monroe county spends $1,984 a year educating children that die of preventable diseases before they reach their 20th birth day. That would maintain a competent county nurse who could prevent most of the casualfies. Hillsdale county is losing $131.40 every month in the year thru these unnecessary deaths

The people of Lenawee county may check off every morning before the children start for school the sum of $17.50 for the education of children who will be permitted to contract and die of tuberculosis before they become citizens. It must be remembered that in most every case, the death rate is preventable. They could be almost entirely eliminated by additional health service both in the schools and in the counties.

The money that these counties are losing yearly would go a long way down the road toward prevention.

Breast-Fed Babies Are Strongest

Four-fifths of the deaths under one year of age occur among artificially fed infants. While it is true says the Michigan Department of Health, that babies reared on artificial foods may remain healthy and grow strong. the percentage of robust bottle-fed babies is much smaller than that of breast-fed babies. Infants fed on breast milk, it is found, are better able to resist disease because breast milk is a natural food which contains elements necessary for growth and nutrition.

In this hurried age the contention is often heard "that there is no time to stop and nurse the child", Yet artificial feeding in most cases only adds to the cares of the already overburdened mother. Bottled milk must be received in good condition before being modified, and must be fresh and clean. For modifying milk, clean utensils, considerable time, and intelligence are required. Breast milk always is ready, is free from germs and dirt, is always sweet, and contains elements that help to protect the baby from communicable diseases.

Ingham Man Learns Seed Corn Lesson

That it pays to dry seed corn, the practice being a real "life saver" in seasons when conditions are adverse, is the conviction of A. G. Wilson, in Ingham County.

Mr. Wilson has had experience both ways on the seed drying proposition during recent months and admits that he has learned his lesson when it comes to handling seed stocks. Recent germination tests conducted by the M. A. C. on his corn have given answer to the question of whether or not it pays to dry.

"Last fall Mr. Wilson carefully stored a considerable quantity of choice Duncan corn which was to be inspected by the Michigan Improvement Association for certification", says H. C. Rather, extension specialist at M. A. C. and secretary of the improvement association. "This seed was dried to about 12 percent moisture and has come through the winter in excellent shape. Upon being inspected, it has been designated as Registered seed, the class recommended by the Crop Improvement Association as being excellent seed for foundation stock.

"Recently, Mr. Wilson selected another quantity of corn from unhusked shocks and the Association inspector took samples of this for moisture, below the season's average for corn not fire dried. It germinated only 28 percent. While the latter class of this farmer's corn is worthless, the first class represents the best seed available in Michigan.

"Because he took precautions to dry part of his corn for himself and the seed market, Mr. Wilson is not confronted with the serious condition of having dependable seed, this spring, a situation which the average farmer is facing".

Darling Fertilizers are Better—

BECAUSE Darling's Fertilizers supply sufficient, quickly available ammoniates, for early plant growth while the bulk of the ammonia is supplied gradually throughout the growing season—this insures continuous and maximum plant development.

BECAUSE they produce Acid Phosphate lower in free Sulphuric Acid, containing less moisture and in better mechanical condition, manufactured by a special process.

BECAUSE they have the only plan. in the Middle West using this special process.

BECAUSE for over eight years they have been experimenting with different kinds of Fertilizers on various crops. From these actual field tests they have developed the ideal Fertilizer to meet your special needs. That their efforts have been successful is proven by the fact that today a big percentage of the successful farmers use DARLING'S ANIMAL BASE FERTILIZER. Every Darling Brand has been perfected to meet climatic and soil conditions.

BECAUSE for over 35 years they have been producing and perfecting Better Fertilizers.

DOCTOR FRANKLIN

SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin. Binkus has received a letter from Washington to be carried across the ocean, and Jack sails with him. Arriving in England, Binkus is arrested, but Jack has the letter and proceeds to London.

CHAPTER V

London and the Philosopher.

The stir and prodigious reach of London had appalled the young man. The thought thrilled him that somewhere in the great crowd, of which he was now a part, were the two human beings he had come so far to see. He put on his best clothes and with the letter which had been carefully treasured—under his pillow at night and pinned to his pocket lining through the day—set out in a cab for the lodgings of Doctor Franklin. Through a maze of streets where people were "thick as the brush in the forests of Tryon county" he proceeded until after a journey of some thirty minutes the cab stopped at the home of the famous American on Bloomsbury square. Doctor Franklin was in and would see him presently, so the liveried servant informed the young man after his card had been taken to the doctor's office. He was shown into a reception room and asked to wait, where others were waiting. An hour passed and the day was growing dusk when all the callers save Jack had been disposed of. Then Franklin entered. Jack remembered the strong, well-knit frame and kindly gray eyes of the philosopher. His thick hair, hanging below his collar, was now white. He was very grand in a suit of black Manchester velvet with white silk stockings and bright silver buckles on his shoes. There was a gentle dignity in his face when he took the boy's hand and said with a smile:

"You are so big, Jack. You have built a six foot two inch man of that small lad I knew in Albany, and well finished, too—great thighs, heavy shoulders, a mustache, a noble brow, and shall I say the eye of Mars? It's a wonder what time and meat and bread and potatoes and air can accomplish. But perhaps industry and good reading have done some work on the job."

Franklin put his hand on the young man's shoulder and said:

"She is a lovely girl, Jack. You have excellent good taste. I congratulate you. Her pulchritude has a background of good character and she is alive with the spirit of the New World. I have given her no chance to forget you if that had been possible. Since I became the agent in England of yourself and sundry American provinces, I have seen her often, but never without longing for the gift of youth. How is my family?"

"They are well. I bring you letters."

"Come up to my office and we'll give an hour to the news."

When they were seated before the grate fire in the large, pleasant room above stairs whose windows looked out upon the square, the young man said:

"First I shall give you, sir, a letter from Major Washington. It was entrusted to a friend of mine who came on the same ship with me. He was arrested at Deal, but, fortunately, the letter was in my pocket."

"Arrested? Why?"

"I think, sir, the charge was that he had helped to tar and feather a British subject."

"Feathers and tar are poor arguments," the Doctor remarked as he broke the seal of the letter.

It was a long letter and Franklin sat for near half an hour thoughtfully reading and rereading it. By and by he folded and put it into his pocket, saying as he did so: "An angry man cannot even trust himself. I sent some letters to America on condition that they should be read by a committee of good men and treated in absolute confidence and returned to me. Certain members of that committee had so much gunpowder in their hearts it took fire and their prudence and my reputation have been seriously damaged, I fear. The contents of those letters are now probably known to you."

"Are they the Hutchinson, Rogers and Oliver letters?"

"The same."

"I think they are known to every one in America that reads. We are indignant that these men born and raised among us should have said that a colony ought not to enjoy all the liberties of a parent state and that we should be subjected to coercive measures. They had expressed no such opinion save in these private letters. It looked like a base effort to curry favor with the English government."

"Yes, they were overworking the curry comb," said Franklin. "I had been protesting against an armed force in Boston. The government declared that our own best people were in favor of it. I, knowing better, denied the statement. To prove their claim, a distinguished baronet put the letters in my hands. He gave me leave to send them to America on condition that they should not be published. Of course, they proved nothing but the treachery of Hutchinson, Rogers and Oliver. Now I seem to be tarred by the same stick."

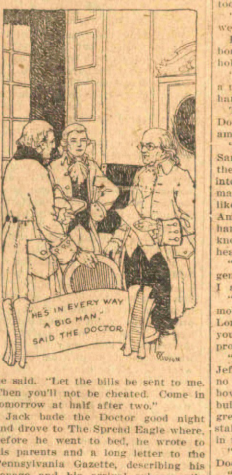
Jack told him of his prospects and especially of the generosity of his friend Solomon Binkus and of the plight the latter was in.

"He must be a remarkable man," said Franklin. "With Preston's help he will be coming on to London in a day or so. If necessary you and I will go down there. We shall not neglect him. Have you any dinner clothes? They will be important to you."

"I thought, sir, that I should best wait until I had arrived here."

"You thought wisely. I shall introduce you to a good cloth mechanic. Go to him at once and get one suit for dinner and perhaps two for the street. It costs money to be a gentleman here. It's a fine art. While you are in London you'll have to get the uniform and fall in line and go through the evolutions or you will be a 'North American savage.' You shall meet the Hares in my house as soon as your clothes are ready. Ask the tailor to hurry up. They must be finished by Wednesday noon. You had better have lodgings near me. I will attend to that for you."

The Doctor sat down and wrote on a number of cards. "These will provide for cloth, linen, leather and hats,"



"HE'S IN EVERY WAY A BIG MAN," SAID THE DOCTOR

he said. "Let the bills be sent to me. Then you'll not be cheated. Come in tomorrow at half after two."

Jack bade the Doctor good night and drove to The Spread Eagle where, before he went to bed, he wrote to his parents and a long letter to the Pennsylvania Gazette, describing his voyage and his arrival subsequently as the facts are here recorded. Next morning he ordered every detail in his "uniforms" for morning and evening wear and returning again to the inn found Solomon waiting in the lobby.

"Here I be," said the scout and trapper.

"What happened to you?"

"S'arched an' shoved me into a dark hole in the wall. Ye know, Jack, with you an' me, it allus 'pears to be workin'."

"What?"

"Good luck. Cur'us thing the papers was on you 'stid of me—ayes, sir, 'twas. Did ye hand 'em over safe?"

"Last night I put 'em in Franklin's hands."

"Hunkidory! I'm ready fer to go hum."

"Doctor Franklin wants to see you," said Jack. "Put on your Sunday clothes an' we'll go over to his house. I think I can lead you there. If we get lost we'll jump into a cab."

When they set out Solomon was dressed in fine shoes and brown wool stockings and drab trousers, a butternut jacket and blue coat, and a big, black three-cornered hat. His slouching gait and large body and weathered face and the variety of colors in his costume began at once to attract the attention of the crowd. A half-drunk harridan surveyed him, from top to toe, and made a profound bow as he passed. A number of small boys scurried along with them, curiously staring into the face of Solomon.

"Ain't this like comin' into a savage tribe that ain't seen no civilized human bein' fer years?"

"Wot is it?" a voice shouted.

Jack stopped a cab and they got into it.

"Show us some of the great buildings and land us in an hour at 10 Bloomsbury square, East," he said.

With a sense of relief they were whisked away in the stream of traffic.

They passed the king's palace and the great town houses of the duke of Bedford and Lord Balcarras, each of which was pointed out by the driver. Suddenly every vehicle near them stopped, while their male occupants sat with bared heads. Jack observed a curious procession on the sidewalk passing between two lines of halted people.

The king—a stout, red-nosed, blue-jowled man, with big, gray, staring eyes—was in a sedan chair surmounted by a crown. He was dressed in light cloth with silver buttons. Queen Charlotte, also in a chair, was dressed in lemon colored silk ornamented with brocaded flowers. The two were smiling and bowing as they passed. In a moment the procession entered a great gate. Then there was a crack of whips and the traffic resumed its hurried pace.

When they had been conducted to the presence of Doctor Franklin he took Solomon's hand and said:

"Mr. Binkus, I am glad to bid you welcome."

He looked down at the sinewy, big-boned, right hand of the scout, still holding it.

"Will you step over to the window a moment and give me a look at your hands?" he asked.

They went to the window and the Doctor put on his spectacles and examined them closely.

"I have never seen such an able Samsonian fist," he went on. "I think the look of those hands would let you into Paradise. What a record of human service is writ upon them! Hands like that have laid the foundations of America. They have been generous hands. They tell me all I need to know of your spirit, your lungs, your heart and your stomach."

"They're purty heavy—that's why I gen'ally carry 'em in my pockets when I ain't busy," said Solomon.

"I saw Sir Jeffrey Amherst this morning and told him you were in London. He is fond of you and paid you many compliments and made me promise to bring you to his home."

"I'd like to smoke a pipe with ol' Jeff," Solomon answered. "They ain't no nonsense 'bout him. I learnt him how to talk Injun an' read rapids an' build a fire with tinder an' elbow grease. He knows me plenty. He staked his life on me a dozen times in the Injun war."

"How is Major Washington?" the Doctor asked.

"Stout as a pot o' ginger," Solomon answered. "I rassled with him one evenin' down in Virginny an' I'll never tackle him ag'in, you hear to me. His right flipper is as big as mine an' when it takes holt ye'd think it were goin' to strip the shuck off yer soul."

"He's in every way a big man," said the Doctor. "On the whole, he's about our biggest man. An officer who came out of the ambuscade at Fort Duquesne with thirty living men out of three companies and four shot holes in his coat must have an engagement with Destiny. Evidently his work was not finished. You have traveled about some. What is the feeling over there toward England?"

"They're like a b'ilin' pot everywhere. England has got to step careful now."

"Tell Sir Jeffrey that, if you see him, just that. Don't mince matters. Jack, I'll send my man with you and Mr. Binkus to show you the new lodgings. We found them this morning."

> "I kissed her lips and she kissed mine, and for a few moments—"

BICYCLES GREAT PERIL TO PEDESTRIANS IN DENMARK

Denmark is a flat country, and therefore an incentive to bicycling. As soon as children are out of swaddling clothes in Denmark they are lashed to the handlebars of their parents' bicycles, or strapped in rumble seats, and taken on long trips. Thus bicycling becomes second nature to the Danes.

Danish cities encourage the use of bicycles by constructing special bicycle paths along the roadside so that the bicyclists may not be annoyed by traffic. This gives the bicyclists a false sense of security, so that the motorist in Copenhagen and other Danish towns is constantly being confronted by a serene bicyclist who sails with blissful recklessness directly into the motor-car's path.

The Danes are confirmed wabblers while bicycling, due to their habit of guiding the bicycles with only one hand, the other being used to lead dogs, hold large bundles, convey open umbrellas, valises or other impedimenta, or to restrain the tendency of skirts to rise to the riders' waists. The inventor who evolves a contrivance for holding down the skirts of lady bicyclists should reap a fortune in Copenhagen alone.

Everybody in Copenhagen rides to work on a bicycle every morning, so that the person who ventures on the streets afoot early in the morning or late in the afternoon is constantly in peril of being knocked down and having his features enmeshed in a sprocket wheel or tangled in a welter of wire spokes.—K. L. Roberts, in Saturday Evening Post.

Now We Know

Uncle Lije Cheek one day was asked whether Sam Black was honest or not.

"Well, if, and, but, though," he answered, "he might be, and then agin he mightn't; but, if he be, he is very highly spoken ag'inst."

Paper Film Invented

A recent British invention, which may completely revolutionize the film industry, enables paper films to be projected on the screen by means of reflection from light placed in front of the reels, not behind them, as at present. These new paper films are said to possess many advantages over the ordinary celluloid kind. They are non-inflammable, they do not crack or tear, and last considerably longer than celluloid. They can also be made very cheaply, and may be sent through the mails in ordinary paper wrappers.

Cautious Porter

The lordling had just arrived at the tiny North Wales railway station, and John Evans Jones, the porter, had dragged from the guard's van a store of luggage, which included several portmanteaux, a camera, fishing tackle and golf clubs and a particularly ferocious bulldog.

"Aw, portah," commanded his lordship, "just put—aw—my portmanteaux, cameraw, etceteraw, on a cab."

John Evans Jones surveyed the bulldog dubiously.

"Yes, sir," he said slowly. "Er—the etceteraw won't bite, will he, sir?"

Babies Come First

Baby must have his sleep, even though the safety of the city be endangered. Evidently so thought the wives of the volunteer firemen of Lorain, O., who have been charged with plugging the electric bells placed in their homes to call the husbands to fires, because the bells disturbed the slumber of the little ones.

Navy Needs 65,000 Men

To keep the American navy up to the 86,000 men authorized under the naval appropriation bill 65,000 men will have to enlist or re-enlist during the coming year.

"Come to Canossa"

Canossa, in the Duchy of Modena, is where in the winter of 1076-7 the kaiser, Henry IV, stood barefooted in the snow for three days, a penitent awaiting the forgiveness of Pope Gregory VII. The expression "come to Canossa" has since been used to denote coming to a place of humiliation—in other words, "eating humble pie."

Homemade Breezes

Ocean breezes, or at least good imitations of them, are said to be obtainable from a household electric vacuum cleaner at about 2 cents an hour. The bag and driving belt of the cleaner are removed and a sponge soaked in salt water is placed in the suction end. The effect of sea breezes is heightened by placing the converted vacuum cleaner in an open window.—Popular Science Monthly.

Our Choice

We like to listen to sprightly talk by people with tongues of sand paper; but for long-time company, we generally choose those with tongues of velvet.

Sorrow is neither sauce nor spice in life.

Had No Weather

The first result of man's study of the weather was apparently to run away from it. Sir Napier Shaw, the English authority on meteorology, points out that the first civilization of which we have much record, that of Egypt, existed where there was really no weather. This civilization may have been the result, he says, of a migration of all the bright individuals or races from other parts of the world, who fled their inclement native climes and settled in Egypt. A similar movement seemed to be in progress at the present day.

Sardinia Becomes Modern

For years and years the native costumes of the people who inhabit Sardinia have been famous for their vivid and harmonious colorings, but so great has been the inroad of modern business and travel the last ten years that these extremely highly-colored clothes are steadily being replaced by modern European clothes of somber hues. Today the modern clothes are noticeable for their great popularity among the natives.

Why March Is Most Dangerous

March is the most dangerous month of the year because the change of season is more than a good many systems can stand. Too often it is true that the sick "last only till spring." But if the system is fortified, if the impurities are driven from the blood, and the nerve tissues fed with wholesome and strength-giving pure food medicine, there is no danger in the change of seasons. Father John's Medicine is invaluable as a tonic in the spring. It strengthens the system and drives out the poisonous waste matter—builds up the body. It is this power that has made it so successful in treating colds and throat troubles. No weakening stimulants, morphine or other dangerous drugs.

Too Liberal

A doctor was pleased with a certain aerated water, and aided its sale by his recommendation. He acted solely in the interest of humanity generally, and expected no return.

To his surprise there came one morning an effusive letter from the company, stating that his recommendations had done them so much good that they "ventured to send him a hundred—"

There the page came to an end.

"This will never do," said the doctor. "It is very kind, but I could not think of accepting anything."

Here he turned the page, and found the sentence run, "of our circulars for distribution."

Largest Telescope

The world's largest telescope is at Mount Wilson, Cal. It is a reflecting telescope, and the mirror measures 100 inches in diameter. The maximum power is 10,000 diameters; that is to say, the moon would appear as if brought within 25 miles of the observer. The lens for this telescope was made at the glassworks at St. Gobain, France.

FOR THE PREVENTION OF SIMPLE GOITER

GOITER is caused by a deficiency of Iodine in the Thyroid Gland. A perfectly healthy Thyroid Gland contains, naturally, between 0.5 and 0.6 per cent of Iodine. When the supply falls below 0.1 per cent, thyroid enlargement begins.

Goiter is very prevalent in Michigan. Examinations of nearly 82,000 school children in four counties proved that 47.2 per cent of the boys and girls were goiterous. Medical authorities have taken steps to stamp out Goiter in this State. They urge the use of Iodine Salt. IT WILL PREVENT SIMPLE GOITER, beyond doubt or question.

We are co-operating in this public health service by offering Mulkey's Iodine Salt at a price within the reach of all. It contains the correct amount of Iodine, as determined by physicians who have made a special study of simple Goiter and its prevention.

Use Mulkey's Iodine Salt every day, just the same as regular Salt—for cooking as well as on the table. The Iodine does not affect the taste or seasoning quality.

If your grocer cannot supply you with Mulkey's Iodine Salt, we will ship you a case of two dozen two-lb. packages by express, charges collect, upon receipt of your order and $3.50.

Write for our pamphlet on Goiter and Iodine.

MULKEY SALT CO.
DETROIT, MICH.

MULKEY'S IODINE SALT

Especially in homes where there are children, Mulkey's Iodine Salt should be used regularly. If the Thyroid Gland is treated in this way until boys and girls reach the age of 16 or 17 years, they are not liable to be afflicted with Goiter later in life.

Rudolph Lindenschmitt who has been very low for some time, passed away Wednesday about noon. On March 20 he was taken to the American Legion Hospital at Battle Creek, hoping that he might recover under skilled care but after a thorough examination it seemed advisable to take him home immediately. He returned March 24th and has since been cared for by a friend, assisted by relatives, but in spite of all he gradually grew worse. He was 26 years of age and the cause of his demise was cancer and tuberculosis, the latter contracted in France. Deep sympathy is expressed for the family.

Constuction of superpower plants and establishment of larger power units by mergers are continuing as marked features of industrial development. Back of all this is widespread demand for electricity on farms. Remarkable progress has been made in many states by private enterprise in extending electrical service to the farmers. California leads the world in number of farmers using electricity and in the low cost of service. Washington is probably second only to California as a geographical section with 28,000 farms electrified. Ontario, Canada larger than any western state, is serving only 13,500 farms under what is called public ownership.

We Are Somewhat Isolated

The condition of our 7¾ miles of road east of North Adams this spring does not indicate that the grade of gravel which was O. K. d by the County Road Commissoners is up to standard, in fact it is so poor in quality that most of those who travel over the road think they are navigating a sea of yellow clay. We are pretty positive that if Governor Groesbeck knew the condition of the gravel that went into our roads here he would not only protest loudly but he would forbid such deals being put over the taxpayers. After paying upwards of six thousand dollars per mile for a road through this village and extending east which was to be built of good gravel and have a hard surface we find we are obliged to admit the new street is not as good today as the old one which was torn up. We have not much time to inquire of the chaps who advocated the new road so hard last year "what is the trouble?" But we are positive these gentlemen will hardly be able to render a satisfactory excuse.

The Farmer

The farmer today suffers not only from low prices, but from the high cost of production. What he sells is low and what he buys is high. His dollar is below par. This is especially true of the farmer in the interior, where the greatly increased freight charges stand between him and his market. The wheat farmer suffers most. During the war, the Government held down the price of wheat to a lower level than other commodities. It insisted on greatly increased acreage. The resulting over-production has added much to the farmers difficulties. Conditions with him are not normal so long as he is not able to exchange his day's labor with all other kinds of labor. He is entitled to a fair wage and a reasonable return on his capital. He is not getting it. Credit schemes alone will not save him from bankruptcy. He must have a market for his products at a fair price. In the recent presidential message he is told to help himself. The Government apparently is cold towards him and turns from directions where he may be benefited. Co-operation, of course, would aid him, but co operation of millions is a difficult thing after all. The innumerable agents and experts of the Government should aid the farmers in effecting co-operation among themselves, but there should also be effective co-operation of the government with the farmer. Nothing could be more disastrous to our nation than the continuance of the demoralization of our leading industry, for the sake of Don't fail to hear Rev. W. W. Pickering of Jonesville in his address on "Southern Negroes" at the Congregational church Monday evening, April 14, at 7:30, This is expected to be one of the many interesting programs given at the Parent Teachers meetings.

Mrs. M. N. Wolcott was the victim of a well planned surprise which was carried out on Monday evening when about a dozen friends appeared to help her celebrate her birtheay anniversary, Cards and a bountiful pot-luck supper were pleasant features of the occasisn.

At the town meeting Monday Adams township voted $5,000 for the upkeep of dirt road and no new road fund was voted. The township has suddenly got wise and its about time. The county and the state should build the roads but the taxpayers should see to it they don't get stung by the county officials who sometimes want to build roads most any way—most any day—of most any material,just so its a road.

Something has hit the big factories in the cities as last week thousands of men were laid off an indefinite time. At the high cost of living in the cities this means a serious blow to the men now idle. Many of them will be forced to retrace their footsteps back to the farm. In the large automobile industries only about half the regular force is working. This is campaign year and naturally will have a tendency to stop some of the wheels of progress. It has been done before for a cause and this may be a repetition of bygone campaign years—Camden Advance.

Death of Nelson J. Scovil

Jehial Scovil died at his home in this village on Tuesday at about midnight after an illness of five weeks, although his health has been poor much longer than that. He was 66 years of age in March and is survived by the wife and one son, Harold of New York.

Funeral services were held from the home on Friday (to day) at 1:00 p. m Rev. W. W. Gray officiaing and interment was in Oak Grove cemetary, Hillsdale. He has been a resident of this village about eight years and was known as a good neighbor, an upright citizen and a good husband. Pall bearers were Alfred Haight, Geo. Walworth, R. I. Holkins, and Forest Weaver.

Come in and subscribe

It is surprising how snddenly the roads become hard after the usual wet storms at this time of the year. Last week the road to Hillsdale via the Nethaway school was found to be quite dry, and the floating and scraping which is being given the highway adds materially to its welfare. Prospects are excellent for a real first class road into Hillsdale this summer on Bacon street road. We understand operations will begin on the grade of the Angling road just as soon as the highway work is finished near Nashville where Contractor Hoffman's outfit is now scheduled. The man who invented concrete highways did this nation a valuable service and now if another wise guy should appear and invent a cheaper price for this commodity, our salvation will have been accomplished. At the present high figure for concrete work the average tax payer ruefully rubs his jounced-up flank and "ruther guesses" he'll continue to ride a'la gravel or a'la mud as the case may be, and will continue to be for a few years in this vicinity, or until contractors get a heart anyhow.

Tell us not in mournful numbers that this town's on the bum; rouse up from your peaceful slumbers; get out and make things hum. If we go to work in earnest we can make things hit on high; "dust thou are, to dust returnest," is a song of by and by. All the past is done forever—you can't call one moment back—and the future may come never, this is true, so help me Mac Now's the time to do your boosting chances gone. Lay aside your hammer, grab a horn and toot a few: squelch the kicker's dad blamed banter with a joyful blast or two. This old town is sure a pippin and we ought to boost it big; when we hear some growler yippin, we should smite him on the wig. Mighty oaks that grow and flourish came from acorns plain and small; with your boosting you may nourish something that may help us all; something that may prove a blessing to the toiling sons of men—that's the point that I am stressing boost and boost—then boost again. People love the smiling booster, and for him they loudly cheer, but they hate the knocking rooster, long to pelt him in the ear. Boost your country and your business, boost the people in your town, they will dub you wise and witty, and you'll gain a wide renown.

Obituary

Rudolph Geo. Lindenschmidt Son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lindenschmidt was born Nov. 30th 1894 at Saline Mich. departed this life April 2nd 1924 aged 29 years 4 months and 2 days. He spent the greater part of his life in and about this vicinity until July 22nd 1918 when he began serving his country in the world war. He served 11 months in Bourges France and on Aug 19 1919 was honorably discharged from the service. He was a member of the Leighr A. Wright Post No 53. American Legion of Hillsdale Mich. He leaves to mourn their loss a father and mother and one sister Mrs. D. O. Reed of Toledo Ohio and a host of friends.

Election in Adams Township

This year for some reason the interest in politics has been decidedly strong and we are glad the ladies turned out to the polls on Monday. The results of balloting shows conclusively that a lot of old stand-patters have experienced a revival and figuratively speaking are now on the mourner's bench. The Democrats with some assistance succeeded in electing two men. otherwise the palm as usual, went to the Republicans Reid Shepard was elected supervisor and Mert Wolcott swung in to the treasurer's job by exactly two votes. The Republican opponent of Mr. Wolcott, Howard Newman, an ex-service man, put up a hard scrap by his record but evidently the voters forgot the khaki, at least they didn't respond. Shepard's majority was 65. It is hardly necessary to give the number of votes cast except to say the handsome ballot rolled up by Ernest Burd (Republican) highway commissioner, of 298 shows the real effect of a job well done, uninfluenced by politics, klans, lodges or any other human agency except genuine satisfaction.

It is significant however, that after the ballots were counted a fiery cross burned in the usual location. Guess who burned it?

In Somerset township the Democrats got supervisor, Clerk, Treasurer, Highway commissioner, Overseer, one board of review; In Moscow there is a hodge podge with a Republican Supervisor, highway commissioner, overseer, justice, board of review, three constables; another change of heart. Wheatland township only put up a Republican ticket.

Electric Plant Out of Commission

The electric power plant of Avis & Son at Hudson was suddenly put on the hummer Tuesday by the collapse of a heavy flywheel on the engine while running. These heavy chunks of iron practically wrecked the power house, the switch board and most of the machinery. Fortunately no one was injured but our village was without lights until Wednesday night. The damages we understand, will amount to several thousand dollars and some time will elapse before repairs are finished but Avis & Son are on the job with the tenacity of an English bull dog and doing everything in their power to set the wheels in motion.

Most Northern Section

The most northern part of the United States proper is 100 miles in Beltrami county, Minnesota, on the northwestern shore of the Lake of the Woods. This tract is completely separated from the state of Minnesota by the lake and cannot be reached by land without traveling over Canadian territory. It came into the possession of the United States through a geographical error in the treaty of Paris signed in 1783, the original surveyors believing that this territory was south of the forty-ninth parallel instead of north of it.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Harlan Fiske Stone of New York Is Selected to Be Attorney General.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S selection for the new attorney general to succeed Harry Daugherty may not please the more "progressive" of the western Republicans, but it is likely to meet the approval of the party generally and probably of the country. Harlan Fiske Stone of New York is the man chosen, and in him Mr. Coolidge believes he has found what he required for the place—an authority on law and an able executive. Mr. Stone and the President are lifelong friends and both are graduates from Amherst. For fourteen years Mr. Stone was dean of the Columbia university law school, and he is a director of many corporations, including the Atlanta and Charlotte Air Line railway. He is a big, forceful and able man, and Mr. Coolidge relies on him to give the Department of Justice a thorough housecleaning.

Politics, geography and factions were disregarded in this choice of a new chief law officer, but the Coolidge campaign managers believe it will prove to have been good politics. They call attention to the President's sympathy with the ideas of the western progressives as evidenced in his offer of the navy portfolio to Judge Kenyon, and it is now asserted in Washington that the Coolidge supporters would be more than willing to have a western progressive nominated for vice president. The men most talked of for that place are Judge Kenyon, Senator Borah and Senator Capper. Moreover, it is said Mr. Coolidge wants one of that group named for temporary chairman of the Cleveland convention to make the keynote speech. Mr. Stone visited the executive office Wednesday and was introduced to the administration leaders.

SHARP admonition to the majority leaders in the senate and house by the President brought on an access of activity in pushing vital legislation toward enactment. In a series of conferences with those leaders he made known his attitude, which was reflected in a statement by Senator Watson of Indiana:

"Now that Attorney General Daugherty has seen fit to resign," Mr. Watson said, "a new situation presents itself in the senate. It seems to me that it is the duty of the Democrats to join with the Republicans to bring the senate back to its legislative functions.

"It has been regrettable, although unavoidable, that four months of this session—with the most constructive legislative program before it of the reconstruction period following the war—have been devoted almost entirely to the endless discussion of personalities involved in the oil leases and alleged misdoings in public office.

"The senate must devote itself untiringly if it hopes to conclude consideration of the legislative program and adjourn by June, which we ought to do. The general prosperity of the country would be aided by congress enacting its program without delay so business can adjust itself to new conditions called for in new laws."

The senate finance committee worked day and night on the tax reduction bill, on which the leaders of both parties profess to wish speedy action. Early in the week the committee unanimously approved the house provision for a retroactive reduction of 25 per cent in taxes on 1923 incomes paid in 1924, and it is considered certain that the senate will accept this. The taxpayer will pay one-half of the next installment, due June 15, and three-fourths of each of the last two installments. If the tax has been paid in full a refund of one-fourth will be made the taxpayers. Of course numerous changes in the house bill were made by the committee, mainly for the purpose of raising additional revenues. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon read to the committee a long argument for the elimination of the increases in rates on estate taxes in the house measure and the elimination of the gift tax. His recommendations were followed, and new excise taxes were added on radio and mah jongg sets.

THOUGH public interest in the various investigations in Washington died down somewhat after the resignation of Harry Daugherty, the "probers" went right on with their inquiries. The Daugherty committee obtained some evidence from H. M. Peck of Oklahoma City, a former special assistant to the attorney general, supposed to indicate that Daugherty and Fall aided the Miller brothers of the 101 ranch in defrauding the Ponca Indians of land and possible fortunes in oil. Then came Capt. H. L. Scaife, a former Department of Justice agent, who has been once before heard and frequently mentioned in the inquiry. He told a long story about war-time graft, especially in the aircraft industry, and implicated Secretary of War Weeks, Daugherty, Guy D. Goff, former assistant attorney general, and Charles Hayden, a Boston banker and director of the Wright-Martin Aircraft company, all of whom, Scaife declared, should be indicted for "conspiracy to obstruct justice" in failing to prosecute the aircraft company for alleged graft. He also denounced former Attorney General Palmer and T. L. Chadbourne, a New York lawyer, both Democrats. Captain Scaife bolstered up his accusations with numerous letters and documents. He said he worked up these war-graft cases but was called off by the higher-ups.

Thomas F. Lane, former legal adviser to the aircraft division of the War department, testified that his copies of reports on aircraft frauds had been taken from his desk and he had been discharged because he was going to appear before the committee. Captain Volandt of the air service admitted taking the papers and said Secretary Weeks had them. Thereupon, Mr. Weeks was subpoenaed and went before the committee Friday to explain his connection with the prosecution of the aircraft graft cases.

AL JENNINGS' sensational story about Jake Hamon and the Republican nomination of 1920 having been shot full of holes, the Teapot Dome committee did not find a great deal to do last week. J. E. Dyche, who was a confidential man for Hamon, said Jennings' testimony was "bunk." He said Hamon was not in the habit of giving away his money but was a great "kidder" and might have told the stories of huge expenditures when talking to Democrats. Dyche's evidence, by the way, did not shed much luster on the purity of Oklahoma politics.

George White, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, was on the stand Wednesday and Senator Spencer, Republican, insisted on getting from him testimony concerning the Democratic campaign fund, though Senator Walsh contended it was irrelevant. They bickered over this for a long time and then White was permitted to say that Edward Doheny's contribution was $34,900, and not $75,000, as Doheny himself had said. The committee adjourned for the week, awaiting the presence of William Boyce Thompson, chairman of the Republican finance committee in 1920.

Harry Sinclair was indicted by the grand jury for contempt of the senate in refusing to testify. He pleaded not guilty and gave bond of $5,000.

SOME Democrats in the senate started a move to try to force the resignation of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon on the ground that he is a stockholder in various concerns, but Senator Reed of Pennsylvania vigorously defended the secretary and Senator Robinson and other Democrats declined to support Senator McKellar, who led the attack, so it virtually collapsed. Senator Dill of Washington then came to bat with a resolution calling for the resignation of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy. This did not seem a very popular move, even with Democrats, and at this writing no action has been taken on it.

WISCONSIN'S Republican primaries were easily won by Senator LaFollette, whose vote was about twice that given Mr. Coolidge. The President, however, will get several delegates from that state. In the Democratic primaries Gov. Al Smith of New York defeated McAdoo. Smith says his name was entered without his consent or knowledge.

AS WAS expected, General Ludendorff was found not guilty of treason in connection with the Munich "beer-cellar putsch" of last November, by the Munich court. Hitler, Kriebel and Weber were convicted and received sentences of five years in prison. Their actual time of service will be short. Ludendorff protested the sentences of his comrades. He was greeted with vociferous cheers and will be elected to the reichstag by the radical nationalists known as the German People's Party of Liberty.

FRANCE, which persists in considering Germany the loser in the World war, and insists that Germany should carry out her pledges in the treaty of Versailles, was not unnaturally peeved by a note delivered to her last week by the German government. It was in reply to the demands of the allied council of ambassadors that the allied military control mission be permitted to resume its activities in Germany to check up on these five disarmament promises by Germany:

Pass laws prohibiting the import and export of war material—make recruiting for the army conform to treaty provisions and suppress the prewar general staff, demobilizing all excess officers.

Surrender all documents relative to war material on hand and the production of war factories at the time of the armistice.

Deliver the balance of war material not authorized by the treaty, especially equipment and uniforms.

Transform factories manufacturing war materials into plants making peace products.

Reorganize the state police (the schupo) into local police forces, with the policemen not receiving military instruction and not living together in barracks like soldiers.

Berlin's answer is a refusal to let the mission ascertain whether these pledges have been carried out, a statement that the allies and Germany should negotiate an accord covering that, and a proposal that the League of Nations handle future questions concerning the disarmament of Germany in its general dealings with world disarmament. The note contains a direct challenge to France's right to maintain a large army.

The committee of experts on German resources in foreign lands estimates that 8,000,000,000 gold marks ($2,000,000,000), has been hidden by Germany in other countries. The Dawes committee's report has been given to the reparations commission. Chancellor Marx of Germany has warned the world that it is not certain Germany will accept this report and Premier Poincare has gone no further than to express the hope that the committee would be able to offer "elements of a solution."

AFTER an all-night session the British house of commons rejected the policy of a capital levy, which was the chief plank of the Labor party in the recent elections. John Robert Clynes, government leader in the house, admitted the laborites could not hope for the passage of such a measure in the present parliament, but maintained the country would ultimately be forced to it by its crushing burden of debt. The government evaded inevitable defeat in connection with the recent bill by consenting to revision of an eviction clause.

ARGENTINA began on April 1 a most extraordinary experiment in the form of a law by which everyone in the country, citizen or foreigner, who has worked for 25 years, for himself or others, is retired on a pension amounting to his present salary. Those with years yet to serve must pay 5 per cent of their salaries into a national pension fund, from which the rewards to the elder workers are paid. Employers must augment the general fund by contributing another 5 per cent of their pay rolls. Salaries of workers are to continue during sickness or other disability.

Grotesque Pictures in Church in Heligoland

Heligoland, in the North sea, in common with all other places, has its Sunday character. Steamers arrive as usual, the theater is open and all occupations are continued as on other days.

But, nevertheless, the day has its peculiarities. Like the Jewish Sabbath, it begins at sundown.

On Saturday evening there is no dancing on the island. On Sunday morning the little church is filled with devout worshipers.

It is a curious little building of the Seventeenth century. On the front side of the gallery, which runs around three sides, is a series of odd and sometimes grotesque illustrations of scripture stories.

The chief charm of these pictures, the painter of which was never famous, is his determination to make his meaning clear to the most casual observer.

One picture boldly represents Satan in the temptation of Christ, with a regular wood leg having a round knob at the end, instead of picturing him with the conventional cloven hoof.

Fear "Bird of Disaster"

Superstitious folk in the Baltic states are alarmed over the appearance of the silk-tailed winter thrush, known as the "bird of disaster." They say that the birds were thereabouts in the winter of 1812, preceding Napoleon's Russian campaign and again in 1914, preceding the great war.

Find Bronze in Copper

Chemical analyses have revealed that much of the so-called bronze found in ancient ruins or monuments is not bronze at all but copper of a rather high degree of purity considering the facilities for smelting the metal in those early days. This is especially the case with such objects found in the old Egyptian and Mesopotamian remains. On the other hand the bronze bands from the gates of the palace of Shalmanesir II. are really bronze, containing about 9 per cent of tin. Copper, rather than bronze, seems to have been the earliest used metal. Iron was known to the ancient Egyptians, but was so rare and costly that it was used in jewelry.

Origin of Term "Dun"

Opinion differs as to the origin of the term "dun," used for a missive seeking to collect money. Some maintain it is derived from the French word "donnez," meaning "give," but others claim it comes from the name of Joe Dun, famous as a bailiff in the time of Henry VII, for having collected so many debts. It is said that in those days when a man refused to pay it became a saying, "Why don't you Dun him?"

Michigan Happenings

Demand for rural teachers for next year exceeds the present supply at the Michigan State Normal college at Ypsilanti. Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, head of the rural education department, received a letter recently from the superintendent of schools of Kanawha county, W. Va., stating that that system would be glad to use all the graduates of the Normal college this year. West Virginia alone asks for 150 rural teachers. The total number of students in the rural education department, including 22 specializing in rural leadership, is less than 100.

Proof of publication of the legal notices of the judgment of ouster issued against the House of David has been filed by the state with the secretary of state's department at Lansing and the clerk of the Ingham county circuit court. This step paves the way for the filing of a petition by the state attorney general's department, asking for appointment of a receiver for the Benton Harbor colony. The big legal fight to oust the colony from Michigan then will be under way, according to O. L. Smith, assistant attorney general.

Appeal to United States Court against the Treasury Department ruling that employes of the City of Detroit Department of Street Railways are liable for the payment of an income tax, is to be taken on behalf of the city. An opinion was given the city two months ago, to the effect that employes of the D. S. R., the latter being a self-supporting utility, are liable to payment of the Federal income tax. It was against this ruling that the city sought an appeal before the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the same being denied.

Drastic action against autourban bus operators violating the State truck weight limitation was taken last week when Grand Rapids deputy sheriffs stopped buses and compelled several of the passengers to walk to their destinations or to interurban stations. Operators have threatened to discontinue service because of the enforcement of the ruling which limits some large buses to 19 passengers and others to only five or six.

Hereafter, the minimum bail for prisoners, brought before J. Stanley Hurd, United States Commissioner at Detroit, will be $2,000. In making this announcement, Mr. Hurd said the step was necessitated by the frequency with which Federal prisoners, particularly of the bootlegging fraternity, have, of late, forfeited the $1,000 bonds under which it has been his general practice to place them while awaiting trial.

Clifford W. Ham, city manager of Gladstone, Mich., and former Pontiac city clerk, has been appointed city manager of Pontiac at a salary of $6,500 a year. The appointment was made by the city commission from a list of 11 candidates. He succeeds Irving C. Brower, who resigned rather than demand at the request of the commission, the immediate resignation of Ike Thurman, ousted chief of police.

A freight car loaded with imported liquor was seized by Federal prohibition agents in the Grand Trunk Railway yards at Grand Rapids. The cargo, valued by Mr. Davis at $20,000 to $25,000, is one of the richest seizures made by prohibition agents in some time. The car was billed from a fictitious firm in Seabright, N. J., to a fictitious person in Grand Rapids as "auto decking."

The Detroit city council has approved the ordinance requiring the vaccination of all dogs against rabies. This action was taken upon request of Dr. Henry F. Vaughan, health commissioner, who presented statistics intending to prove that there is a great danger of persons suffering from hydrophobia as a result of being bitten by dogs at this time.

The lives of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Barlond, of Kalamo Township, near Charlotte, were saved by a book agent who called at their house, looked in the window and saw the two sitting in their chairs apparently sleeping, and then broke in and found the two had been overcome by coal gas. They were taken into the air and revived.

Motorists in the vicinity of Carleton, 10 miles north of Monroe, are riding on free gasoline these days. A tank car filled with gasoline derailed and the car was party upset so that gasoline flowed from it in a steady stream. Residents quickly secured pans, milk cans and other containers and carried it away.

Michigan potato growers lose more than $1,000,000 a year by marketing potatoes of poor quality, according to H. C. Moore, potato specialist for the Michigan Agricultural College Extension Division. "The market demands high quality stock," declared Moore, "and our producers must grow the kind the market wants."

Strictly fresh eggs declined to a record low price for many years in Hillsdale when they were retailed in the open market at 19 cents a dozen.

"First" States In Transport

Texas has the greatest total road mileage, 182,816 miles. New York is first in population, with 10.385,227. Little Rhode Island is first in the ratio between population and Federal aid road mileage, having 3,640 people per Federal aid mile against, for instance, Nevada, which has but 50 people per Federal aid mile of roads. New York is first in taxable wealth, with more than 15¼ billions. New Hamshire claims first place in State revenue from automobile and truck, getting on the average of $25.72 from each. California gives most money to its counties from its automobile license fees, with $3,785,055 to be spent on roads. Pennsylvania gets more per mile in Federal aid than any other State, her takings per mile of Federal aid road being $19,338.

Separate Sheep From Goats To Relieve Traffic

A novel plan is proposed to relieve the traffic congestion in down town Boston, city of narrow and crooked streets. It is to separate cars into "odd" and "even," using the last numeral of the license tag, and allow the "odds" to come down town on "odd" dates, while the "evens" can visit and shop on "even dates,

Naturally, the proposition has met with tremendous opposition on many grounds, to which the proponents of the idea retort that it is better to be allowed down town three days a week than no days at all, and that if something isn't soon done to relieve the traffic situation, a complete prohibition of all auto traffic in the restricted area will result.

What is Boston's problem in an acute stage is the problem of every road in embryo; it is already pressing on the main traveled roads. But the problem on the road can be met by widening the highway; Boston can not widen many of her streets without destroying herself in the process.

The whole matter forms an educational exhibit of the most intense interest and vital import to all who are considering the building of a new road or resurfacing or other improvement of an existing road; that it be built wide enough now, and with sufficient land acquired now, to permit still further widening when the traffic of the future demands it.

State Blue Book For High Producing Cows

Establishment ot a permanent record of performance for the highest producing animals in Michigan cow test associations was announced by the dairy department of the M. A. C. this week.

The new Record of Performance will be open to all cows in regularly organized associations in the state which meet the requirements established as necessary for admission. These requirements, which have been based on figures compiled from the records of more than two thousand testing association cows, are expected to allow the top twelve or fifteen per cent of the association cows to qualify.

The Record of Performance will provide a permanent record for the state's best cows and will stimulate interest in better feeding, better breeding and better "weeding" in the dairy herds of the state, it is said.

The records will be considered part of the cooperative project of the various Michigan cow testing associations (of which there are more than eighty in the state now) and the dairy department at the M. A. C.

The requirements for certificate in the Record of Performance book will be as follows for the association year:

1. Heifers starting record under three years old must produce 280 pounds or more of butter fat. 2. Cows starting record under four years old must produce 310 pounds or more of butter fat. 3. Cows starting record under five years old must produce 350 pounds of butter fat. 4. Cows starting record when five years old or over must produce 400 pounds or more of butter fat. 5. When age is not known cow is to be classed as mature, and must produce 400 pounds or more of butter fat.

University Students Poisoned By Shoe Dye

Several students at the University of Michigan have been seriously poisoned by black dye applied to their shoes. Blood transfusion on two occasions during one night was necessary to save the life of George B. Stanford, of Midland, a sophomore dental student. Other students suffered from the poisoning to a lesser degree.

An investigation started immediately by the University Health Service and the city health authorities disclosed that the substance causing the trouble was nitro benzole, which was contained in black dye manufactured by a Milwaukee concern and used by Ann Arbor shoe repair shops. All stock of the dye on hand has been confiscated and students and citizens have been warned to beware of shoes recently dyed.

The effect of the poison was noticeable within a few hours after the newly dyed shoes were worn, the skin of the feet becoming irritated and the entire body taking on a blue tinge.

The Y. W. C. A. in Hillsdale County is promoting Health Week Apr. 12 to 19. Dr. Elizabeth Allison of the Bureau of Social Education of the National Board is in charge of the work. By talks, demonstrations and examinations, Dr. Allison will inspire her audiences to seek the joys of health. "To cure is the voice of the past, To prevent is the divine whisper of today." Dr. Allison has been in charge of Health Centers in many cities of the United States. That a county Ass'n is to have a similar opportunity is indeed a priviledge. Talks have been scheduled in several places throughout the county as follows, Pittsford Apr. 12; Jonesville, Apr. 14; Hillsdale, Apr. 15; Waldron Apr. 16. Reading Apr. 17 Camden Apr. 19. These meetings are not limited to members of the Association nor to residents of the town in which they are given. All who are interested in the promotion of higher health standards are invited to attend.

Listen In "On Williams"

Those who have radio installed can listen in at Washington and can hear speeches by their congressman. On Wednesday Arthur B. Williams delivered a splendid address over radio on the question of Farmer legislation calculated to assist the rural population of this state. He wouud up his address something like this

"The subject is a very large one. It is important enough to receive the best thought of everyone in a position to exert an influence with reference to it. We must not hesitate to take such action as will insure the prosperity of all our people to say nothing about the contentedness and happiness of thirty million who are now seeking a livelihood from farming. Charity is not asked in behalf of the farmers or do they desire it or would they accept it. They are entitled, however, to the fair opportunities that come with a position of reasonable self-reliance"

Mr. Williams speeches come out over WCAP at Washington and we believe that soon he will be putting out stuff of great value to the farmer.

A Weekly Panorama of Events In the National Capital

The atmosphere at the Capital and the White House is so different these days that the mile trip down Pennsylvania Avenue from the legislative to the executive branch of the Government is like a journey into a new country. On the Hill all is excitement, yelling, cursing and muck-raking that goes with the headlong contest to stir up scandal and apprehend the guilty. The Senate many times has been described as a "mad-house", but in the memory of the oldest inhabitant there have never been times like these. At the White House, on the other hand, all is quiet, peaceful, and serene. There is no noisy hubbub, voices are not raised above a monotone. It is business as usual.

Fire Prevention week will soon be observed throughout the United States. President Coolidge has already drafted a proclamation calling upon all citizens to join together in efforts to cut down the nation's great annual fire loss, and will issue it to the press about the middle of April.

Smedley Butler's signal success during his vacation from the Marine Corps, in cleaning up the city of Philadelphia, has led to a movement to have him try his hand at the National Capital after he is through scouring the Quaker City. There have been several conferences between General Butler and Metropolitan police officials here, but their plans are not matured. The Washington police are being spurred to greater activity by the charges of Congressman Tinkham of Massachusetts that the capital is more murderous and drunken than any other city in the vorld.

The Administration continues to keep the reparations problem at arms length, despite desultory debate in the Senate on international affairs and an occasional move for America to go all the way in aiding Europe. Little is heard on the surface concerening the League of Nations itself, but there is an undercurrent of sentiment for fuller participation by the United States in world affairs, and the issues may be fought out again in the coming presidential campaign.

Prohibition Leaders here declare that their cause has not been hurt by the conviction and imprisonment of William H. Anderson, the New York dry chief, in Sing Sing for forgery. The drys maintain, on the other hand, that a fine chance has been given them to capitalize Anderson's incarceration as a martyrdom imposed by the wet forces which he was fighting.

Politicians of both parties are wondering if the Washington Post, owned by E. B. McLean, has quit the Republicans and turned Democratic. In a recent editorial, the Post lambasted the Republican leaders for not being more militant in defending the party against the attacks to which it has been subjected in connection with the oil investigation and other scandals. The attitude of the Post came as a considerable surprise, in view of its consistent following of Repnblican policies, right or wrong. During the Harding Administration the Post was dubbed the "Court Chronicle" because of its unswerving Republican leanings, but McLean's connection with the oil scandal have apparently caused a change. There was no evidence that McLean ever profited from the dealings of Fall or any of his friends, but the publisher is understood to be peeved at the way his GOP friends deserted him when the Democrats began to make it hot for him.

Creation of a professional diplomatic service in the United States appears likely as a result of the latest transfers and promotions of American ministers and Ambassadors. Many changes have followed the resignation of Richard Washburn Child as Ambassador to Italy. Henry P. Fletcher took Child's place. Under Secretary of State William Phillips was sent to Belgium to succeed Fletcher. Joseph Grew was recalled to Washington to succeed Phillips and Hugh Gibson was sent fromPoland to Switzerland to succeed Grew. All of these diplomats are known as"career men" That is they have made diplomacy their life work, and their appointments and promotions come about now in the regular course of events rather than from political considerations.

Proclamation By President Coolidge

Whereas, it is essential to the continued comfort, welfare, and prosperity of the people of the United States that abundant forests, widely distributed and maintained in a condition of high productiveness, be forever wisely conserved as one of our greatest natural resources;

and

Whereas, because of our constantly increasing need for wood and other forest products, together with our past failure to provide for reforestation, we are drawing upon our supplies of timber four times as fast as they are renewed thru growth

and

Whereas, the most formidabld agency of forest destruction and prevention of reforestation, is fire and, of the fires which annually devastate vast areas, four-fifts are ascribed in origin to human agencies and virtually all may be controlled and made innocuous through prudence, care, and vigilance;

Therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do urge upon the Governors of the States to designate and set apart the week of April 21-27, 1924, as Forest Protection Week, and wherever practicable and not in conflict with State law or accepted customs; either in association or as indivuals all schools, and the press of the land to give common thought to the protection of our forests from fire, to the end that, in the future as in the past, these forests may supply us with wood, protect the purity of our streams, and otherwise serve the people of the United States.

In Witness Whereof. I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 15th day of Feb., in the year of the Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred andforty-eighth.

FARMERS PAYING EXCESSIVE RATES

Spend Millions Needlessly for Interest on Store Credit, Says Department of Agriculture.

BANK RATES THE LOWEST

Department Urges Thrift, Industry and Reliability on Farmers to Win Credit Standing—Bankers Asked to Help.

The cost to farmers of credit from stores is more than 25 per cent when calculated on the basis of a yearly interest rate, while banks charge little more than 6 per cent, says the official report of the Department of Agriculture on its recent survey of farm credit in North Carolina.

"Farmers would profit greatly if they could place themselves in position to borrow from banks and pay their bills with cash," the report continues. "Merchants would be benefited, since they could then give their attention strictly to merchandising and avoid the risk of loss which they now assume. Bankers would also profit, due to the resulting improvement in farmers' financial condition and the increased business which these farmers would give the banks."

A Matter of Habit

Discussing the question as to why farmers rely on store instead of bank credit, the report says that many do so out of habit and do not realize how high the cost of the store credit is.

"There are others, however, who cannot obtain credit from banks," it goes on. "This is often due to the fact that no contact has been established and the farmer's credit rating has not been determined. Banks prefer character and general business ability over any tangible security in making loans. A REPUTATION FOR THRIFT, INDUSTRY AND RELIABILITY IS THE BEST POSSIBLE ASSET FOR A MAN WANTING CREDIT.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122 and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortgage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west, containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

BOURBONISM AS A CAUSE OF STRIFE

BY EVANS WOOLLEN,
President, Trust Company Division, American Bankers Association.

Evans Woollen

The continuance of property-right and the existence of efficient government in this land of universal suffrage depend upon the dominance of sound public opinion. More than anything else we need understanding. We need understanding between those who have and those who have not, between "the better off" and the "worse off"; understanding between those who employ and those who are employed. Understanding between all these is possible but understanding is impossible between the Bourbon and the radical. Accordingly, a contribution on our side to understanding is the avoidance of Bourbonism.

Some of us may well re-examine our conception of property rights. If those who own property and those who are charged with its conservation recognize this fact: That property-right is best defended, not on grounds of tradition, but on grounds of usefulness, there is a chance, through open-minded discussion, for understanding between them and those who vote. On the other hand, with the Bourbon who holds that property-right, unchangeable in all its aspects, is not discussable in any aspect there is no chance for understanding. There is chance for clash. He promotes the class consciousness that is his danger and the danger of those whose business it is to conserve property into the future.

Is it possible, in the second place, that some of us may well re-examine our conception of free speech? Thus also we may help, each his mite, to avoid misunderstanding between Bourbon and radical. Some of us would find ourselves assuming free speech as the right of those who accept the political and social institutions in which we believe. Whereas the fact is, of course, that free speech, short of incitement to law-breaking, is the right of all of us. It is the right of the communist and the socialist as much as it is the right of you and me. If we who believe in our political and social institutions recognize this fact: That free speech, short always of incitement to law-breaking, is the right of those whose ideas we dislike not less than of those whose ideas we like, we promote understanding.

Indeed, let us go farther and say that we had better abate somewhat of our zeal for repressive legislation. Government by jailing can put out the communist and the socialist, but cannot put down communism or socialism. That is the task of those who think straight and discuss generous-mindedly.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON WHAT WOMEN SHOULD KNOW ABOUT MONEY

"When you are as old as I am," said Aunt Emmy to her niece Molly, "I hope there won't be so many widows like Mrs. Strong losing every cent through ill advised investments and having to take any sort of a job to keep body and soul together."

"Why not, Aunty?" inquired Molly. "Widows and orphans have always been victimized."

"They don't need to be," replied Aunt Emmy. "Every day better investment advice is open to women. Now-a-days the banks make their depositors feel that they can go to them with their financial problems. The more women have to do with banks the wiser they become about the disposition of their money. In time women will know enough to look carefully into every investment before they venture, and to question any promises to pay more than a reasonable return. It takes an experienced financier to judge if investment is safe. Women as a rule do not understand the tragedies that lurk around money. They love nice things and naturally want them so they are often led into foolish investments and speculations because they seek to gratify their wishes quickly. The so-called 'sure thing' that pays enormous dividends is usually sure loss.

"Don't think, Molly, that I mean that women should not seek to get the most out of their money. They should. But the way to get the most is to keep it safe. They should seek advice. Properly and conservatively invested at six per cent and the interest re-invested each year, money will actually double itself in twelve years. If you take $5,000 and lay it away it will be only $5,000 to the end of time. If you put it into an ill advised investment—it might all be lost over-night. But if you get good advice and put it to work in a good investment it will be $10,000 in a dozen years."

"I don't think I ever realized so clearly before that women ought to know more about money—I thought it was only for men," said Molly.

"Women are often left on their own resources," said Aunt Emmy. "If they talked with their banks more there would be fewer Mrs. Strongs."—ANNE B. AYMES

Crow Shooting Contest

A big powder company of this country is offering $2500 in merchandise prizes in a threc months crow-killing contest. The Audubon Societies of our country are protesting against the wholesale slaughter of the crow, claiming that while it destroys some corn when it first sprouts, the crow is engaged all the year round destroying the insect pests that are harmful to the farmer.

Gov. Baxter of Maine is out in a vigorous protest against boosting the powder business in this manner. He said this shooting contest would result in destroying most of the birds besides crows, that are not protected by law. They say that any extensive interference with the balance of natural life as Nature has adjusted it is likely to have serious consequences.

Investigation has proved that where one species of wild life, particularly a bird like the crow, that destroys insects, is driven away or killed in large numbers, the insects on which it lives are likely to become pests.

Exposition's Baby Show

Entries for the statewide baby shfw of the Michigan Industrial Exposition are being sent out by the score from the exposition offices in Convention Hall 4484 Cass Avenue, Detroit. The show is open to babies up to 8 years of age. There will be twelve classes with three cash prizes for each class. The show is a part of the physical culture exhibit to be stoged under the direction of Bernarr McFadden, nationally known as a physical rulture authority. It will hot be a show in which beauty is the chief asset, Mr. Mc Fadden has announced. Physical development and geod health will win the greatest number of points A committee of physicians and physical cultue experts will serve as judges. There areno charges in connection witn the contest, as it is being conducted purely as a "better health" event.

See End Of Sodatol

That the Governorment's supply of Sodatol, war salvage explosive made available last year for agricultural blasting in Michigan and other states, may be exhausted by July 1 of this year, is the warning sent out this week by L. F. Livingston, extension specialist in engineering at the M. A. C.

Eighteen million pounds of Sodatol were included in the allotment realeased last year. This amount is expected to last for at least two years, with Michigan farmers taking a generous share of the explosive. Heavy out of the state demand during the present season, however, is said to have brought the supply down to a dangerously low total, which may not last beyond July.

Sodatol is by far the cheapest agricultural explosive ever made available for Michigan farmers, being delivered at around eight or nine dollars a hundred pounds. For this reason farmers of the state are urged to get in on the order at once, in order that they may take advantage of the unusually economical source of supply.

A half million pounds came to Michigan in orders last fall, while an equal amount has already been ordered this spring. County agricultural agents, in both the upper and the lower parts of the state, are pooling orders among their farmers for carload lots and can give anyone information that is interested.

"Never again will Michigan farmers get explosive as cheap as this", says N. A. Kessler, in charge of lower peninsula distribution of Sodatol with the M. A. C. staff. "They musn't let the present chance slip by them".

Current Events From Reliable Sources

Words of wisdom by Pres. Burton At a convocation of the University of Michigan the other day President Burton spoke some plain and pertinent words to students based on recent campus happenings, which these and other young people would do well to take to heart. His address which was heard by 4.000 students and faculty members, has wide appreciation. President Burton's subject was "Marks of a Man." He declared that things have recently hpppened on the University Campus "That should turn red with shame the face of any decent man or virtuous woman." "You have not discovered what life really is" he eaid "or you wouldn't do the things which you now do. We must have students who are men," he declared "They must believe in honesty, plain decency, must be chivalrous, must respect themselves and be industrious. Self-restraint is the first requirement of a student" The thing that counts is how you have lived. A real man is a gentleman.

Referring to some disgraceful outbursts against the presence of women at the University President Burton said: "Whether we like it or not, the co-ed question at the university is settled. As long as we are a tax supported institution the co-eds will be here and we are delighted to have them." But, he added: "If Michigan is to be known for chivalry to women, you women must compel the respect of men The intelligent gentlewoman is infinitely more worth while than the other types of women. The wise man will cultivate the gentlewoman in preference to the other type." And more of the same sort. All right minded people will commend President Burton for his timely words.

Corunna is in the midst of a fight against the wide open Sunday, especially for base ball. Fred Peacock committed to prohibition of Sunday ball, defeated Forrest Perry for the nomination of Mayor in the Union Citizens caucus, but Perry is running as a candidate of the "People's party" in opposition to the so-called "blue laws."

Judge Bartlett of the Detroit traffic court threatens house of correction terms for drunken motorists in spite of protests from some attorneys.

More than 400,000 women in Wales have signed a memorial address to the women of the United States appealing to them "to aid in an effert to hand down to the generations which come after us the proud heritage of a warless world." Three women who fetced the memorial to this country were recently received by President Coolidge.

The amazing news has just been received from Tokio, Japan to the effect that the primary schools in that capital city are now open to christian teaching once a week.

Dr. L'Hospitalier, a French physician, claims to have discovered a serum which creates a distaste for alcoholic liquors. It is made from the patient's own blood and injected back into his veins.

The Turkish government has prohibited everything alcoholic for women and children but legalizes "beer, wine and sweet liquors for men paying taxes, in order to raise revenue.

Because Bruce Armstrong, federal prohibition officer at Chicago refused a bribe of $150,000 offered by a rich liquor ring, his house was bombed recently.

A bill requiring the daily reading of the Bible in the public schools of Kentucky has passed the legislature and received the governor's signature.

The Detroit Council at Acting Mayor Martin's request, has enacted an ordinance to aid in prohibition enforcement. It allows the mayor to refuse near beer licenses on proof of previous conviction of violation and requires landlords to give $1.000 bond for the "good behavior" of tenants.

Miik, Nature's Patent

The dairy farmer should take pride in the fact that he produces such a splendid food as milk. He should consider this an unusual duty and take pride in doing that duty well. When a big life insurance company like the Metropolitan, devotes nearly a whole page in one of the leading magazines to set forth the food values and necessity of milk there can be no other conclusion but that it is the most important food for human beings. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in its advertisement, says in part:

"There are times now and then when all feel a little below par. If instead of rushing for a bottle of Dr. Bunkum's Tonique to brace us up, we would go to Nature herself for the greatest of all food tonics—milk—we would be a different lot of men and women.

Milk is Nature's patent the only food she ever made solely for food. It cannot be produced artificially. Only Nature herself can so blend all the elements of a well balanced diet as she has in milk.

Milk sounds like patent medicine when all its virtues are catalogued. It is the oldest prescription in the world—Nature's prescription for the building of strong healthy bodies, Nature's revitalizer, Nature's maker of rich red blood, Nature's nerve quieter, an antidote for that tired feeling.

If milk were put up in bottles of a different shape and size, if it were given a fanciful name and announced for what it really is as the greatest body builder and health restorative in the world, people would flock to buy it at fancy prices.

If the dairyman of this country had as much enthusiasm for their product as the writer of this advertisement, we would need more cows to produce an adequate supply of dairy products.

Grade Crossing Psychology

When ill people will spend weeks or months in bed and money for doctors, nurses and medicine with the hope of saving life.

But, judging from the number of grade crossing accidents, many of them placc their life in imminent peril by dashing across the track in front of the fast moving train and even into the train rather than lose 10 seconds waiting for a train to pass. The pyschology of this is not discernable. It is evident however, that not grade crossings but carelessness in effecting a crossing, is the seat of trouble. Many devices have been installed for protection of the public at grade crossings but the most effective safeguard is for driver of autos to stop, look and listen. North Carolina enacted a law requiring autos to stop before crossing and in the 6 months this law has been in operation, in spite of increase in registered autos grade crossing casualties on the principal railway systems of the state were reduced 50 per cent, fatalties being 4 instead of 8, injuries 11 instead of 22. When it is considered that such a law is intended to safeguard the drivers of autos against injury or death at crossings, it would seem that above all others, should favor its enactment.

If the "stop law" effects a reduction in North Carolina, how much greater would be the saviug of life from passage of a similar law in all states.

Michigan is in the midst of the banner maple sirup season and we hear most every day of quantities of the sweet being shipped to cities were it sells at most any figure the manufacturer cares to ask. Certified sirup should be the order here in order to raise the quality. There are several grades put out and these have a tendency to injure the reputation of southern Michigan sirups in general.

OPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES

Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not

These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota.—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headaches, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, down-hearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for some time before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness."—Mrs. O. M. Ring, Box 106, Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes

Camden, New Jersey.—"I take great pleasure in writing you this testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicines for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial."—Mrs. J. Rich, 322 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

"A PRETTY DRAMA"

SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin. Binkus has received a letter from Washington to be carried across the ocean, and Jack sails with him. Arriving in England, Binkus is arrested, but Jack has the letter and proceeds to London. Jack delivers the papers to Franklin in London. Binkus is released and joins them in the great city. Jack orders fashionable clothes.

CHAPTER VI

The Lovers.

The fashionable tailor was done with Jack's equipment. Franklin had seen and approved the admirably shaped and fitted garments. The young man and his friend Solomon had moved to their new lodgings on Bloomsbury square. The scout had acquired a suit for street wear and was now able to walk abroad without exciting the multitudes. The Doctor was planning what he called "a snug little party." So he announced when Jack and Solomon came, adding:

"But first you are to meet Margaret and her mother here at half after four."

Jack made careful preparation for that event. Fortunately it was a clear, bright day after foggy weather. Solomon had refused to go with Jack for fear of being in the way.

"I want to see her an' her folks, but I reckon ye'll have yer hands full today," he remarked. "Ye don't need no scout on that kind o' reconnoiterin'. You go on ahead an' git through with yer smackin' an' bym-by I'll straggle in."

Precisely at four thirty-five Jack presented himself at the lodgings of his distinguished friend. He has said in a letter, when his dramatic adventures were all behind him, that this was the most thrilling moment he had known. "The butler had told me that the ladies were there," he wrote. "Upon my word it put me out of breath climbing that little flight of stairs. But it was in fact the end of a long journey. It is curious that my feeling then should remind me, as it does, of moments when I have been close up to the enemy, within his lines, and lying hard against the ground in some thicket while British soldiers were tramping so near I could feel the ground shake. In the room I saw Lady Hare and Doctor Franklin standing side by side. What a smile he wore as he looked at me! I have never known a human being who had such a cheering light in his countenance. I have seen it brighten the darkest days of the war aided by the light of his words. His faith and good cheer were immovable. I felt the latter when he said:

"Mrs. Hare gave me her hand and I kissed it and said that I had expected Margaret and hoped that she was not ill. There was a thistledown touch on my cheek from behind and turning I saw the laughing face I sought looking up at me. I tell you, my mother, there never was such a pair of eyes. Their long, dark lashes and the glow between them I remember chiefly. The latter was the friendly light of her spirit. To me it was like a candle in the window to guide my feet. 'Come,' it seemed to say. 'Here is a welcome for you.' I saw the pink in her cheeks, the crimson in her lips, the white of her neck, the glow of her abundant hair, the shapeliness of brow and nose and chin in that first glance. I saw the beating of her heart even. I remember there was a tiny mole on her temple under the edge of that beautiful, golden crown of hers. It did not escape my eye. I tell you she was fair as the first violets in Meadowvale on a dewy morning. Of course, she was at her best. It was the last moment in years of waiting in which her imagination had furnished me with endowments too romantic. I have seen great moments, as you know, but this is the one I could least afford to give up. I had long been wondering what I should do when it came. Now it was come and there was no taking thought of what we should do. That would seem to have been settled out of court. I kissed her lips and she kissed mine and for a few moments I think we could have stood in a half bushel measure. Then the Doctor laughed and gave her ladyship a smack on the cheek.

"'I don't know about you, my lady, but it fills me with the glow of youth to see such going on,' he remarked. 'I'm only twenty-one and nobody knows it—nobody suspects it even. These wrinkles and gray hair are only a mask that covers the heart of a boy.'

"'I confess that such a scene does push me back into my girlhood,' said Lady Hare. 'Alas! I feel the old thrill.'

"Suddenly Solomon arrived. Of course where Solomon is, one would expect solecisms. They were not wanting. I had not tried to prepare him for the ordeal. Solomon is bound to be himself wherever he is, and why not? There is no better man living.

"'You're as purty as a golden robin' he said to Margaret, shaking her hand in his big one.

"He was not so much put out as I thought he would be. I never saw a gentler man with women. As hard as iron in a fight, there has always been a curious vein of chivalry in the old scout. He stood and joked with the girl, in his odd fashion, and set us all laughing. Margaret and her mother enjoyed his talk and spoke of it, often, after that.

"I dressed and went to dine with the Hares that evening. They lived in a large house on a fashionable 'road' as certain of the streets were called. It was a typical upper class, English home. There were many fine old things in it but no bright colors, nothing to dazzle or astonish you like the wooden Indian in war paint and feathers and the stuffed bear and high colored rugs in the parlor of Mr. Gosport in Philadelphia. Every piece of furniture was like the quiet, still-footed servants who came and went making the smallest possible demand upon your attention.

"I was shown into the library where Sir Benjamin sat alone reading a newspaper. He greeted me politely.

"'The news is disquieting,' he said presently. 'What have you to tell us of the situation in America?'

"'It is critical,' I answered. 'It can be mended, however, if the government will act promptly.'

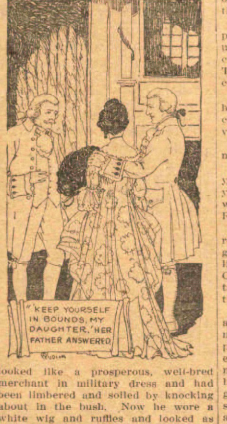
"'What should it do?'

"'Make concessions, sir, stop shipping tea for a time. Don't try to force an export with a duty on it. I think the government should not shake the mailed fist at us.'

"'But think of the violence and the destruction of property!'

"'All that will abate and disappear if the cause is removed. We, who keep our affection for England, have done our best to hold the passions of the people in check, but we get no help from this side of the ocean.'

"Sir Benjamin sat thoughtfully feeling his silvered mustache. He had grown stouter and fuller-faced since we had parted in Albany when he had looked like a prosperous, well-bred merchant in military dress and had been limbered and soiled by knocking about in the bush. Now he wore a white wig and ruffles and looked as dignified as a Tory magistrate.



"KEEP YOURSELF IN BOUNDS, MY DAUGHTER,' HER FATHER ANSWERED.

"In the moment of silence I mustered up my courage and spoke out.

"'Sir Benjamin,' I said. 'I have come to claim your daughter under the promise you gave me at Fort Stanwix. I have not ceased to love her and if she continues to love me I am sure that our wishes will have your favor and blessing.'

"'I have not forgotten the promise,' he said. 'But America has changed. It is likely to be a hotbed of rebellion—perhaps even the scene of a bloody war. I must consider my daughter's happiness.'

"'Conditions in America, sir, are not so bad as you take them to be,' I assured him.

"'I hope you are right,' he answered. 'I am told that the whole matter rests with your Doctor Franklin. If we are to go on from bad to worse he will be responsible.'

"'If it rests with him I can assure you, sir, that our troubles will end,' I said, looking only at the surface of the matter and speaking confidently out of the bottomless pit of my inexperience as the young are like to do.

"'I believe you are right,' he declared and went on with a smile. 'Now, my young friend, the girl has a notion that she loves you. I am aware of that—so are you, I happen to know. Through Doctor Franklin's influence we have allowed her to receive your letters and to answer them. I have no doubt of your sincerity, or hers, but I did not foresee what has come to pass. She is our only child and you can scarcely blame me if I balk at a marriage which promises to turn her away from us and fill our family with dissension.'

"'May we not respect each other and disagree in politics?' I asked.

"'In politics, yes, but not in war. I begin to see danger of war and that is full of the bitterness of death. If Doctor Franklin will do what he can to re-establish loyalty and order in the colonies my fear will be removed and I shall welcome you to my family.'

"I began to show a glint of intelligence and said: 'If the ministers will co-operate it will not be difficult.'

"'The ministers will do anything it is in their power to do.'

"Then the timely entrance of Margaret and her mother.

"'I suppose that I shall shock my father but I cannot help it,' said the girl as she kissed me.

"You may be sure that I had my part in that game. She stood beside me, her arm around my waist and mine around her shoulders.

"'Father, can you blame me for loving this big, splendid hero who saved us from the Indians and the bandits? It is unlike you to be such a hardened wretch. But for him you would have neither wife nor daughter.'

"She put it on thick but I held my peace as I have done many a time in the presence of a woman's cunning. Anyhow, she is apt to believe herself and in a matter of the heart can find her way through difficulties which would appall a man.

"'Keep yourself in bounds, my daughter,' her father answered. 'I know his merits and should like to see you married and hope to, but I must ask you to be patient until you can go to a loyal colony with your husband.'

"It was a pleasant dinner through which they kept me telling of my adventures in the bush. Save the immediate family only Mrs. Biggars, a sister of Lady Hare, and a young nephew of Sir Benjamin were at the table."

CHAPTER VII

The Dawn.

Franklin, whom Jack saw the next day, liked not the attitude of the baronet.

"He is one of the king's men on the big chess board," said the old philosopher. "All that he said to you has the sound of strategy. I have reason to believe that they are trying to tow us into port and Margaret is only one of many ropes. Hare's attitude is not that of an honest man."

Only three days before the philosopher had had a talk with North at the urgent request of Howe, who, to his credit, was eager for reconciliation. The king's friend and minister was contemptuous.

"I am quite indifferent to war," he had cynically declared at last. "The confiscations it would produce will provide for many of our friends."

It was an astonishing bit of frankness.

"I take this opportunity of assuring your lordship that for all the property you seize or destroy in America, you will pay to the last farthing," said Franklin.

This treatment was like that he had received from other members of the government since the unfortunate publication of the Hutchinson, Rogers and Oliver letters. They seemed to entertain the notion that he had forfeited the respect due a gentleman.

A few days after Franklin had given air to his suspicion that the government party would try to tow him into port three stout British ships had broken their cables on him. An invitation not likely to be received by one who had really forfeited the respect of gentlemen was in his hands. The shrewd philosopher did not think twice about it. He knew that here was the first step in a change of tactics. He could not properly decline to accept it and so he went to dine and spend the night with a most distinguished company at the country seat of Lord Howe.

Some of the best people were there—Lord and Lady Cathcart, Lord and Lady Hyde, Lord and Lady Dartmouth, Sir William Erskine, Sir Henry Clinton, Sir James Baird, Sir Benjamin Hare and their ladies were also present. Doctor Franklin said that the punch was calculated to promote cheerfulness and high sentiment. As was the custom at like functions, the ladies sat together at one end of the table, Franklin being seated at the right of Lady Howe, who was most gracious and entertaining. The first toast was to the venerable philosopher.

The dinner over, Lady Howe conducted Doctor Franklin to the library, where she asked him to sit down. There were no other persons in the room. She sat near him and began to speak of the misfortunes of the colony of Massachusetts Bay.

Lord Howe joined them in a moment. He was most polite.

"I am sensible of the fact that you have been mistreated by the ministry," he said. "I have not approved of their conduct. I am unconnected with those men save through personal friendships. My zeal for the public welfare is my only excuse for asking you to open your mind. The plan is now to send a commission to the colonies, as you have urged."

> "Your lordship, I am not looking for rewards, but only for justice."

INTUITION OF WOMAN IS SWIFTER THAN IS MAN'S

Sir Humphrey Rolleston, president of the British Royal College of Surgeons, verifies the observation that in women instinct is highly developed, says a London letter in the New York Evening Post.

"Women," declared Sir Humphrey the other day, "have in a more developed degree than men the power of rapid perception or intuition, allied to second sight and clairvoyance, or of arriving at a correct solution of a problem per saltum. Apart from its potential use and application in research, this faculty of arriving immediately at a correct opinion, without the process of conscious ratiocination, resembles the clinical instinct born of long years of experience, and is no doubt a function of the unconscious which is so invaluable in diagnosis. Hospital sisters often have this power, and when re-enforced by a more extensive training, it should be an asset to woman doctors.

While the average woman student was superior to the average man, the best woman students were not so able as the best men.

Mesdames M. Kempton and L. B. Eggleston were in Hillsdale on Tuesday to attend a Presbyterian missionary meeting at the home of Mrs. James McIntosh.

Jonesyille farmers are again very much interested in the culture of cucumbers to be grown for the Wilson Packing Co. this season. Extensive contracts have been made with this company and the farmers seem to think cucumbers are about the most profitable crop with least risk they can handle. We understand a large acreage is to be planted this spring.

The annual meeting of Alpha Chapter No. 288 was held in Masonic hall on Tuesday evening, April 8th. There were reports of committee chairmen, secretary and treasurer. Election of officers resulted as follows: Worthy matron, Alice Holkins; worthy patron, Arthur Holcomb; a. m., Etta Corey; sec., Josephine Jones treas. Myra Beecher; conduct., Grace williams; a. c. Grace Doolittle. Installaticn will be held at the May meeting. Tuesday, the 13th.

There was a good attendance at the Womans Club held at the home of Josephine Jones on Monday April 7th. A pot luck dinner was served to the members of the club and their husbands. The following program was given: Roll call was responded to by April fool jokes. Current events Gladys Williams; paper, "Our Agricultural Products" Lois Holcomb; paper "Our native birds" Eva Wolcott; music for the afternoon was furnished by Lois Holcomb who gave a piano solo. The next meeting occurs Monday, April 21 at the home of Anna McFarland.

M. C. Rogers secretary of the Jackson Oil and Gas Company was in town on Tuesday and made the Advocate a call. Mr. Rogers is very optimistic regarding the new oil field near Deerfield which his company is working. They have one producing well drilled and one more almost completed. The Osseo Oil Company has been absorbed by this firm and arrangements will be made soon to probe the stubborn glebe near Osseo hoping to develop the possibilities of oil there. There are a number of stockholders in this vicinity and all are feeling quite encouraged at the oil possibilities at Deerfield. As before stated in this paper the oil will rise to the surface and shoot out several feet in the air after being left for a few hours. The indications are that pumping will bring a steady flow. Mr. Rogers states his opinion that the Osseo venture stopped too soon and should have gone deeper than 1400 feet, in fact he thinks the real Trenton rock lies twice that depth below the surface. As we understood it the company has several leases in and around Deerfield and Napelon and at Osseo. Most any good citizen would be very glad to see Hillsdale County's fields developed because it means wonderful growth and a boom to any country. From indications it would seem the Napoleon bunch know the A. B. C. of the oil business and are not likely to meet the same obstruction which came to the Osseo company. Whoop'er up. Boys!

FITTING BANKERS FOR THEIR WORK

Financial conditions are rapidly increasing the demand for trained men and women. This demand is met by the American Institute of Banking, the educational section of the American Bankers Association, organized in 1900. It was originally an association of clerks, but since 1908 its membership has included bank directors, officers and clerks. From a few hundred the institute's membership has grown steadily to a figure in excess of fifty-two thousand. It is not conducted for profit. It has chapters in more than one hundred and fifty of the country's largest cities. Its class enrollment of nearly thirty thousand is greater than the combined registration of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, the University of Chicago and the naval and military academies at Annapolis and West Point. It offers instruction in banking practice, economics, commercial law, negotiable instruments, credits, accounting, bonds and investments, public speaking, and kindred subjects designed to fit the banker for his work and enable him to fill well his place in his community.—Clarence R. Chaney, President American Institute of Banking.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

After a survey of the premises of a farmer in Virginia it was found that the housewife, to obtain water for her work, was walking 140 miles a year and expending enough energy to do the work of two horses in plowing eleven acres of land. A small hydraulic ram, overhead storage tank, kitchen sink, and waste pipe were installed at a cost of about fifty dollars, putting running water into the kitchen.

Marsh Maze reports the find of a chunk of iron ore on his farm near Osseo. Marsh has not only got iron but he claims to have oil and as soon as the Jackson County Oil Company commences operations in that vicinity, you can expect things to happen. Marsh owned at one time the most famous gravel pit in Southern Michigan with the only real sure-enough gravel in this vicinity and if it could have been moved inside the corporation of North Adams would have been worth exactly $50,000.

The youth of today has kept pace pace with the amazing scientific progress of the age, according to Frank Cody, superintendent of Detroit schools, and nowhere has he shown his mental alertness more than in the fields of radio and aviation. What school children have done in the building of radio sets and model airplanes will be shown in the exhibit of the Detroit school system at the M. I. E., May 3 to 17. How school children are trained in various vocations also will be demonstrated. The school exhibit is one of numerous eductional features of the exposition, which will be held in Convention Hall, Detroit.

The practice of hunting and killing migratory waterfowl from airplanes continues to some extent, but wherever violatione ot this kind are reported every effort is being made to apprehend and convict the person reponsible for the illegal act Eighteen cases involving hunting of migratory waterfowl from airplanes have been obtained since the migrators bird treaty act regulation became effective. The most recent one is a case against an aviator who killed a number of wild geese over the Mississippi River in January. The case was brought to court by a game warden employed by the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Death of Mrs. Wellington Lawrence

Mrs. Minnie F. Lawrence aged 45 years, died at her home in Adams township Saturday morning last. She had been ill for some time and death was due to a complication of diseases.

She is survived by the husband three children, Anne. Edward and Samuel, the father, W. H. Davis of Indiana, two brothers, Wm, Davis of Lansing and Phillip Davis of Toledo; two sisters, Mrs. Hazel McCloskey of Milwaukee Indiana and Mrs. Bessie Shuster of Toledo.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 at the home, conducted by Rev. W. W. Gray of the Methodist church and interment was in Locust Corners cemetery.

Death of William H. Read

W. H. Read who has been a resident of North Adams about 20 years passed away at the hospital in Hillsdale about midnight on wednesday evening from pleurisy and heart failure. He had been ailing more or less for some time but not incapaciated for labor. The first of the present week he was working but finally quit and went home where he grew rapidly worse. He was at once taken to the Hospital but did not rally. Deceased was 77 years of age and leaves beside the widow, two sons Henry and Ernest of Detroit, two daughters, Mrs. Lew Crittenden of Burton, Ohio and Mrs. Flora Case of Seattle, washington, two sisters in Ohio.

Mr. Read was a highly respected citizen and a good man. Earlier in life he was engaged as a contractor in delivering mail and acted in this capacity four years at Detroit and eight years in Cleveland.

Funeral services will be held at the Congregational church at 2:00 p. m. next Sunday and interment will be in the mausoleum at Oak Grove cemetery, Hillsdale.

Last Sunday the Methodists of Marshall dedicated their handsome new church which cost upwards of $105,000 and is the finest in Marshall, Bishop Henderson of Detroit was present and called for a donation of $10,000 which was nearly all raised. Ralph Wooton is the pastor at Marshall and his success in raising the necessary funds is proverbial. However the rock bottom fund for the building was donated by an old war-horse in Methodism, Dr. Brooks of the Brooks Truss fame whose picture you will see in most every periodical in the United States. Mr. Brooks spent his days in Marshall and built up his splendid fortune by means of printers ink. He was a trustee of this society for many years.

History of Lent

By H. L. Millis

MILLIONS of followers of the Christian faith over the world are at this season making preparations for the Easter festival, the most important occasion in the Christian calendar.

"If Christ be not risen from the dead, then is our preaching vain," said Paul, and the whole Christian structure rests upon the resurrection as its foundation. Without the resurrection the hope of humanity is gone, for only in a living Christ is there salvation.

The death and resurrection of Christ are primarily involved in the keeping of the Lenten season, which is observed formally by the older branches of the Christian church. The different churches vary in their practices in the observance of the forty days preceding Easter, but the spirit prompting the observance is the same in all. Some of the Protestant churches do not observe Lent, but many ministers find it a propitious time for evangelistic effort, and in recent years some very successful evangelistic campaigns have been waged by Protestants in the large cities during the season of Lent.

The history of Lent has many interesting passages. The severe rules of the fast prescribed in the early days have been greatly relaxed during the centuries, as far as they apply to physical observance.

Since the earliest times in religious history fasting at times has been a custom. The patriarchs had great mournings and the ancient Israelites had devotional fasts for the expiation of sins. Moses passed forty days on Mount Horeb in fasting and after Israel was defeated at Ai, Joshua and the elders remained prostrate before the ark from morning until evening without eating. Christ spent forty days in the wilderness in fasting, but however prevalent the custom it does not appear that either Jewish legislation or Christ Himself, either by command or example, ever designated any certain period for fasting.

* * *

It is certain, however, that the examples of Moses, Elias and Christ exercised a great influence upon the establishment of the Lenten season in the Christian church, and that observance of the period of forty days was evolved from their examples. Modern scholarship rejects the claim that Lent was of apostolic institution, although some of the early fathers contended that it was. While the apostles fasted at seasons and enjoined the practice upon others, the specific Lenten observance was evolved after apostolic times.

In the Catholic Encyclopedia, which is the principal authority upon Catholic history and teachings, some interesting facts are recited about this season, which, whatever its exact origin, has been religiously observed every year for at least 1,700 years.

The word Lent itself is a Teutonic word, which has been in use since the Anglo-Saxon period, and is generally used in preference to the Latin term "Quadragesima," meaning the "Forty days." The forty-day observance of "Lent" is not mentioned by the pre-Nicene fathers, but St. Athanasius of Alexandria, after traveling over Europe wrote in 339 that a fast was generally practiced in Europe and he enjoined upon the Alexandrians to do likewise, "to the end that while all the world is fasting, we who are in Egypt should not become a laughing stock as the only people who do not fast, but take our pleasures in these days."

* * *

As the centuries passed, there was great diversity in the practices of keeping Lent, but from the earliest times there was a prohibition against the eating of meat, and it was deemed especially pious to refrain from eating eggs or fruit with a hard covering. In the beginning there was no prohibition against the "Lacticinia," but St. Gregory in writing to St. Augustine from England laid down the rule: "We abstain from flesh meat and from all things from flesh, eggs, milk and cheese." There were special dispensations for eating these products, however, and many churches were built with the gifts for these dispensations. Thus a steeple in the cathedral at Rouen was known as "The Butter Tower." The custom of giving Easter eggs, so much enjoyed by the children of today, arose from the prohibition of eggs. The eggs were blessed and given to the children.

Although in the early Middle Ages the rules of the fast were very strict, with only one light meal on week days and that in the evenings, and no flesh on Sundays, the rules began to be less rigid a little later. It became the custom to break the fast at three o'clock in the afternoon or the period called "nome." Charlemagne is said to have taken his Lenten repast at two o'clock in the afternoon. Gradually the time was moved up to midday, as nome was a period rather than an hour, and the repast was eventually taken at twelve o'clock, and the word "nome" is perpetuated in our word "noon."

The collation was introduced in the Ninth century when the council at Aix-la-Chapelle sanctioned that concession. It began with allowing in monasteries a draught of water to the inmates at evening after a day of labor. From this the much larger indulgence was developed. The principle that a small quantity of food, but not taken as a regular meal, did not break the fast, was adopted by Thomas Aquinas, the celebrated Dominican theologian, and in the course of centuries taking of food not to exceed eight ounces became recognized as a lawful custom of the church. It took the name of "collation" because it was first taken in the monasteries at the hour at which the "Collationes" of Abbot Cassion were read aloud to the brethren.

* * *

In modern times the Catholic church prescribes rules more lenient, especially for the working people who are not prohibited from eating flesh meat except on Fridays, Ash Wednesdays and Saturday of Holy week, and soldiers and sailors in active service are dispensed from the law of abstinence except on Ash Wednesday, and several other holy days.

Aside from the fasting as an observance of the Lenten season the Catholic church conducts special services at stated times and the fundamental doctrines of the church are preached and other ceremonies carried out. It is the desire that all should refrain from all pleasures during this forty-day period and keep their minds and hearts upon spiritual things.

The other churches that observe Lent dispense with the fast but stress the period as a time for self-examination and prayer, and reconsecration to Christ. Their members also dispense with ordinary worldly pleasures during the Lenten season and observe it as a period of extra religious effort.

LILIES OF THE NILE

A ROW of pulpits ivory white,
And priests in robes of gold
Snowily flecked with rarest lace;
From living green unfold.

A sheaf of waxen lilies lie
On the freshly rounded sod,
Proclaiming immortality
And all things right with God.
—Mary Allen Keller.

RISES AS MAKER ROSE

SEE the land her Easter keeping,
Rises as her Maker rose;
Seeds so long in darkness sleeping
Burst at last from winter snows.
Earth with heaven above rejoices;
Fields and garlands hail the spring;
Shaughs and woodlands ring with voices
While the wild birds build and sing.
—Charles Kingsley.

AFTER AN OPERATION

Mrs. Wilke Couldn't Get Back Her Strength Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rochester, Minnesota.—"I had a very serious operation and it seemed as if I could not get my health back after it. I suffered with pain almost constantly. My sister came to help take care of me, and she was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and a run-down condition. She had me try some of it, and in a very few days' time I began to feel better. In two weeks I hardly knew myself and after taking a couple of bottles more I was up and helping around, and now I am strong and healthy again and am still taking it. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you, and I hope that many other women who are suffering like I was will find out about your medicine. I will give any information I possibly can."—Mrs. JAMES WILKE, 933 E. Center Street, Rochester, Minn.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Wilke.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn Mass.

Foiled Milk Thief

Lige Dodd, farmer, of Ouachita township, Ark., had a cow that was off in her milking. Investigation revealed fresh footprints in the vicinity of the cow barn each morning. Dodd switched a particularly disagreeable mule to the stall, transferring the cow to the mule's stable in the barn. The cow milked well the next morning and Dodd recovered a battered tin pail and a torn hat from the stall occupied by the mule.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Bay City—Oscar C. Delbridge, Flint laborer, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, scheduling his assets at $325 and liabilities at $4,235.

Lansing—Citizens of Lansing voted against all special proposals in the recent election. These included the defeat of a proposition to issue a million dollars in paving and sewer bonds.

Sturgis—Harvey Deam the father of three children, was instantly killed when he was struck by a Pennsylvania train one-half mile south of Sturgis. He was driving a gravel truck.

St. Clair—William H. Sotham, 26 years old, who was gored and trampled by a bull, died from internal injuries. Sotham was walking among his herd of cattle when the bull attacked him.

Detroit—A statement by the Ford Motor Co., announces that retail deliveries of Ford cars and trucks in the United States during the month of March reached a total of 205,735, a record-breaking mark.

Monroe—Voters at the recent election determined not to raise $*00,000 for the purpose of erecting a new county jail and altering and repairing the county courthouse. The proposition lost in every precinct.

Detroit—Patrolman Albert J. Fenk, driver of a patrol, was instantly killed, and Patrolman Robert Munley, signal officer, was seriously injured when the patrol turned over after being struck by a light touring car.

Lansing—The city of Lansing has acquired title to a site at Mt. Hope avenue and Cedar street for the proposed south Lansing high school. Plans are being drawn so that construction can be started at the earliest date possible.

Holland—The municipal roller skating project has proved so successful that it has been found necessary to enlarge the bounds. Two blocks of pavement are roped off each night from 7 to 9 o'clock, for the exclusive use of the skaters.

Detroit—Gustavus D. Pope, president of the Detroit Community Fund, will be one of the four American representatives to attend the third session of the general council of the League of Red Cross societies, to be held in Paris, April 28 to May 2.

Detroit—To provide additional facilities for manufacturing and shipping the Hudson Motor Car company has purchased the site and plant of the Jefferson Forge Products company. The acquired plant occupies a site eight acres in extent.

Bay City—Lawrence Dworek, Arenac county farmer, is dead as a result of a rifle wound. A few days ago while on the porch at the home of a relative he was wounded in the abdomen, and an investigation indicated the shot was fired by boys who were shooting at a target 40 rods away from the house.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Christopher G. Parnall, former director of the University of Michigan Hospital, has been appointed medical director of the Rochester General Hospital, Rochester, N. Y., and consultant for the building plans of the new $5,000,000 hospital and medical school of the University of Iowa.

Port Huron—According to Dr. W. H. Morris, Margaret L. Austin is entitled to the lightweight birth record of Michigan. When she was born, Jan. 5, 1923, she weighed 18 ounces. Recently she weighed 18½ pounds. During the past year the infant has had whooping cough and chicken pox, but is now in perfect health.

St. Johns—Mrs. Anna Skutt, of this city, widow of a Civil war veteran, has obtained a monthly pension of $30 from the Government and in addition, back payments for four years. This sum is swelled by the payment of additional money due her late husband, Peter Skutt, a member of the Fourteenth Michigan infantry during the war.

Lansing—Contracts for seven road projects on M-27 and M-19, and one for drainage and grading, all in St. Clair county, were let on the condition that the low bidders can increase the center thickness to eight inches instead of seven, as originally specified, change the edge to a 10-inch thickness and offer a favorable change in price to conform with the changes.

Lansing—Michigan's highway department, upon the payment of a nominal charge, will supply to hotels and other places where tourists are liable to look for information, a map giving conditions of the roads of the state and the kind of roads upon which the tourist will travel. The map will be changed each two weeks to keep it up to date, and will give the latest possible information concerning road conditions.

Union City—Jacoba's Golden Melia Ann 374745, a Jersey cow owned by C. E. George, of Union City, has recently completed a most creditable record. She started the test as a mature cow and in one year produced 12,903 pounds of milk and 767.47 pounds of butter-fat, on twice a day milking. This Michigan Jersey appeared in the 50 pound list for eight consecutive months and in the second month of her lactation period missed the 90 pounds of butter-fat smash by only .3 of one pound. She has now one tested daughter.

Bay City—As a preventive measure against the spreading of smallpox, Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner, has issued orders that school children in the city be vaccinated. Dr. J. A. Kepo, local health officer, issued orders that any student refusing to be vaccinated would be barred from school and kept in quarantine for a period of 16 days. Dr. Kepo has started the work of vaccinating in the schools. While the condition in Bay City is not considered alarming, everything possible is being done to keep the disease from spreading.

No More "Longhorns"

The day of the Texas "longhorn," the steer famed for its breadth of horn and lightness of body, is past. Today there probably is not a real longhorn in the whole of Texas, not even in Pecos valley, where it made its last stand against the blood of high breeding as practiced by the Northerners who have converted Texas from a raising ground of horns and speed to a home of real beef.

The genuine longhorn weighed but from 600 to 700 pounds, and could race with a coyote. It had descended from the early cattle of the Spaniards, who were the first white settlers of the Rio Grande country and the semi-desert lands of the Southwest. It has been years since a real longhorn has been seen on the plains of Texas.

But the greatest of all longhorns was not killed by man. This steer, a maverick, a lone outcast from his herd, who lived and roamed alone, fell prey to wolves in the Devil's River mountains years ago. His horns are now in San Angelo. These, measuring eight feet from tip to tip, were found by cowboys.

Mighty Waves Seen

Waves of extraordinary height, miscalled "tidal waves," are sometimes encountered at sea or along the coasts. They are due either to earthquakes under the sea or to a combination of several ordinary waves, which if a heavy sea be running, is sufficient to account for a wave of unusual height. Such a one was recently encountered by the British steamship Maine, near the southern edge of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. The wind was rising after a hard blow and an ugly swell about 25 feet high was running. Then a huge wave was seen towering above the other seas, a mile away, and rushing toward the ship. It swept the vessel from end to end, and was estimated by the officers to have been from 50 to 60 feet in height.—Boston Globe.

The Everglades

The Everglades means "Grassy Water." It is the Indian name and it is a good one. There are miles upon miles of flat, grassy land covered with water, usually very shallow and filled with grasses. Now and then there is a "gut" or "slough" (a creek). Now and then, also, there is a big swamp filled with trees. Sometimes you will find a lake all edged with sawgrass. There are little dry spots called "islands" or "hummocks," with trees on them. The water is usually clear, but for the most part has a limpy, slippery taste. There isn't much game in the glades proper, but on the higher land in the vicinity of the glades there are deer, turkey, panther, little black bear, raccoon, fox squirrel, etc., especially in those places that are farthest from civilization.—Adventure Magazine.

Origin of Sodas

It is not definitely recorded just who first suggested ice cream sodas in their present form. Snow-cooled beverages were known to the Jews, ancient Greeks and Romans. It is recorded that in Rome a certain Quintus Maximus Gurgus, nicknamed the Glutton, wrote a recipe for a similar preparation in one of his books.

Southern Michigan Power Co. Suffers Loss

Tuesday, April 8th about a half hour before noon a wheel weighing 12 tons, serving as the balance and belt wheel of the 500 h p engine used to drive the electric generator let go with terrific force in the plant of Avis & Son otherwise known as the Southern Michigan Light and Power Co., and chunks of iron flew in all directions, some being found 500 feet from the plant. Cause of the accident is reputed to be a flaw in the wheel or in the master bearing at the outer end of the main shaft. Fortune intervened for the engineer, Chester Knapp, who had gone into the boiler room previously. Otherwise he would have met death.

The costly switchboard was completely wrecked and driven through the south wall, the generator also received some awful knocks, puting it as well as the engine out of commission. The company at once got out bulletins stating there would be no lights for 48 hours. Material and electricians from Adrian were rushed through by auto and service came on again Wednesday evening. These gentlemen estimate their loss at $25,000 and they carried no insurance against this form of damage.

People who live near the scene of the disaster say that the debris was thrown more than 100 feet high and all marvel that no one was hit by the pieces. Two auxiliary engines situated in the same room at the side were not damaged and they are about the only intact thing left in the place. The citizens of North Adams we are sure will sympathize deeply with Avis & Son and also should much appreciate the promptness of these gentlemen in re-instaling lights after the accident.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind;and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10: 27.

Two aged chiefs of the Mohawk Tribe were sentenced to two months imprisonment after they had been adjudged guilty of stealing the famous Iroquois Wampum Belt from the parish priest of Caughnawaga, Canada. This belt valued at more than $25,000 as a historic relic, was loaned to the chiefs who desired to decipher and interpret certain markings on the belt.

Mr. Waynmann Dixon, the engineer who in 1877 dug up the Cleopatra's Needle which now stands on the bank of the Thames, believes that there is a canal under the Great Pyramid of Egypt. He cites the many allusions to such subterranean waterways found in the works of Herodotus and certain Arabic works, specifically referring to an underground chamber in the hill on which the Pyramid of Cheops stands.

The little French town of Strassburg has been made world famous through its manufacture of goose liver pies, or "pate de foie gras." Some of the families in this section have been raising geese for generations and the many flocks in the roadways oftentimes are a hindrance to pedestrians. An ordinary liver from a fatted goose weighs 1½ pounds and the farmer receives approximately $1.25 a pound.

State Wages War On Forest Fire Losses

Michigan forestry specialists are lining up with a national movement to aid in checking the tremendous annual fire losses in the country, by calling attention to dangers and preventive measures in the national Forest Protection Week, designated by President Coolidge as April 21 to 27 this year.

More than 36,000 forest fires are reported in the United States every year, according to the forestry department at the M. A. C. and an average of about eleven million acres are swept by flames. This loss is borne by the whole country, and not by any one class or kind of business, for every citizen is a consumer of timber,

Up to the present time, fire alone has destroyed more timber than the loggers have cut, say the college specialists. And today the United States is using up her hardwood forests four times as fast as they are now growing. While the softwoods are being cut 8.5 times faster they are growing.

The land covered by forest fire each year is equivalent to a strip ten miles wide reaching from New York to Denver, Colorado. This area is eight times the average destroyed in France by the World War.

That cooperation of the people of the state is necessary if these losses are to be prevented in Michigan, is the opinion of the forestry men. Camp fires which are not put out, cigar and cigaret stubs, and matches thrown carelessly into the dry brush are prominent among the causes of forest fire. All fires discovered should be reported promptly to the proper authorities.

Set New Production Record For Jerseys

A new Michigan production record for junior two year old Jersey cows has just been set, after the former record had stood for ten years. You'll Do's Golden Rostelle, owned by Samuel Odell, of Shelby, Oceana County, is the new champion.

The new record for one year's production is 10,607 lbs. milk and 669.38 lbs. butterfat. The former state record holder in this class was Corinne of Roycroft, who set the mark in 1912.

Ex-Mayor is Taken for Booze-Runner

Over at River Rouge, a suburb of Detroit the police are unable to distinguish the difference between a regular "booze toter" and the ex-officers of the city, as it seems Kirby Wilson, ex-mayor of the town was held up by the police Monday afternoon last week on the busiest corner while the sleuths searched feverishly for the "goods" hut found nothing very suspicious. The wrath of Mr. Wilson was exceedingly dangerous to behold, and it is said he lashed the officers cruelly with his tongue. A hundred or more passersby jammed about the car as this happened and alltogether it was growing quite hot when the police found out who the victim was. They apologized as best they could but told Mr. Wilson that good clothes and respectable appearances never lifted suspicion for one minute—in fact most anyone might be apprehended for toting the vile stuff for they had arrested men who looked like ministers of the gospel, flappers clergymen and drivers of hearses who all turned out to be "bootleggers and had the stuff right with them.

After a while it developed that some of Wilson's friends had pointed out his car to the police as a rum runner's outfit, and gradually the joke dawned upon Wilson. He understood at once the whole thing was a sell. 'Twas a neat little joke bur might have been very costly for some men.

Michigan Climate Favors Potato Men

Michigan potato growers are unusually fortunate in regard to climatic conditions which are favorable to the growing of quality crops of tubers, according to to H. C. Moore, extension specialist in potato work at the M. A. C.

"Climate is one of the most important factors in growing a good crop of potatoes", says Moore. "The potato demands a fairly cool, moist growing season for its best development, yield and quality both being impaired during hot, dry seasons.

"Due to its location with respect to latitude and proximity to the Great Lakes, practically all of Michigan has sufficiently cool growing seasons for satisfactory potato production, while in many of the northern sections of the state the temperature conditions are nearly ideal.

"Rainfall is often a limiting factor in potato production but most sections of the state generally have sufficient rainfall during the growing season to produce satisfactory yields. It is estimated that it requires approximately 650 tons of water per acre to produce a 200 bushel yield. A rainfall of six to seven inches between planting time and harvesting would furnish the estimated amount of water.

"Good cultural practices, of course, must be observed throughout if the grower is to accomplish quality production, even with favorable climatic conditions."

Notice to Users of Electric Service

The Southern Michigan Light and Power Co. experienced the most disasterous accident they have ever had during their thirty–four years of business in Hudson.

By some unknown cause the fly-wheel of our big 500 h. p. engine which was our main generating unit, gave way, letting loose about 15 tons of iron which was traveling at the rate of over a mile a minute, taking everything in its path. Engine, belt and electric generator were completely demolished, our Switchboard with all the electrical instruments and regulating devices costing us many thousands of dollars being driven through the south wall of the building. The loss of our Switchboard meant much to us as it left us without any means of using our auxiliary power. We are now operating under temporary means and just as quickly as new switchboard instruments and panels can be obtained, they will be installed. We will be greatly handicapped in the progress of the work on account of not being able to shut off service while making the changes. There will necessarily have to be some interruptions in service which we cannot avoid but will endeavor to make these interruptions of as short duration as possible and at a time that will least inconvenience the most of our patrons.

We believe anyone who saw the wreck at our Power Plant Tuesday fully appreciates what it means to have 100 per cent in reserve to take care of such an emergency. for had we not had this users would have been without electric service for months, for it will take that length of time to replace the unit destroyed. We are now left, however, without any further reserve and should one of our present engines fail, part of the service would necessarily have to be out until we could get it repaired, the length of time depending upon the nature of the break. Continuous service without any reserve is very uncertain and almost impossible.

Having nearly all the material on hand for the construction of our new transmission line to Adrian and Morenci, which lines when completed will give us the opportunity of securing power from either of these towns, thereby giving us a new dependable reserve to fall back on. Therefore every possible effort we can put forth will be made to complete this line at the earliest possible date which we believe we can do sooner than we can get delivery and install a new steam unit. It is our intention however, to also replace the unit which was destroyed, although we had no insurance covering same.

We hope you will bear with us in the necessary interruptions caused while replacing switchboard and lack of reserve until we can secure same,

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital

The Long-Promised Republican counter offensive against the persistent and pungent Democratic search for scandal at last is under way. Spencer of Missouri is leading the Republican defense in the oil investigation, while Wadsworth of New York, Fess of Ohio and other Administration leaders have turned their guns on the Democrats and are fighting at every step.

Spencer's First real effort took the form of an examination of John Walsh, brother of Senator Walsh of Montana, who was reported to have aided the committee in some of its inquiries into the stock market operations of Goverment officials. John Walsh revealed nothing to the committee, but it marked the turning of the tide.

Even Robinson the Democratic leader in the Senate, has denied responsibility for some of the assaults on Cabinet members, at the same time calling on his colleagues among the minority to forsake their inquisitoral function long enough to get some much needed legislation out of the way. The immediate result was that movements for the dismissal of of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt have not proceeded with the expected momentum.

Judge Kenyon's Failure to get the Attorney-Generalship has led to renewal here of talk of his avaiability as Coolidge's running mate in the presidential campaign Republicans of the "progressive" school are strong for Kenyon, of course, and they would like to put him in the Vice-Presidency this year so that he would be in line to succeed Coolidge in 1928. This same element believes that the President made a mistake in not appointing Kenyon to succeed Daughtery. They point to his widespread popularity in the Middle West, which contrasts sharply with the comparative obscurity of Harlan Fiske Stone, the President's choice.

Senator Norris's Constitutional amendment to move the date of the inauguration of the President up to the first of January, thereby driving out of Congress at the end of the calendar year all the Senators and Congressmen who have been defeated at the polls, appears to be on its way to passage. It is pointed out in this connection that when the Constitution was written there were good reasons for the latter inauguration date in order to give the incoming President ample time to get to Washington, but that modern methods of transportation have made the delay unnecessary. The Norris amendment has passed the Senate and will be acted upon at an early date in the House.

The New Radio legislation has aroused more interest than tax reduction. Not only the manufacturers of apparatus and the commercial radio companies, but thousands of broadcast listeners are bombarding the House Merchant Marine Committee with advice and suggestions as to the turn the new regulations should take. Some objections have been raised to the proposal to vest the Secretary of Commerce with complete control over the radio in the United States. Thus far, Herbert Hoover has been the reliable guardian of the ether, but fears are expressed that at some time a Secretary of Commerce might come in who would not be so friendly. It is probable that Congress will decide to set up a new federal commission to regulate and supervise radio communication.

As to tax reduction, no one in authority is prepared to say when the country is actually going to have its tax bill reduced. Revenue revision was the cardinal point in the President's annual message to Congress, but so many conflicting views have arisen on the subject, that the tax bill is moving along very slowly, Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee has served notice, however, that if the bill is not enacted by the irst of June, Congress will have to come back after the national conventions to finish the job.

He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase; this is also vanity. When goods increase they are increased that eat them; and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?—Ecclesiastes 5:10-11

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS

Yep, This is Right!

There is no doubt of the fact that we have, as a nation, spent a great many dollars for road miles we have never seen and never will see. Building the wrong kind of roads, building roads in the wrong locations, allowing roads to be built by those who know nothing of the work are a few of the means we have used to spend an enormous amount of money for comparatively little improved road.

There is less and less of this wasteful policy of road building every year, of course. We Americans learn rapidly by experience although we are slow to learn the one fact which every bunco steerer, grafter, dishonest politician and spell-binder knows as his gospel the fact that we are the most gullible and cheatable people on earth. But even this fact is beginning to pale on some of the tax payers.

Aviators Guided By Roads

"When Oklahoma places a tax on gasoline to build highways and then tries to collect from aviators, good nature reaches the limit, according to the heads of an aviation company who plan to form a state-wide organization to protest the payment of such taxes by airmen.

The legislature raised the retail sale tax on gasoline from one cent a gallon to 2 1-2c. The aviators point out that they derive no benefit from the roads and do not help to wear them out."

With all due respect to the airplane company and the aviators, it is suggested that this is about as short-sighted and narrow a policy as a business house engaged in the building and marketing of aeroplanes could well formulate!

What guides the aviator in umfamiliar surroundings? The roads! What roads are visible at great heights? Good roads. What roads are invisible at great heights? Narrow unimproved roads. When an aviator has to descend at a flying field, what does he need most? Transportation to food and lodging, in a motor car over good roads! When an aviator has to make a forced landing where does he go for help? To a telephone, at the nearest farm house, which is located on the nearest good road! These are special interests which the good road has for the aviator and the airplane manufacturer. But both have even larger interests in the general benefit of good roads. For both depend on the prosperity of the country for their success which increases with every increase in transportation and decreases with every setback of transportation.

When the trolley car was first invented the steam roads fought it as a competitor. Now they run it in interurban service because the more people travel the more they want to travel. When the good road and the auto truck first began to carry freight the railroads fought them as competitors. Now railroads run trucks for short-haul freight and help good roads. because the more people travel, the more they want to travel!

The airplane user and maker begin as did the railroads; they must end. as the railroads have ended, helping the good road because the good road will help the airplane maker and user.

The foregoing dope is put out by some enthusiasts at Washington whose zeal leads to brainstorms and their propaganda for better roads while commendable, leads to a heavy brain pressure to discover an original theme for an editorial. For the want of funds to buy roads they are drawing from every source and the next jump will be to tax the bootlegger, for he surely needs good roads to transport liquid hell! As a matter of fact the aviator and the aeroplane has a little less connection with a road than an undertaker would have officially with a wedding! But of course we all must have our hobbies.

Arbor And Bird Day Proclamation

Arbor Day signifies but one thing, the day on which a tree should be planted. In the past it has been the custom of many schools to observe the day by planting trees. Except the commendable observance of educational institutions, Arbor Day has meant but little to our citizenship.

Every human is a lover of trees. In the lands where trees do not grow naturally, tireless efforts are made by inhabitants to grow them because there is something about their sturdiness and beauty that appeals to every race.

In this wonderful State where trees grow without the slighest cultivation, why not make ArborDay of 1924 the beginning of an effort to plant a million trees in Michigan before the spring is over? If every school would not only plant one tree but many, if every home owner would plant both fruit and shade trees, if county highway officials would place along the roads young trees and if the various communities would make the day one of general tree planting, Michigan could easily have one million more trees growing when the spring gives way to summer sun.

Not only should we plant trees on Arbor Day and at every suitable time thereafter, but we should check the cutting of young pines. There are thousands and thousands of acres of land in Northern Michigan suitable only for tree growing. It is the purpose of the State as far as possible to replace the forests taken from this land but the State cannot accomplish the complete restoration it hopes for without the assistance of its loyal citizens. It is a duty this generation owes to the future to see to it that depleted forests are restored. The idle land of the north, now of little value to the commonwealth because of its non-production, can in another score of years again become a vast forest of untold value, providing the various units that go to make this great commonwealth join with the State in a great tree-planting campaign, beginning with Arbor Day.

Michigan has always been regarded as one of the scenic places of America because of its trees, lakes and streams. Let this generation not only restore the devastated forests but add to the natural attractiveness of the State by planting the right varieties of trees in the right places.

With forests and wooded places we associate the wild life that we are so energetically endeavoring to save and restore, so it is entirely proper that Arbor Day also be designated as Bird Day. Protect and save the feathered beauties. Nothing gladdens one more than the beautiful song of a tree-hidden bird.

It is with pleasure, therefore, that I hereby designate Friday May 2, 1924, as Arbor and Bird Day, and earnestly urge that the date mark the beginning of the greatest tree planting campaign ever conducted in any State.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this ninth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty four, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-eighth.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 23rd day of July 1914, made and executed by Fred D. Britten and Elizabeth V. Britten, husband and wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto William A. Wagner, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 23rd day of July, 1914 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan, in Liber 150 of Mortgages on page 618, which said mortgage was by said William A. Wagner on the 25th day of July, 1914 duly assigned to the Hillsdale Savings Bank, a body corporate, of Hillsdale, Michigan, which said assignment of mortgage is of record in the office of the register of deeds of Hillsdale county in Liber 149 of Mortgages, on page 122 and which said mortgage was later by said Hillsdale Savings Bank, on the second day of May, 1919, duly assigned to Eliza H. Day of Hudson, Michigan, which last mentioned assignment of mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale, in Liber 161 of Mortgages on page 148, which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors or other parties in interest to make payments of the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure to pay the interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and also in failure to pay taxes assessed against the premises in said mortgage described, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principle and interest at this date the sum of Thirty-One Hundred Eighty-Eight and Sixteen Hundredths ($3188.16) Dollars, and also an attorneys fee as provided by statute, and by said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 19th day of May, 1924 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Hillsdale, County of Hillsdale and State of Michigan, [said court house being the place for holding court in said county] sell at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon: and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by law, and the terms of said mortgage. The premises described on said mortgage, and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice, are described as follows; all those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Allen, in the county of Hillsdale state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit; the north one half of the south one-half of the northwest one quarter of Section 13, township 6 south, range 4 west, also the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 13, in township 6 south, range 4 west containing in all eighty acres of land more or less.

EXPOSES THREE FINANCIAL FAKES

Politicians Mislead Public Regarding Corporations, Credit, and Railroads, Says F. N. Shepherd.

FALLACIES MET WITH FACTS

Declares People Will Make Short Shrift of Those Who Deceive Them When Aroused to Truth of Own Interests.

Three great misrepresentations, by which certain politicians have advanced their own interests at the expense of public welfare, were recently declared by F. N. Shepherd, Executive Manager, American Bankers Association, in an address at Kansas City, Missouri, to be the oft-repeated statements that "Wall Street" owns the corporations, that the Federal Reserve Banks discriminated against agriculture and deflated the farmers, and that there are seven billion dollars of "water" in railroad capitalization and rates should be reduced accordingly.

What Facts Tell

In regard to the alleged ownership of the corporations by "Wall Street," Mr. Shepherd showed that the securities of American corporations are very widely held by the people. The Union Pacific, he pointed out, has over 50,000 stockholders and the Pennsylvania Railroad 147,000 stockholders, 67,000 of whom are women, with an average ownership of 47 shares each. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has 200,000 stockholders, 120,000 of whom are employees, and the United States Steel Corporation has 174,000 stockholders. According to a recent report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, he said, Class I railroads have a total of 777,132 stockholders, there being, therefore, practically as many owners of shares as there are employees.

"The real capitalists of America," continued Mr. Shepherd, "are these and the bondholders whose funds are invested in securities through their thirty million savings accounts, and through their ownership of over 71 million life and industrial insurance policies. Once arouse these people to the fact that it is their interests which are being attacked through these misrepresentations and they will make short shrift of those who deceive them.

Truth About the Federal Reserve

"As to the Federal Reserve System, instead of its discriminating against the farmer, exactly the opposite is true. During the period of greatest decline in the value of agricultural products, about which there has been so much loose talk, rediscounts with Federal Reserve banks in non-agricultural districts actually decreased by 28 per cent, but in agricultural districts rediscounts were actually increased by 56 per cent. The Federal Reserve Banks of the big cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland poured into other Federal Reserve Banks in agricultural districts literally hundreds of millions of dollars.

"As to the alleged seven billions of 'water' in the railroads, a physical valuation of the railroad properties has been under way for the past ten years, as a result of the La Follette Act, conducted by a body of unprejudiced, non-political experts by whom the valuation has been placed at $18,900,000,000. Although it has been officially stated, and reiterated, that, in arriving at this figure, no consideration whatever was given to capitalization, politically-minded men are still deceiving the public, and particularly the farmers, about the 'water' in the railroads. Railroad stock today is not watered. Any possible fair scheme of valuation today proves that our railroads are worth from one to two billion dollars more than their capitalization.

No Railroad Income Guarantee

"Further, demagogues are telling people that the railroad income is guaranteed. The Esch-Cummins Act does not guarantee any return to railroad stockholders, as the demagogues constantly assert. By its terms the Act simply provides a yard stick for rate making, which is that a fair railroad rate is one which would show a return of 5¾ per cent upon the actual value of the property used in transportation in a given territory.

"This provision bears no relation whatever to railroad capitalization and, moreover, no relation to individual railroads, some of which might show earnings under such a rate-making provision in excess of six per cent, and some much less. No consideration whatever is given in the Act or in the administration of the Interstate Commerce Commission to railroad capitalization or any return upon it."

MIDDLEMAN'S PROFITS.

Words of objection on the part of the farmer against the middleman often are in vain, but the farmer who raises on his own acres all that his table requires, the year round, places himself in a position where he is largely independent of the middleman. Often the remedy for many objectional conditions lies in our own hands.

"A MEAN CUSS"

SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin. Binkus has received a letter from Washington to be carried across the ocean, and Jack sails with him. Arriving in England, Binkus is arrested, but Jack has the letter and proceeds to London. Jack delivers the papers to Franklin in London. Binkus is released and joins them in the great city. Jack orders fashionable clothes. Jack and Margaret meet and are more in love than ever, but Colonel Hare is not eager for the marriage. Franklin's efforts to obtain better treatment for the colonies are futile. He evades the attempt of the king's men to "tow him into port."

Then said Lady Howe: "I wish, my brother Franklin, that you were to be sent thither. I should like that much better than General Howe's going to command the army there."

A rather tense moment followed. Franklin broke its silence by saying in a gentle tone:

"I think, madame, they should provide the general with more honorable employment. I beg that your ladyship will not misjudge me. I am not capable of taking an office from this government while it is acting with so much hostility toward my country."

"The ministers have the opinion that you can compose the situation if you will," Lord Howe declared. "Many of us have unbounded faith in your ability. I would not think of trying to influence your judgment by a selfish motive, but certainly you may, with reason, expect any reward which it is in the power of the government to bestow."

Then came an answer which should live in history, as one of the great credits of human nature, and all men, especially those of English blood, should feel a certain pride in it. The answer was:

"Your lordship, I am not looking for rewards, but only for justice."

"Let us try to agree as to what is the justice of the matter," Howe answered. "Will you not draft a plan on which you would be willing to cooperate?"

"That I will be glad to do."

Persisting in his misjudgment, Howe suggested:

"As you have friends here and constituents in America to keep well with, perhaps it would better not be in your handwriting. Send it to Lady Howe and she will copy it and return the original."

Then said the sturdy old Yankee: "I desire, my friends, that there shall be no secrecy about it."

Lord and Lady Howe showed signs of great disappointment as he bade them good night and begged to be sent to his room.

"I am growing old, and have to ask for like indulgence from every hostess," he pleaded.

Howe was not willing to leave a stone unturned. He could not dismiss the notion from his mind that the purchase could be effected if the bid were raised. He drew the Doctor aside and said:

"We do not expect your assistance without proper consideration. I shall insist upon generous and ample appointments for the men you take with you and especially for you as well as a firm promise of subsequent rewards."

What crown had he in mind for the white and venerable brow of the man who stood before him? Beneath that brow was a new type of statesman, born of the hardships and perils and high faith of a new world, and then and there as these two faced each other—the soul of the past and the soul of the future—a moment was come than which there had been no greater in human history. In America, France and England the cocks had been crowing and now the first light of dawn of a new day fell upon the figure of the man who in honor and understanding towered above his fellows. Now, for a moment, on the character of this man the unfathomable plan of God for future ages would seem to have been resting.

In his sixty-eight years he had discovered, among other things, the vanity of wealth and splendor. It was no more to him than the idle wind. These are his exact words as he stood with a gentle smile on his face: "If you wish to use me, give me the propositions and dismiss all thoughts of rewards from your mind. They would destroy the influence you propose to use."

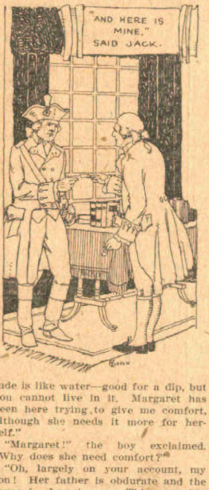
The old gentleman climbed the great staircase and went to his chamber, while Lord Howe was, no doubt, communicating the result of his interview to his other guests. There were those among them who freely predicted that war was inevitable.

CHAPTER VIII

An Appointment and a Challenge.

Solomon Binkus had left the city with Preston to visit Sir Jeffrey Amherst in his country seat, near London. Sir Benjamin had taken Jack to dine with him at two of his clubs and after dining they had gone to see the great actor Robert Bensley as Malvolio and the comedian Dodd as Sir Andrew Aguecheek. The Britisher had been most polite, but had seemed studiously to avoid mention of the subject nearest the heart of the young man. After that the latter was invited to a revel and a cock fight, but declined the honor and went to spend an evening with his friend, the philosopher. For days Franklin had been shut in with gout. Jack had found him in his room with one of his feet wrapped in bandages and resting on a chair.

"I am glad you came, my son," said the good Doctor. "I am in need of better company than this foot. Solitude is like water—good for a dip, but you cannot live in it. Margaret has been here trying to give me comfort, although she needs it more for herself."



"AND HERE IS MINE," SAID JACK.

"Margaret!" the boy exclaimed. "Why does she need comfort?"

"Oh, largely on your account, my son! Her father is obdurate and the cause is clear to me. This courtship of yours is taking an international aspect."

"I only fear that I may not be able to provide for her in a suitable manner," said Jack.

"Oh, you are well off," said the philosopher. "You have some capital and recognized talent and occupation for it. When I reached Philadelphia I had an empty stomach and also a Dutch dollar, a few pennies, two soiled shirts and a pair of dirty stockings in my pockets. Many years passed and I had a family before I was as well off as you are."

As Jack was saying good night to his venerable friend the latter remarked:

"I shall go to Sir John Pringle's in the morning for advice. He is a noted physician. My man will be having a day off. Could you go with me at ten?"

"Gladly," said Jack.

"Then I shall pick you up at your lodgings. You will see your rival at Pringle's. He is at home on leave and has been going to Sir John's office every Tuesday morning at ten-thirty with his father, General Clarke, a gruff, gouty old hero of the French and Indian wars and an aggressive Tory. He is forever tossing and goring the Whigs. It may be the only chance you will have to see that rival of yours. He is a handsome lad."

Doctor Franklin, with his crutch beside him in the cab, called for his young friend at the hour appointed.

The office of the doctor baronet was on the first floor of a large building in Gough square, Fleet street. A number of gentlemen sat in comfortable chairs in a large waiting room.

"Sir John will see you in a moment, sir," an attendant said to Doctor Franklin as they entered. The moment was a very long one.

At last the door to the private room of the great physician creaked on its hinges with a kind of groan and he came out accompanied by a limping patient.

"Wait here for a minute—a gout minute," said Franklin to his young friend. "When Pringle dismisses me, I will present you."

Jack sat and waited while the room filled with ruddy, crotchey gentlemen supported by canes or crutches—elderly, old and of middle age. Among those of the latter class was a giant of a man, erect and dignified, accompanied by a big blond youngster in a lieutenant's uniform. He sat down and began to talk with another patient of the troubles in America.

"I see the d—d Yankees have thrown another cargo of tea overboard," said he in a tone of anger. "This time it was in Cape Cod. We must give those Yahoos a lesson."

Jack surmised now that here was the aggressive Tory general of whom the Doctor had spoken and that the young man was his son.

"I fear that it would be a costly business sending men to fight across three thousand miles of sea," said the other.

"Bosh! There is not one Yankee in a hundred that has the courage of a rabbit. With a thousand British grenadiors, I would undertake to go from one end of America to another and amputate the heads of the males, partly by force and partly by coaxing."

A laugh followed these insulting words. Jack Irons rose quickly and approached the man who had uttered them. The young American was angry, but he managed to say with good composure:

"I am an American, sir, and I demand a retraction of those words or a chance to match my courage against yours."

A murmur of surprise greeted his challenge.

"I take back nothing that I say," he declared.

"Then, in behalf of my slandered countrymen, I demand the right to fight you or any Britisher who has the courage to take up your quarrel."

Jack Irons had spoken calmly like one who had weighed his words.

The young lieutenant who had entered the room with the fiery, middle-aged Britisher, rose and faced the American and said:

"I will take up his quarrel, sir. Here is my card."

"And here is mine," said Jack. "When will you be at home?"

"At noon tomorrow."

"Some friend of mine will call upon you," Jack assured the other.

A look of surprise came to the face of the lieutenant as he surveyed the card in his hand. Jack was prepared for the name he read which was that of Lionel Clarke.

That evening Solomon arrived with Preston. Jack told them in detail of the unfortunate event of the morning.

"Neevarious!" he exclaimed. "Here's suthin' that'll have to be 'tended to 'fore I take the water."

"Clarke is full of hartshorn and vinegar," said Preston. "He was like that in America. He could make more trouble in ten minutes than a regiment could mend in a year. He is what you would call 'a mean cuss.' But for him and Lord Cornwallis, I should be back in the service. They blame me for the present posture of affairs in America."

"Jack, I'm glad that young pup ain't me," said Solomon. "Thar never was a man better cocalated to please a friend er hurt an enemy. If he was to say pistols I guess that ol' sling o' yours would bu's out laughin' an' I ain't no idee he could stan' a minnit in front o' your hanger."

"It's bad business, and especially for you," said Preston. "Dueling is not so much in favor here as in France. Of course there are duels, but the best people in England are set against the practice. You would be sure to get the worst of it. The old general is a favorite of the king. He is booked for knighthood. If you were to kill his son in the present state of feeling here, your neck would be in danger. If you were to injure him you would have to make a lucky escape, or go to prison. It is not a pleasant outlook for one who is engaged to an English girl. He has a great advantage over you."

MERELY SIGNING NAMES BUSINESS OF ONE FIRM

There is a firm doing business in the heart of the financial district of New York city which the high officials of many banks and large corporations would sadly miss should it suspend operations. What it supplies in the way of automatic assistance in lifting the burden of over and over again writing the "John Hancock" of this and that and the other official upon checks, stock certificates or bonds makes possible a saving of time that sends innumerable desk weary business men to their needed daily recreation upon the golf links, yachts and motor boats or in summer to the baseball parks in time for the first inning, says a New York letter to the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Because of the peculiarly confidential relationships existing with customers, the firm is not after publicity. Nevertheless, the fame of the institution has spread until it is a common thing in Wall street to hear one of the officials say to another: "I sent those debentures over to be signed and expect them back very soon now."

The machines that perform the work have a capacity for 20 signatures at a time. Whatever has to be signed in duplicate is arranged by trained clerks.

Where Bears Live

The black bear is the best-known member of this family in North America. Three of his grand-uncles live in northern latitudes, the white polar bear amongst the ice on the Arctic ocean, the grizzly in the remote fastnesses of the Rockies, and the Kadiak, that giant amongst wild animals, on the islands adjacent to the coast of Alaska. These three species are very much larger than their dusky relative, but are not nearly so harmless and attractive.—Nature Magazine.

The Ideal Road and a Personal Service

During the past few years standards of Concrete road construction have been steadily advanced. This has been made possible largely through the construction and tests of different types of design.

For example consider the Bates Experimental Road built by Illinois. Over a two-mile course, 63 different sections were laid. Three principal materials in wide variety of thickness and combination were employed.

Then fleets of motor trucks were sent over the surface. For many days and nights the loads—a total of 377,460 tons—pounded across that two-mile stretch.

At its completion only thirteen of the original 63 sections had survived. Ten were of portland cement concrete.

The other three had heavy foundations of the same class of Concrete, that had been used without additional wearing surfaces in the first ten.

Properly built Concrete pavement is the most enduring and economical type of road construction known. Skid-proof, rigid, and lowest in maintenance cost, the concrete road is the ideal road.

* * *

The Portland Cement Association has a personal service to offer individuals or communities. This service is designed to give you more for your money—whether you use Concrete or have it used for you.

Our booklet R-3 tells many interesting things about Concrete Roads. Write this office for your copy.

BANKER-FARMER CO-OPERATION

Many Conferences and Practical Measures Are Bettering Farm Situation From Ground Up.

The merits of intermediate and long-time agricultural credit now available, organization and co-operation of producers for balanced production, and orderly marketing are the chief topics of discussion at many banker-farmer conferences being held in various parts of the country with the assistance of the American Bankers Association.

At a Texas Agricultural College meeting representatives of agricultural and livestock associations agreed that there is no such thing as over-production, and that every increase in production should raise the standard of living higher. They saw need for the organization of producers for balanced production and orderly marketing to relieve the stress in agriculture, with credit provided of sufficient time to cover farm and ranch turnover.

Legislation Not Wanted

Further legislative action was not considered appropriate. In fact, there was actual opposition to further government action to assist in economic adjustment, everyone there being in complete accord that conditions were propitious as far as existing institutions were concerned to raise the farmer and stockman to a proper economic place in the business world. The establishment of the Intermediate Credit Bank was declared to be the last step in the provision of necessary agencies of credit, while sufficient opportunity for co-operation exists in present organizations.

The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association was described as a means of co-operation between bankers and farmers and its work explained in bringing bankers in more intimate touch with the actual problems of the farm to develop increased helpfulness.

Banker-farmer conferences have been arranged by the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association at the state agricultural colleges in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Iowa, Illinois, South Dakota, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado, and Wyoming. The Oregon Bankers Association is engaged in the promotion of conferences in an effort to bring about diversified agriculture.

Practical Aid by Banks

Officials of a large Astoria, Oregon, bank are taking an active part in making farming a real business in their community. A group of dairymen wanted to borrow sufficient money to buy a carload of purebred Guernseys. There were practically no purebred Guernseys in the county. These dairymen had little money so they took the matter up with this bank. A letter of credit for $16,000 was given to them immediately on a joint note.

It meant the starting of purebred Guernsey herds in the county and most of the dairymen who purchased the animals have sold enough of the offspring to pay for the original investment. One of the dairymen says. "Had the bank not been liberal in making this loan, the original importation could not have been made and the county would not have at this time the reputation it now has as one of the Guernsey centers of the Northwest."

AGRICULTURE

More than ten millions of our people are actively engaged in agriculture. They comprise 26.3 per cent of all persons over ten years of age engaged in a gainful occupation. Our farms represent more than one-fourth of our total national wealth. The value of our farm products in a single year is 40 per cent of that of our manufactured products—and the latter include many finished items which left the farm as raw material. Thirty-one per cent of all our exports in 1921

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

On Getting Good Investment Advice.

"It seems to me that your mother is making a grave mistake in giving $3,000 to set young Lang up in business," remarked Aunt Emmy, when Helen finished telling her of the wonderful plan Clarence Lang had for starting in business himself. "He is a likeable chap," Aunt Emmy continued, "and very pleasant at parties and such, but if he really were a good business man he wouldn't need his relatives or friends to set him up in business."

"Why not, Aunt Emmy?" queried Helen. "It doesn't take so much money, really, and he can get ahead so much faster. What's the use of being just a clerk if he has real ability?"

"That he has so much ability remains to be demonstrated," said Aunt Emmy. "If he were as competent as he has led you people to believe he is he would have no trouble getting himself financed by men who know the business he desires to venture into. There are any number of clever men who are willing to back ability and who will stand behind a man's achievements, financially, and take their share of the profit for doing it. Before your mother goes ahead she should consult her bank about making such a move."

"I don't see why, Aunty. The money is hers."

"Yes, but she did not earn it. She inherited it and I doubt if she has any real sense of its value. Her bankers know her financial situation and they can advise her."

"Well, I'll tell mother, but I don't think she will like it," said Helen.

The next day Helen's mother came to see Aunt Emmy.

"I took your advice, Emmy," she said, "and called on Mr. Allen at the bank and told him about what I wanted to do for Clarence. Mr. Allen made a lot of things clear to me. First of all he showed me that I am not rich enough to take unnecessary chances. He said practically what you told Helen—that an able man can get business backing in a strictly business way

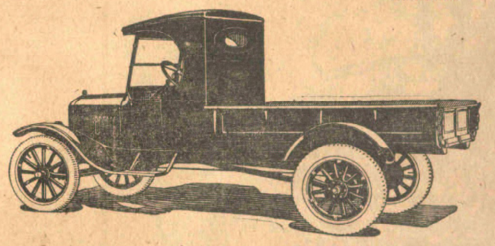
Ford Steel Body Truck $490 f. o. b. Detroit



Why Commercial Users Prefer the Ford

There is much significance in the fact that more than 75% of all commercial cars of one-ton capacity or less in the United States are Fords.

This overwhelming preference for Ford haulage units has its basis in the low cost of Ford transportation, the rugged construction of the truck itself, and its unusual adaptability to every line of industry.

Mechanical excellence, simplicity of design and ample power are further factors that have contributed to the popularity of the Ford One-Ton Worm Drive Truck.

The Ford One-Ton Truck equipped with an all-steel body and cab is now available as a complete unit, priced at $490 f.o.b. Detroit. Screen sides and canopy roof that may be easily fitted to this unit are supplied at small additional cost.
